CHORUS OF 800 VOICES SINGS IN 12TH STREET PLAZA

Several Thousand Persons Hear Musical Program Which Concludes Week's Centennial Festivities.

AUDIENCE JOINS IN FIVE SONGS

Two Soloists Appear and Their Voices Carry to Crowd—Dancing at Close of Program.

Several thousand persons, about 800 of whom were members of the St. Louis Massenchor, a choral society conducted for charitable purposes, braved the chill wind in the Twelfth street plaza, between Pine and Chestnut, last night, and took part in a musical program which was the last important outdoor event in the city's 11-day celebration of the statehood centennial. The temperature was 54 degrees.

The Massenchor is a "massed chorus" of men and women. Its members were grouped on the east side of Twelfth street, facing the replica of the Chouteau house, the men being in the seats of the stand erected on the east side of the street and the women in folding chairs in a semicircle behind Niel Poepping's band. The audience filled the other seats in the single block and a crowd gathered behind rope and bench barricades at each end of the block.

Hugo Anschuetz directed the Massenchor's part of the program, which opened with the rendition by the band of the "Centennial March," written by Noel Poepping, in which the crowd detected a strain of "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here."

Beethoven Charus Number.

The first chorus number was "Nature's Praise of God," the setting of which was by Beethoven. It gave full opportunity for the choristers to exhibit the volume of sound of which they were capable and the audience showed its appreciation. Then Mrs. Karl Kimmel, a soprano, sang "Somewhere." Her voice did not carry far at first, but as she accustomed herself to the conditions her words were easily distinguishable all over the block.

"Pan Americana," by the band, proved to be a catchy collection of melodies of the Latin-Americans. Victor Herbert wrote it. After this the chorus sang two numbers, "My Old Kentucky Home," and "Dixie." Glenn Lee, a tenor, sang "Twilight," his voice carrying well. The prepared program ended with "The Prayer of Thanks," by Kremser, sung by the chorus.

Then the groups at each end of the block were admitted inside the barricades and they hovered around the band. The massed group just filled the space in front of the stage. Herbert Cost took over the direction, turning the gathering into one of community singing. Mrs. Kimmel sang several times the State song, "Missouri," which was written by Mrs. Lizzie Chambers Hull and Mrs. Julie Stevens Bacon. Many copies of the song had been distributed in the crowd, but despite Cost's efforts none but the members of the Massenchor would join in it.

Crowd Sings "America."

After several bars of "America" were played, the community throat decided to disregard the breeze and the community bashfulness, and sang. A police captain snapped into a salute, many policemen followed his example and some of the men removed their hats. The crowd was singing, even though its community voice was not very lusty.

Someone called for "Long, Long Trail." Cost threw off his hat—his overcoat had already been discarded—and fairly danced as he led off. His effort was not unrewarded, and, later, his request for the men to whistle the song was taken up with a will. "Ain't we got fun?" he cried out, and the crowd demanded the popular song of that name. Then they sang "The Star-Spangled Banner," with all the men's hats off. The music had begun at 8:15 p. m. and at 9:45 the gathering was turned into a dance on the asphalt. "Whang Whang Blues" set two or three score couples dancing at once and the dancing continued for some time.

As part of the centennial celebration there will be high mass at the Old Catholic Cathedral on Walnut street at 10 a. m. today and at 3 p. m. a monument to Alexander McNair, the first Governor of Missouri, will be unveiled in Calvary Cemetery.

Lafayette Ball to Be Given in Coliseum Later.

The Lafayette Ball and French fete, which was postponed from Wednesday night because of the rain in the Twelfth street plaza at that time, will be held in the Coli-

WIRELESS BULLETINS ON WORLD'S SERIES RECEIVED IN ILLINOIS

Post-Dispatch Sending Out Reports Through St. Louis U. Wireless Telephone Station.

The Post-Dispatch, through the St. Louis University wireless telephone station, has been sending out bulletins of the progress of the world's series baseball games. The reports are given to the wireless station by telephone about every 15 minutes during the game, or shortly after they are received in the Post-Dispatch office by leased wire from a staff correspondent at the Polo Grounds.

The People's Mutual Telephone Co. of Raymond, Ill., has written to the Post-Dispatch that it is receiving the messages and relays them by telephone to 3000 subscribers. They also post the bulletins outside their offices in 19 small towns.

The State Bank of New Athens, Ill., writes that it receives the wireless reports and posts them in a conspicuous place in the bank window. It also has been giving the news to business firms over the telephone, and has supplied the High School there with bulletins. Moving picture shows are displaying the reports on their screens. Practically the entire community is being informed of the progress of the games.

Haworth Hoch of Webster Groves receives the messages and posts them outside his station, where they are read by a number of persons.

The Post-Dispatch will continue to send out the reports through the St. Louis University wireless station until the series is finished. The wireless code designation of the University station is 9YK.

DRESS MANUFACTURERS PUT APPROVAL ON LONGER SKIRTS

Associated Industries' Directors Accept Idea of Parisian Designers for Spring.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Directors of the Associated Dress Industries of America today bowed to the decree of Parisian designers and indorsed the longer skirt.

"This means that manufacturers of dresses over the country will take up the matter in their respective organizations for individual action," said David N. Mossessohn, executive director, in making the announcement.

"While some manufacturers have been reluctant to divert from the skirt length, which has proven to be popular, they must bend and accept the new edict. It is believed that by spring the new length will be considered established.

DOCTOR ORDERS RUTH TO REST FOR WEEK

Huggins to Use Fewster in Outfield if Infection Keeps Home-Run Hitter Out of Contest.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8. — Today's world's series base ball game was rolled up in a wet blanket at the Polo Grounds and put permanently away early this afternoon. The fourth game between the Yankees and Giants, officially announced as postponed on account of rain, will be played tomorrow, atmospheric conditions permitting.

The Weather Bureau promised the fans fair weather for tomorrow's game, but with a temperature requiring overcoats and sweaters.

More than 20,000 fans had reached the grounds before the rain began to fall at 1 o'clock. The postponement was decidedly unwelcome to the business managers of the series, because of the necessity of honoring rain checks and the other complications in the way of admission ticket arrangements which the disruption of the original schedule brought about.

In the Yankee manager's camp, however, there was no noticeable disappointment over the break in the daily succession of contests. For the forenoon had brought the sad news that the team's most potent aggressive factor, "Babe" Ruth, would not be able to take part in the day's game because of an infected arm. The infection was caused by "Babe's" persistency in sliding to bases on top of a sore near the elbow, the result of a scrape of the flesh suffered in a slide to second plate in the American League season.

Ruth Ordered to Rest for Week.

Ruth was told by Dr. George D. Stewart late today that his arm must be given at least a week's rest. This means that the Yankees' star, if the doctor's advice is heeded, will not appear in the remainder of the world series.

Ruth's arm was injured just above the elbow two weeks ago when he stole second base in a game with the Cleveland Indians. After the game yesterday with the Giants, an incision was made. He carried it in a sling today.

Ruth was at the ball park today, but was not in uniform, and had his bad arm in a sling. He still favors also his strained leg, which has been giving him trouble for some weeks, and sorrowfully said he might not be able to play any more in the series. Should he drop out, Huggins intends to play "Chick" Fewster in left field, putting Fewster in the lead-off position in the batting order, dropping Elmer Miller down to eighth place, and moving Schang up to Ruth's place as third man on the list.

Rest to Benefit Pitchers.

But tomorrow will be another day and Manager Miller Huggins of the Yankees had apparently not lost hope tonight that the champion home-run hitter, with a day's complete rest, would be able to play Sunday with at least a good share of his accustomed aggressiveness.

From the Yankee viewpoint, also, the postponement was welcome as giving Carl Mays an additional day for recuperation after his high-class performance in the opening game Wednesday when he blanked the Giants and started his club off on the two-to-one advantage in the series, which it now holds. It is regarded as certain that, with Mays given his three days' rest, he will be sent in against the Nationals tomorrow.

"Shufflin'" Phil Douglas is likely to pitch for the Giants. Douglas will be benefited like Mays by an additional rest period.

Both Teams Confident.

As for the ultimate result of the series, there is no apparent lack of confidence in either camp. The edge in games is still with the American leaguers, with Mays, their star, ready to work again, and Hoyt on deck for an effort to repeat his winning performance of Thursday.

"We will win, with or without Ruth," is the sentiment of the Yankee players, although they did not attempt to minimize the loss they would suffer should Ruth prove unable to get back into the game. They have been outslugged by the Giants so far, but their followers point to the records as showing that the celebrated Yankee attack never remains long in check and is liable to break out in force at any time. As for their fielding, they have made no errors in three games.

POLICE BOARD TO AWARD ONLY ONE MEDAL THIS YEAR

Jealousies Arising From Previous Recognition Cause Abandonment of Rewards for Bravery and Arrests.

GOLD MARKSMANSHIP MEDAL TO BE GIVEN

Annual Police Parade, Held Up by Delay in Shipments of New Uniforms, to Be Given About Oct. 25.

Petty jealousies arising from the awarding of gold, silver and bronze medals to policemen for creditable work during the year, which have been distributed after the annual parade of the department each October, have caused the Police Board to do away with all awards except that of the gold medal for marksmanship.

Preparations for the parade are under way and would have been completed earlier in the month but for the delay in the delivery of the new winter uniforms for the policemen. The parade probably will be held around Oct. 25 if the uniforms are delivered.

The one medal to be awarded this year will be pinned on Patrolman Nary H. Phillips of the Angelica Street District, who in February completed a series of targets that brought him in winner over the champion of the department for 20 years, Sergt. Sidney Sears. Patrolman Phillips won the medal with a final score of 181 out of a possible 200. Fourteen hundred and ten policemen participated in the shoot, 111 competing in the final elimination tests. In the same shoot, district buttons were awarded to the men with the highest scores in the districts. Chief of Detectives Hoagland, then a Detective Sergeant, won the button in the Detective Bureau with a score of 158. The gold medal will be given to Patrolman Phillips at the review following the parade.

Awards Revived After War.

The custom of awarding medals for bravery, meritorious service and notable arrests was revived in the department at the close of the world war, after a lapse of several years. The Police Board, under President Charles W. Mansur, last October picked the winners, and besides a medal a bar was awarded to be worn on the outside uniform with initials denoting the policeman was a medal winner.

"It is impossible to select a group of medal men without creating jealousy and petty differences of opinion among members of the department," said Commissioner Philip Brockman yesterday. "The feeling created causes dissension among the men, and so we decided to eliminate that feature altogether."

The Commissioner said, however, the marksmanship medal was an award for actual supremacy, attained by hard work, and there could be no question arising in this case, and he thought the board would continue this award.

New Coats to Be Worn.

In the parade this year the policemen will be seen for the first time in the new short, double breasted uniform coat adopted by the board after a vote of the men. The vote was overwhelmingly in favor of the short coat over the long frock coat of former years. The new coat has side slits through which a policeman can reach his revolver and keys without having to unbutton the coat.

Twenty or more firms were asked to bid for the contract for the uniforms, but only six responded. The contract was awarded to the Craddock Uniform Co. The factory of this company is in Kansas City. More than 200 of the uniforms have been shipped here and when the board sought the rest for an early date this month for the parade the company asked for further time, saying better work could be done. It was granted and the shipment is expected to be completed by Oct. 22. The contracts were awarded for about half the cost of the uniforms of a year ago.

It had been the hope of members of the department to have the newly organized band in the parade this year. Elmer Bartelsmeyer, secretary of the board, in charge of the band, said yesterday, however, that it would be impossible to bring the new organization up to the desired standard.

CITIZENS URGE 'REAL LIMITATION OF ARMAMENTS'

Meeting Called by Women Voters Adresses Appeal to President for Action and Open Discussion.

WOUNDED SOLDIER MAKES MOVING PLEA

If Senate Had Been in the Argonne, He Says, There Would Have Been 96 Votes for League.

The luncheon and conference on disarmament at Hotel Statler yesterday, arranged by the St. Louis League of Women Voters, brought out representatives of nearly all the civic and religious organizations of St. Louis, and of some labor unions. The room, in which seats had been provided for 500 persons, was full to the doors, and a unanimous response was given to a resolution of appeal to President Harding for "real limitation of armaments" in the conference of nations at Washington Nov. 11.

The resolution was passed around for signatures, and when it had been filled was given to Mrs. Sarah Spraggon, of the Women's Trade Union League, who volunteered to carry it in person to Washington and place it in the hands of President Harding as representing St. Louis public sentiment on disarmament.

Wounded Soldier a Speaker.

Mrs. E. T. Senseney, Independent President of the League of Women Voters, opened the meeting with a statement of purposes and introduced Paul W. Brown, a magazine editor, who discussed the economic necessity for limitation of armaments. He was followed by Dr. Felix Adler, founder of the American Ethical Union; Private A. C. Nisbet, from the Jefferson Barracks Hospital, a soldier who had been wounded and disfigured; Judge Florence E. Allen, of the Cleveland Court of Common Pleas, and Mrs. George Gellhorn, of the Missouri League of Women Voters.

Archbishop Glennon, who had been invited, could not attend, but sent the following written message:

"Your efforts to focus public opinion on the forthcoming conference for the limitation of armaments is most commendable and you can count on whatever help I can give you. The nations today that are increasing their armaments are digging their own graves. America may be able to continue it a little longer than the others, but in continuing the armament burden, a similar fate is sure to overtake it."

Appeal to the President.

The text of the appeal to President Harding follows:

"The undersigned citizens of St. Louis, desiring to make articulate the intense desire that fills their own hearts and the hearts of mankind today, appeal to you, Mr. President, as head and spokesman of these United States, to dispel the fear now pervading many minds that this conference on limitation of armaments may fail or end in a traffic of compromises, and to this end, urge you to use your powerful influence to the effect that a real limitation of armaments may issue from this conference and that an affair, which concerns the dearest interests of the world may be discussed in the open."

Brown told of the destruction he viewed in France last year as a concrete illustration of the devastation of war, and cited statistics to show how, in the last 120 years in America, the harvest of war had depleted the treasury, leaving only a small part of the general revenue for welfare and culture.

Adler said a solution of the problems confronting the forthcoming conference depended largely upon the temper of the participating nations and that he hoped the mind of the world would be influenced for good by the constructive thought of the best minds of the world in this crisis. "'Where there's a will there's a way,' is true," he declared, "and we must enforce our will upon the conference to see to it that the representatives of nations find a way."

What Soldier Thinks of War.

In a recital of events in the memorable Argonne battle, Private Nisbet, who was seriously wounded with the Ninety-first Division, brought tears to the eyes of many women present in a graphic description of the sufferings of men under shell fire and gas attack.

"If the United States Senate had been in the Argonne Forest for 20 minutes the morning of Sept. 26, 1918," he said, "there would have been 96 votes for the League of Nations in the vote on that great document."

Prolonged applause interrupted him.

Resuming, he pictured vividly his

ST. LOUIS 1921 DIRECTORY TO BE DISTRIBUTED THIS WEEK

Aach and Zytowski Families Retain Distinction of Opening and Closing Volume.

The 1921 St. Louis directory will be distributed to subscribers tomorrow and on succeeding days. It comes late in the year, but St. Louis may be deemed lucky to get a directory this year at all, as some cities have gone three or four years without one

A more metropolitan touch is given to the list of proper names, by the use of smaller type. Last year's alphabetical list was in nonpareil, or 6-point, type, while this year's is in agate, 5½ point.

In last year's volume, the alphabetical list took 2598 pages, but this year, by the use of the smaller type, it is kept in 2253 pages. The total number of pages, including classified lists and advertising, was 3560 last year, and is 3110 this year.

The Aach and Zytowski families retain the distinction which they had in last year's volume, of opening and closing the list of proper names.

While St. Louis is not one of the largest motion picture producing centers, the list of names reveals that William S. Hart lives at 4423 Blair avenue; that Charles Chaplin has three places of abode here, and Charles Ray no less than eight. While Work is not so plentiful as might be wished, it is to be found 10 times over in the list of names.

Actual construction will be started between Valley Park and Pacific as soon as the surveys have been completed, Bush added, and pushed to completion, giving employment to hundreds of men.

BOY, 13, CHARGED WITH KILLING SCHOOLMATE, 12

By the Associated Press.

MACCLENNY, Fla. Oct. 8.—Lonnie Gainey, 13 years old, was held without bail to await action by the County grand jury today as a result of the killing at Burnett's School House, this county, yesterday, of Leonard Dugger, 12, son of a Baker county farmer.

One of the boys, it was said, had tobacco in his pocket during school hours and the other was said to have informed the teacher. The boys quarreled over the incident after school was dismissed, and witnesses said that during a fight which followed, Gainey drew a knife and cut the younger boy's throat. The Dugger boy died within a few minutes. A Coroner's jury held that Dugger's death resulted from knife wounds inflicted by Gainey.

INDICATION OF EARLY ACTION TO REDUCE RAIL FREIGHT RATES

Group of Railroad Executives Confers With President Harding and Senator Cummins, and "Agricultural Bloc" Discusses Rate Cuts at Night Meeting.

VOLUNTARY ACTION BY ROADS EXPECTED

Requests for Wage Reductions Likely to Follow Decreases in Tariffs—Rail Executives to Meet in Chicago Oct. 14.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—Developments which are declared to presage early reduction in railroad freight rates and a clearing of the railroad situation generally, came here today from several quarters.

A group of prominent railroad executives conferred with President Harding and Senator Cummins, Republican of Iowa, chairman of the Senate interstate commerce committee, and discussed steps toward freight rate reductions preliminary to the executives' meeting at Chicago, Oct. 14.

Rate reductions also was the principal topic at a meeting tonight of Democratic and Republican Senators, comprising the unofficial agricultural "bloc." Senators attending the meeting said there was a wide and vigorous demand for rate cuts, as imperative to the agricultural interests.

Senator Cummins, after his conference with the railway executives, said he believed they would adopt at their Chicago meeting his suggestions for an immediate reduction of freight rates. No definite or formal assurances to this effect were given him at today's conference, he explained, but he expressed the opinion that the reductions would be made by the carriers voluntarily.

Wage Cuts to Follow.

The carriers then, Senator Cummins said, probably would ask the Railroad Labor Board to reduce wages or appeal to Congress for legislation to meet the situation caused by the voluntary rate reductions.

The railway executives in the conference included T. Dewitt Cuyler, representing a railway securities holders' organization; Samuel Rea, president of the Pennsylvania System; President Smith of the New York Central; President Holden of the Burlington System, and Julius Kruttschnitt, chairman of the Southern Pacific.

"The railway executives," said Senator Cummins, after the conference, "feel that the only substantial way to reduce rates is to reduce wages. They also feel that the wage-fixing functions of the Railroad Labor Board should be transferred to the Interstate Commerce Commission, which has the rate making, or return, powers."

Senator Cummins said he did not gather that the railway executives favored complete abolition of the Labor Board, but believed that the same Federal authority which established railroad rates or returns, should also have power to establish wages. This would require amendment by Congress of the transportation act and may be brought up later, after the Chicago conference.

Reductions on Freight Only.

The railway executives at Chicago, the Senator said he understood, would "call in representatives of agricultural, shippers', commercial and other organizations" to discuss the rate and wage questions. The carriers, he said, would probably seek the support of these interests in the event they should agree to reduce freight rates voluntarily and appeal to the Labor Board for wage reductions and to the Interstate Commerce Commission for rate adjustments.

Reduction of passenger rates is not contemplated at this time, in the opinion of Senator Cummins, who explained that the pressing immediate concern for agricultural and all other industries was freight rate reductions. This sentiment was expressed at tonight's meeting of the Senate agricultural "bloc." Proposals for calling up the matter in the Senate soon were said to have general indorsement in the "bloc."

The "Bloc" decided to defer action on rate questions until next week, when another meeting will be held. Action, however, was taken on a

INSURANCE 'TRUST' IN MISSISSIPPI IS FINED $13,000,000

Chancellor Holds Companies Have Violated Laws and Are Responsible for Rating Bureau in State.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JACKSON, Miss., Oct. 8.—Holding that the insurance companies were responsible for the rating bureau and were guilty of violating the Mississippi antitrust laws, Chancellor V. J. Strickler today granted the State penalties amounting to nearly $13,000,000. The State won every point in its contention against the 84 companies, but Chancellor Strickler assessed the minimum fine of but $200 for each day of alleged violation, declaring, "We exercise mercy as well as justice in this court. The purpose of the antitrust law is to suppress the evil rather than punish the offender."

The maximum penalty fixed by the Mississippi statute is $5000 per day and had the Chancellor assessed this amount the total would have approached $4,000,000,000, the amount asked by State Revenue Agent Stokes V. Robertson. The agent, under the provisions of the law, gets as his fee 20 per cent of the penalties collected, so his portion of the $13,000,000 will amount to $2,600,000 if he is able to make collection.

The decision of the Chancellor was lengthy. He severely arraigned the bureau that publishes standardized rates and charged that the defendants were responsible for it. The Chancellor in ruling against the defendants held that the local underwriters in the State were not responsible for the conditions but the court found that "the local agents are but the victims of circumstances."

The antitrust suit was originally brought against 139 fire insurance companies, but some time ago Chancellor Strickler dismissed the suit as to 55 fire insurance companies which had been made defendants in the action filed by the revenue agent.

The Chancellor held that the Mississippi inspection and advisory rating bureau was merely the old Southeastern Tariff Association, barred from the State 15 years ago, "in disguise."

FORMER ILLINOIS MAN ACCUSED OF MURDER OF HIS MOTHER

Joseph P. Studer of Peoria Arrested in Los Angeles After Parent Dies Apparently From Beating.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 8.—Joseph P. Studer, 32 years old, formerly of Peoria, Ill., is in the Los Angeles county jail here today, awaiting a trial in the Superior Court on the charge of having murdered his mother, Mrs Elizabeth Studer.

Mother and son lived together. On the night of Sept. 25, according to the police, they were summoned to the Studer home by a neighbor who said he heard a woman screaming in the house. The police broke in and found Mrs. Studer unconscious, they said, apparently from a beating. She died that night.

The son told the officers he was a physician, but had not been admitted to the practice of medicine in California.

GOOD ROADS BILL CONFEREES AGREE TO RECOMMEND ADOPTION

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—Conferees on the good roads bill reached a tentative agreement today to recommend adoption of the bill as passed by the Senate last August, with a few amendments. The two most important amendments would make the appropriation available Jan. 1, 1922, instead of six months after passage of the act, and would permit road improvement work to be carried on by the Secretary of Agriculture for three years instead of two as provided in the bill, in those states which because of their Constitution or laws are unable to provide funds to fully participate in its benefits.

U. S. NOT TO ENTER CONFERENCE WITH A SET PROGRAM

Officials Don't Want to Give Impression of Trying to Dominate Arms Deliberations.

SCHURMAN'S VIEWS ON POLICY OF U. S.

Minister Says in Pekin America Will Insist on Rights in China; Discusses Coming Conference.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—The American delegation to the conference on limitation of armaments and Pacific and Far Eastern questions will not lay on the table at the first meeting a comprehensive detailed program for the reduction of naval armaments or armaments in general. Secretary of State Hughes, chairman of the American delegation; Elihu Root and Senators Lodge and Underwood, his associates, will be amply provided with data covering various projects and counter projects calculated to meet any situation which may develop in the conference, but no set program will be submitted at the outset, if at all.

One reason for this is that those in authority in the Harding administration fear that, if the American delegation appeared with a perfected program at the outset, their action might have the effect of putting a damper on the entire conference, giving the impression that the United States sought to dominate its deliberations.

Furthermore, administration officials apparently do not propose to be caught in a situation in which a definite program submitted by the American delegation is disregarded or so altered as to be unrecognizable.

This does not mean that Secretary Hughes and his associates will not enter the conference with definite ideas as to what the United States Government is prepared to do in the way of limitation of armaments in close co-operation with the other great Powers. Army, navy and other experts for weeks have been at work on all angles of this subject. Officers of the navy have appeared before the general board and given their views as to what our Government should stand for or insist upon.

General Staff at Work.

The general staff of the army likewise has been working for some time on problems connected with reduction of armaments and the use of gas, chemicals and aircraft.

A great mass of data covering the many questions which are expected to come up for discussion has been compiled by Government experts. The data covers not only the questions mentioned specifically in the general outline of an agenda transmitted by Secretary Hughes to the invited Governments, but all other questions which are likely to be injected into a conference called to consider Pacific and Far Eastern problems.

Hope was expressed today in official quarters that there is no finality in China's reply to Japan's proposal for a settlement of the disagreement regarding the return to China of the former German rights in Shantung. In fact, a careful perusal of the Japanese proposal and the Chinese reply leads officials to believe that, after all, the two Governments are not so far apart as had been supposed and should be able to come together in a common agreement.

Whether the United States will make a tender of its good offices to China and Japan in a friendly effort to facilitate an agreement over Shantung is likely to depend upon the attitude which the Japanese Government assumes toward the Chinese reply, which was published generally in the American press today.

Disarmament of U. S. Territories in Pacific Urged.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Oct. 8.—Disarmament of American territories in the Pacific should be urged by Japan at the Washington conference, declared Dr. Saburo Yamada, dean of the Imperial University of Law, in an address before the National Policy Association here last night.

He told this association, which was organized to study questions in connection with the conference, that unless Japan secured such disarmament, the "great ideal of armament limitation will be impossible."

America was accused by Dr. Ushisaburo Kobayashi of "selfishly implanting her influence in China."

Dr. Schurman Says U. S. Will Stand on Rights in China.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

PEKIN, Sept. 10.—Whatever is America's due in China, whether great or small, that she must have, declared Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, new American Minister to Pekin, in a recent address at a dinner given in his honor by a large gathering of Americans in the Chinese capital.

"Aggrassive friendliness," was the Pekin Leader's epitome of Dr. Schurman's utterances here and in Shanghai on his arrival there.

The new American Minister expressed the friendship of the United States for the Chinese people, but he emphasized the fact that this friendliness must not be construed as indicating any disposition on America's part to retreat from her stand on her rights.

In his Pekin address Dr. Schurman said:

"As regards American rights in China we ask for nothing besides justice, equal treatment and the other rights guaranteed by treaty. We have never solicited and we shall not solicit any special favors or privileges. * * *

"Policy of America."

"The just and considerate policy of America toward China must not, however, be construed as indicative of any indifference to our rights. What is our due, whether small or great, that we must have. It would be intolerable if others were favored at the expense of the American Government or American citizens. That would be a violation of the 'open door' and our well established treaty rights. In matters of trade, commerce and finance, while we welcome friendly competition, we insist that no especial advantage be granted to our detriment. American business in China is entitled to the same treatment as the business of any other Power. We demand common and equal trade conditions and common and equal accessibility to markets.

"I confess that there is great difficulty in dealing with some kinds of discrimination. When it is open it is easy to apply the remedy; but it has been practiced in subtle and underhanded ways which it is difficult to bring to light and still more difficult to prevent. That is the form of discrimination against American business which has been much resented and has given rise to much ill feeling, not only among American business men in China, but also in wider commercial circles in the United States. All I can say at present is that in this, as in many other matters, eternal vigilance is the price of safety, and I can assure business men that they may count upon the constant and vigorous support and co-operation of the legation in dealing with this evil."

Washington Conference.

On the subject of the Washington conference, Dr. Schurman said:

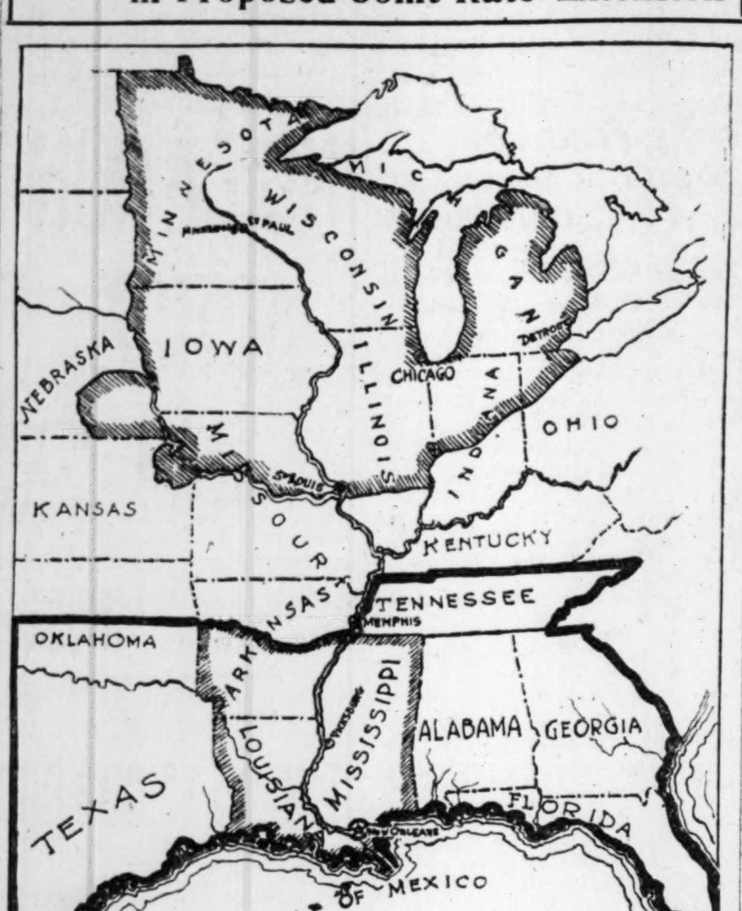
"I believe the Washington conference, by grappling with the Pacific and Far Eastern questions before they become dangerous, will give the Republic of China an opportunity of saving herself from the grave difficulties to which the Chinese Empire was exposed in 1899. There must be friendly regard for all nations, a willingness to look at facts from the point of view of every nation, a pervasive spirit of fair play, an abundance of good will, a vivid realization of the destructiveness of modern warfare and an invincible faith in justice, reason, common sense and mutual conciliation as better instruments than force.

"The reasons for the call of the conference may be read in the policy proclaimed by the United States in 1899 and pursued consistently from that time to this. China is the concern of all Powers. * * * Their first duty is to maintain the independence and territorial integrity of China and if China needs help to pull through the present difficulties, the Powers in common must come to her assistance."

The Leader, commenting, says:

"Dr. Schurman has made it plain that the interest which the American Government is taking in foreign affairs is to be shown in matters which concern China in the form of a policy of friendliness expressing itself aggressively for her benefit. * * * America's announcement that she would insist upon the 'open door' checked, if it did not entirely stop the rush for concessions and spheres of interest in China at that time (1899). Of late there has been renewed penetration, although of a different kind. America's announcement now that she will take a firm stand against such activities should be of like value to China by putting a firm check on efforts which are being made to get China's economic resources under foreign control."

Map Showing Territory Included in Proposed Joint Rate Extension



THE map shows the vast territory to be served by the barge line upon the Mississippi River, between St. Louis and New Orleans, under the proposal to extend joint water and rail rates.

At the south end of the river the territory bounded by shaded lines is that to which St. Louis shippers now may send their goods by using the barges and Southern rail lines.

The territory bounded by black lines is that which rates now proposed would open to the St. Louis shipper by barge.

In the Northern part of the valley the territory bounded by shaded lines is that in which shippers have the same advantages as St. Louis in the present proposed rates, by shipping to St. Louis by rail and loading upon barges here.

Gompers' Advisory Committee to Meet Oct. 18.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8. — The first meeting of the Advisory Committee on Armament Limitation, formed by President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, will be held here Tuesday, Oct. 18, it was announced today. Approximately 100 men and women prominent in various lines of activity have been invited to become members of the committee.

Gompers in a statement declared today that the "object of the committee is to aid to crystallize public opinion on the great issues" before the coming conference and "to concentrate and focus this opinion on the conference in a spirit that will not obstruct its labors, but will help it to a successful conclusion, urging with all possible power that its sessions continue until some of the menacing war clouds are removed and a radical reduction of armaments is accomplished."

Among those invited to become members of the committee are Arthur Woods, former Police Commissioner of New York City; Miss Charl O. Williams, president of the National Education Association; Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, Ida M. Tarbell, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, Hamilton Holt and a number of men prominent in organized labor, among them Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor; W. G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, and John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers.

Kato Objects to the Phrase, Japan's "Twenty-One Demands."

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Sept. 10.—Viscount Kato, leader of the opposition, who was Foreign Minister when Japan presented the famous 21 demands on China, has publicly objected to the phrase "21 demands," which he declares was coined by a Pekin newspaper correspondent. He said that nothing was said during the negotiations as to the succession of Japan to rights and privileges given to Germany in Shantung.

Viscount Kato continued: "Japan need not be anxious about China accepting or refusing the terms offered by Japan, although Japan may have to fight out the question if China brings it up at the Washington conference."

LIBERTY BOND 3½S AND 4S ADVANCE 25 TO 200 POINTS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Trading in Liberty bonds again overshadowed all other operations on the Stock Exchange during today's short session. The 3½s, second 4s and all the 4¼s registered their highest prices of the year, and, in some instances, for a longer period at extreme advances of 25 to 200 points.

The 200-point gain was made by the first 4¼s on comparatively small dealings, greater activity being evinced by the third and fourth series of that group. Victory notes, especially the 4¾s, also were active, but showed no perceptible change at the close.

Sales of Liberty and Victory issues approximated $4,500,000, about 70 per cent of the day's business in all classes of bonds This is exclusive of private or "over the counter" sales made by dealers.

RIVER MANAGER TO ASK FOR EXTENSION OF JOINT RATES

Theodore Brent to Request the Affected Railroads to Join in Presenting Matter to I. C. C.

WOULD BENEFIT ST. LOUIS SHIPPERS

Charges Would Be Lower Than by All-Rail Route and Place This City on Parity With New York.

Affected railroads have been asked by Theodore Brent, Federal manager of the Mississippi-Warrior Waterways, which includes the barge line on the Mississippi River between St. Louis and New Orleans, to join with him in asking the Interstate Commerce Commission to extend the territory adjacent to the river, but not bordering it, to which St. Louis shippers and shippers north in the valley may send goods via the barge line.

Brent, during a visit to St. Louis, said that if the railroads decline to join in the application, the barge line would present the application alone, asking the commission to order the extension.

If granted, the new rates would enable St. Louis shippers to reach on a partial water route two-thirds of the State of Texas, the southern half of Oklahoma and the states of Alabama, Georgia and Florida by the barge line to Memphis and Vicksburg and transfer to rail lines at those points.

Saving in Freight Charges.

The saving in freight charges to all points reached through Memphis would be 28½ cents per 100 pounds on first-class merchandise. The savings to all points reached through Vicksburg would be 40½ cents per 100 pounds.

St. Louis shippers have in the past pointed out the desirability of rates to Texas. New York, by reason of a low all-water rate to gulf ports and a favorable rate from ports to inland Texas cities, has been able to send merchandise into Texas cheaper than St. Louis could by an all-rail route. Though the barge line's proposed rates would reach only two-thirds the area of Texas, they would penetrate a territory in which five-sixths of the State's business is transacted.

The rate on the water and rail route from St. Louis to Texas points would be lower by 40½ cents per 100 pounds of first-class merchandise than the present all-rail rate of $2.48½ and would enable St. Louis wholesalers to reach those points about on a parity with New York .

Much the same conditions prevail in the Southeastern states. New York reaches them on a cheap water rate. St. Louis shippers, with a partial water route opened to them, would be enabled to more closely meet New York competition in those states.

Proposed Extension to North.

The application also contemplates that shippers north of St. Louis in the valley will be enabled to ship by rail to St. Louis and thence by barge and freight car into the same territory. The territory to which it is proposed to extend these benefits is, roughly, that portion of the valley lying north of the Ohio River, including parts or all of the states of Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Illinois, Iowa and Minnesota, North Missouri and parts of Kansas and Nebraska.

Brent pointed out that, if granted, the rates applying through Vicksburg could not be operative until a transfer terminal at Vicksburg is provided. Funds are awaited for this terminal.

INDICATIONS OF EARLY ACTION TO REDUCE RAIL FREIGHT RATES

program of farm relief measures, Chairman Kenyon announcing that it was decided to take from the banking committee and bring into the Senate a bill by Senator Fletcher, Democrat, of Florida, to increase farmers' credits, together with another bill by Senator Fletcher to make the Secretary of Agriculture a member of the Farm Loan Board. The latter bill also would reduce the board's membership from six to four.

A report was received from Eugene Meyer Jr., director of the War Finance Corporation, of his recent trip throughout the country, and it was decided to urge extensive loans through the finance corporation.

Other Matters Discussed.

Under discussion among members of the agricultural "bloc" are proposals for amendments to the railroad debt funding bill, soon to come before the Senate, providing definitely for rate reductions. The funding bill was not discussed with the railway executives today, Senator Cummins said, but was considered by the Interstate Commerce Committee for two hours, with action deferred until next Wednesday The question of allowance of railroad claims for "inefficiency of labor" during Federal railroad operation was the principal subject before the committee today, members insisting upon amendment of the pension bill so as to preclude definitely presentation of such claims against the Government.

LEE DOES NOT LOOK FOR GENERAL RAILROAD STRIKE

Head of Trainmen Thinks Leaders Are "Not Insane Enough" to Fail to Recognize Present Conditions.

TRAINMEN AWAIT MOVE BY OTHERS

Their Strike Is Authorized Only if Engineers or Conductors Are Ordered to Quit Work, Chief Explains

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 8.—Prediction that there will be no general strike on the part of the Railroad Transportation Brotherhoods was made today by William G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen. Lee based his prediction on his belief that "the average labor leader is not insane to the extent of not recognizing conditions as they now exist."

Asked whether he admitted the possibility of a strike on any one railroad, he replied that it was possible but he did not admit its probability.

Lee returned yesterday from Chicago, having supervised the canvass of the strike vote of more than 150,000 members of his organization, taken in protest against the 12 per cent wage reduction ordered by the United States Railroad Labor Board effective July 1.

Lee declined to be a party to the union strike ballot of the other brotherhoods sent out early in September, claiming nothing could legally be included in such a ballot according to the Esch-Cummins law except the wage reduction of July 1, since the Labor Board had not made a decision on other subjects mentioned in the joint ballot. Lee prepared and submitted a separate ballot for the train and yardmen. The vote returned, he said, was in excess of 88 per cent in favor of a strike, with the following provision: "We further request that our membership on this railroad be authorized to withdraw from service on the same day and hour that the membership of either the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Order of Railway Conductors or Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen of this road is authorized to stop work, as a result of the vote taken by such organizations in connection with the wage reduction of July 1."

Others Must Move.

"The next move is up to the other organization," Lee declared. He made public in part a letter of October 3 addressed to Grand Chief Warren S. Stone of the engineers; President W. S. Carter of the firemen and President L. E. Sheppard of the conductors, as follows:

"This communication is to notify you officially of the action of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen in regard to the vote submitted to them relative to a reduction of pay.

"The vote of our membership on all roads affected by such reduction and reports filed with me show in excess of 88 per cent of the entire membership on all roads voting in favor of withdrawing from the service of their employers rather than continuing longer under the reduced rates of pay established by decision number 147 and addenda thereto of the United States Labor Board.

Will Return to Chicago.

"I am pledged to grant the authority so requested and permit our membership to leave the service on any or all of the roads requesting authority to do so whenever I am officially advised by either of you that an authorized stoppage of work of the membership of your organization has been authorized on any one of more of the roads in question.

"The brotherhood's chairmen have returned home and await further advice, which of course I will give them upon receipt of the action taken by your organizations. Such chairmen will not be reconvened unless there is occasion for doing so and I am therefore ready to co-operate with one or all of you to the fullest extent when called upon officially by you to act."

Lee said he will return to Chicago Tuesday next in order to be present when the ballots of the other organizations have all been counted, and to be on hand for any action taken by them.

HARDING TRYING TO PREVENT STOPPAGE OF COAL IN MARCH

MEETING FAILS OF AN ARRANGEMENT

Hoover Explains Difficulty of Action Because Union Deferred Discussion of Wages Till February.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—The Government intervened today to prevent any possible stoppage of coal production next March when the bituminous miners' wage scale agreement expires, but its efforts, after a four-hour conference at the White House, between President Harding, Secretaries Hoover and Davis and union officials, are said to have been without immediate avail.

The conference was held when the Central Committee of the president of the organization, came here at the request of President Harding to discuss with the administration the possibility of an undertaking to arbitrate any ultimate differences with the operators prior to the expiration of the national agreements in March. The committee was received at the White House at noon, being the guests of the President at luncheon and continuing the discussions until late in the day.

Statement by Hoover.

At the conclusion of the conference, Hoover issued the following statement:

"The conference with the miners' representatives today was in sequence of discussions carried on last week with representatives of the coal operators under the auspices of the unemployment conference. The desire of the conference was to determine if steps could be taken now that would minimize the danger of stoppage in coal production at the expiration of the national agreements at the end of March by a prior undertaking to arbitrate any ultimate differences.

"Owing to the situation of the miners' leaders as the result of the decision of the Indianapolis convention to defer discussions of the new agreement until after their February meeting, it had been impossible to come to any immediate arrangement."

Plan for Arbitration.

The discussions of last week referred to were between representatives of the national conference on unemployment and representative coal operators, which resulted, it is understood, in some expression of willingness on the part of the operators to submit any differences to arbitration prior to expiration of the existing agreements.

The officials of the United Mine Workers of America, who were present at the conference, were: John L. Lewis, president; Philip Murray, vice president; Lee Hall, president of the union in Ohio; John Hessler, president of the union in Indiana; Robert Fitzgibbons, president of district five, Pennsylvania, and John Moore and Walter J. James, legislative agents.

BILL IN SENATE TO PENALIZE PROFITEERS IN COAL, AND FIX PROFITS

Kenyon Proposes Maximum of 50 Cents a Ton; Another Bill for Control in Emergency.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.

THE President would be authorized to take over and operate coal properties in a national fuel emergency under a bill introduced today by Senator Kenyon, Republican, of Iowa, chairman of the Senate Labor committee. The bill would give the Federal Trade Commission broad powers in supervising the coal industry.

A companion bill introduced today by Senator Kenyon would penalize profiteering in coal and fix a graded scale of operators' and distributors' profit with maximums of 50 cents a ton and 40 cents respectively.

The Federal Trade Commission would have authority to require complete information regarding costs, profits and all other details from operators and distributors, and to declare when a national fuel emergency existed.

During emergencies the President would be empowered to fix prices, take over and operate mines, transport and sell coal. He also would have power to fix miners' wages, which would be a "reasonable living" standard.

The bill also would impose a new Federal brokerage tax upon coal brokers selling to other than consumers.

own experiences and of men who fell about him, and said that war was little more than wholesale murder. If disarmament is left to politicians and diplomats, there will be no end of war; but if left to the people, war will be but a memory, he said.

Judge Allen, who came to St. Louis to address the Ethical Union, said America should demand publicity at the forthcoming conference, and that all the people should apprise America's representatives of their wishes on disarmament. She congratulated the League of Women Voters for starting a movement to crystalize sentiment here, and declared the women of the nation could enforce their views on the conference if they were likewise active in organization. Private warfare, she pointed out, has been abolished by law, and she said "we must come to say that the evil deeds of nations are crimes." The time will come, she added, when the nations must come to court within the well defined rules of self-defense before they shall be exonerated.

Would Arouse Public Opinion.

When Judge Allen concluded Mrs. Gellhorn introduced the resolution of appeal to the President, and then called for expressions from representatives of the organizations present, all of whom, speaking for their organizations, agreed to an intensive program to arouse public opinion between now and Nov. 11 for an expression of the public mind at the conference.

Among the organizations responding were: Chamber of Commerce and Women's Chamber of Commerce, Typographical Union, No. 8; Board of Religious Organizations, Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Council of Jewish Women, College Club, Town Club, Women's Trade Union League, Wednesday Club, St. Louis Ethical Society, Women's Binders Union, Clarence Avenue Mothers Club, Ashland Improvement Association, St. Louis Junior League, Young Women's Christian Association, St. Louis Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, the Professional Woman's League, Citizens' Milk Commission, several Parent-Teacher Associations and organizations of Illinois women.

Mrs. S. G. Stilson of Springfield, Ill., State vice president of the National organization of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, announced that her organization would begin a campaign to arouse public opinion and arranged to have Judge Allen speak on the subject in Springfield in November.

DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL COMMITTEE TO MEET

Many New Women Members to Be at Conference in Chicago in Near Future.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct 8.—A call is to be issued by Chairman George White tomorrow for a meeting of the Democratic National Committee to be held within the next two or three weeks, probably at Chicago.

Chairman White is expected to make a detailed report on the recent presidential campaign and resolutions will probably be adopted in support of the conference on limitation of armaments.

"The meeting is to be called," White said tonight, "for general discussion of party welfare It will bring together for the first time many Democratic national committee women who have never attended a committee meeting."

The meeting will be the first held since the close of the national presidential campaign last November. Several months ago friends of William G. McAdoo urged a meeting but a call was refused by Chairman White. The question of White's resignation was widely discussed at that time.

That White would continue as chairman, for the present at least, was declared by party leaders here tonight. White himself was noncommittal except to declare he did not expect any developments at the meeting affecting his personal status. His friends in Ohio have been urging him to become a candidate for Governor for the next election, and those here declare this development is probable

Among business affairs of the party to be discussed at the meeting is the deficit, which, White said, has been reduced since November, but still remains a matter for settlement.

Gov. Cox, it was said, is not expected to attend the meeting, and the question of future candidates, leaders said, would not be raised formally at least.

Mathematics Club to Meet.

The Mathematics Club of St. Louis, the purpose of which is to encourage a greater study in higher mathematics in the schools of St. Louis and vicinity, will hold its first meeting of the year in the assembly room of the Board of Education at 10 a. m. Saturday, followed by a luncheon at the Hotel Statler. Prof. C. F. Kincaid of the Cleveland High School, and H. C. Kislingbury, statistician of the Union Electric Co., will speak.

WHAT CITY CAN DO TO MAKE JOBS TO BE DISCUSSED

Finance Committee of Unemployment Body Will Meet Tomorrow With Board of Estimate.

OTHER CONFERENCES FOR DAY CALLED

J. W. Byrnes Says "It Is Time City Officials Began to Tell Us Some of Things We Can Do."

The committee on finance of the Mayor's Unemployment Commission will meet at 10 a. m. tomorrow with the Board of Estimate and Apportionment to determine if it is possible in any way for the city to finance projects which would provide employment for large numbers of men immediately.

James W. Byrnes, a member of the finance committee, whose proposal that the city borrow $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 and set a large force to "cleaning up" the city was declared yesterday by Deputy Comptroller Gunn to be unconstitutional, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter last night: "The city authorities have told us all the things we cannot do; it's time that they began to tell us some of the things we can do."

Byrnes added that he would discuss no other plan for putting men to work until after he had attended tomorrow's meeting with the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, which consists of Mayor Kiel, President Aloe of the Board of Aldermen and Comptroller Nolte. The Mayor and Aloe have indorsed a bond issue. Nolte, so far as he has expressed himself, has opposed a bond issue.

Believes Early Vote Is Possible.

William Sacks, chairman of the finance committee, said last night that he was of the opinion that the bond issue idea should be pushed. "I think we could get a vote in a little more than 60 days," he said. "In the interval, the heads of city departments could get their plans ready so that work could begin the minute authorization of funds was obtained."

Mayor Kiel said he had no statement at this time beyond his conviction that the need of the hour was quick action.

Two other subcommittees of the Mayor's commission will hold meetings also tomorrow. Morton J. May, chairman of the Public Improvements Committee, has requested city officials and heads of departments to meet his committee at 3:30 p. m. in the Board of Public Service room in the City Hall to discuss what public improvements could go forward at once if the money was provided. This will involve discussion of the proposal for a bond issue. May already has expressed his approval of a bond issue.

Suggestions for Making Jobs.

James W. Byrnes is chairman of the Industrial and Commercial Committee and has called his committee to a meeting in the Chamber of Commerce at 2 p. m. This committee grew out of the suggestion of Chairman Cunliff of the Mayor's committee that possibly each employer in the city could make room for one more man and thus give relief to the situation. Byrnes said that he was not ready at this time to give indorsement to that plan, but would ask his committee members for other suggestions.

It was said yesterday at Cunliff's office that he had left the city and would return Friday. Byrnes said that Cunliff's absence would not interfere with action by the commission, as he, as vice-chairman, would call it together if a need appeared Majority Report on Business Betterment Is Completed.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—Practically completion of a majority report on permanent measures for the betterment of business through the country was effected today by the Manufacturers' Committee of the National Conference of Unemployment. On the question of business readjustment the majority of the committee was understood to hold the view tha readtjustment of wages and prices downwards was a necessary precedent to a revival of the nation's industry. In connection with the readjustment process the report was understood to favor lower freight rates.

Passage of the railway funding bill for the financial relief of the carriers now pending in Congress, was understood to be regarded by the report as an important step in economic betterment, while the discontinuance of functions of the Railroad Labor Board which come in conflict with the activities of the Interstate Commerce Commission was regarded favorably.

Legislation, changing the Adamson eight-hour law, was understood to be suggested as a means of more readily accomplishing industrial readjustments. On the subject of taxation, the report was understood to favor lightening unnecessary burdens while still providing ample revenues for the Government.

Emergency measures for the relief of unemployment adopted by the conference were said to be in operation in all parts of the country. Cooperation of the railroads in making effective the conference's recommendations was understood to have been tendered by a number of railway executives in conference today with Secretary Hoover.

TROOPS ON 900-MILE MARCH DUE HERE NOV. 1

Sixth Infantry, to Be Stationed at Barracks, Made Overland Trip to City in 1827.

The Sixth Infantry Regiment, which is on the march to Jefferson Barracks from Camp Jackson, S. C., a distance of nearly 900 miles, is camping and resting today in Central Tennessee, not far southeast of Nashville. It left camp Sept. 2 and is due at the Barracks Nov. 1, but is believed to be about a day behind its schedule.

About 800 men and 30 officers are making the march, all of them save about half the officers actually hiking on foot. Most of those on the way are to be permanently stationed at the Barracks. There is another unit making the march as far as Morganfield, Ky., there to take another route for another destination.

Chance for People to See Troops.

The march is the longest ever made by any considerable body of troops in changing stations in the United States. The War Department recently ordered that all troops going to new stations should go by road, the object being to reduce the expense, to give the troops practice, and to give the people of the country a better idea of the army.

The Sixth Infantry is one of the six oldest regiments in the army, having been organized in 1798, along with the First to the Fifth. It has served in every war in which the United States has participated. Zachary Taylor was its commanding officer during the Seminole Indian warfare in Florida in 1819.

The regiment marched overland from Fort Atchison, Western Nebrask, to St. Louis in 1827 and established the post of Jefferson Barracks permanently, building the first stone barracks there, none of which are known to remain. Two years later the unit was sent to Rock Island, Ill, and was in the Black Hawk Indian war.

Cited in Pershing's Orders.

The regiment went to Mexico in the Mexican war and it had a record of hard fighting in the Civil war. It was in Cuba in 1898 and after that went to the Philippine Islands on three occasions. It was part of the Fifth Division, A. E. F., in the world war and was cited in orders by Gen Pershing for its feat in crossing the Meuse River and straightening our battle front at a critical time.

Col. Hunter B. Nelson of Columbia, Tenn., is in command of the regiment. He has had about the same length of service as Col. John H. (Gatling Gun) Parker, commandant of Jefferson Barracks, who now has only about 300 men, mostly recruits, in his command It is thought that Col. Parker may be assigned elsewhere and Col. Nelson made commandant.

The portion of the Sixth Regiment which is coming here comprises E, F, G and I companies, rifle units, about 75 men each; H and M companies, machine gun units, 78 men each, and 16 machine guns apiece, each machine gun on a two-mule cart; Regimental Headquarters Company, 65 men, radio operators, orderlies, pigeon men, clerks, etc.; howitzer company, with three 37-mm. cannon and six 3-inch trench mortars; service company, 143 men, including wagon transport and 30-piece brass band, and the Second Battalion Headquarters Company.

F and I companies will entrain here soon after arrival and go to Fort Crook, Neb. K and L companies and the Third Battalion Headquarters Company, went to Fort McPherson, Ga., while A, B, C and D companies, comprising the First Battalion, and their headquarters company, remained at Camp Jackson, but may be sent here next spring.

Average Daily March 18 Miles.

Capt. Eugene N. Frakes, commander of E Company, is at Jefferson Barracks now, having traveled from Camp Jackson in an automobile to arrange the route of march and the camp sites, which were fixed to give average daily marches of 18 miles. He found the roads mostly good and level, with two mountains, Signal Mountain and Mount Eagle, to cross near Chattanooga, Tenn. Sand roads and heat, he said, caused the regiment to lose time in South Carolina. Only nine men have deserted during the march, and they were caught and sent back to the regiment.

It is expected that the regiment will parade through St. Louis when it arrives. It will come through Illinois, making its last camp at Belleville.

Centennial Drama Is Rehearsed in Coliseum

Cast Is in Good Voice and Effective Dueling Scene Is Shown—Play to Be Given Five Nights This Week.

A general dress rehearsal of the centennial drama, "Missouri—One Hundred Years Ao," was held in the Coliseum last night. It is to be followed by rehearsals of the prologue and the epilogue this morning, and of the play this afternoon, and by a final dress rehearsal tomorrow night. The performances of the drama are to begin Tuesday night, and to end Saturday night, constituting the second week of the St. Louis Missouri centennial celebration.

Last night's rehearsal showed the effects of the training which a large body of amateur actors have received from community events of the last few years, beginning with the Pageant and Masque in 1914. Most of the members of the "Missouri" cast showed good voices and stage presence, and they had little difficulty in adjusting themselves to the large stage, now nearly finished, in the Coliseum.

The chief item of scenery the Tavern, is completed, and a group stood on the Tavern balcony during some of the social and political scenes of the play

Effective Duelling Scene.

Two effective bits of the first scene in the first act, as rehearsed, were the encounter of Daniel Boone with land sharks who take away the land which Congress has just given him, although John Smith T, a peppery character with a ready pistol, threatens to shoot them, and the duel between Thomas H. Benton, later one of the State's first two Senators, and Charles Lucas.

The duel is shown as taking place at dawn, in front of the Tavern. Benton and Lucas fire at a signal, Lucas falls, and Benton remorsefully asks forgiveness of Lucas. Then old Judge Lucas enters, and lifts his dying son, who forgives Benton with his last breath. The old Judge carries the body away, declaring that he can never forgive.

This particular quarrel—not the first one which had occurred between Benton and Charles Lucas—is shown, earlier in the play, as having arisen from Benton's taunts at the help given by Lucas to a free negro, the hostler Kibbie, who sought to buy a slave girl for his wife.

Seven Parts for Women.

Of the 46 speaking parts in the play, only seven are for women, but the women showed careful selection for vocal qualifications. The speeches of Mrs. Coalter, played by Mrs. William Schevill, and Caroline Coalter, played by Miss Florence Walters, were delivered with good carrying quality. Miss Rhea MacAdams, who has had professional stage experience, has the role of Mandy, the negro girl whom Kibbe buys to make her his wife, and her first disdainful speech to her hostler-suitor was given with animation.

David O'Neil, in the role of Benton; Sam Goodard, as Daniel Boone, and Harry McClain, as Judge Lucas, have three of the more mature roles. The interruption of Judge Lucas, presenting the unpopular anti-slavery view, during a political speech of Benton, is striking.

Completeness in detail appears in the costuming, though not all participants in the rehearsal were in their full costumes. The big beaver hats of early statehood days, and the coonskin caps of the frontiersman are worn by several of the men in the cast.

seum at a time to be announced later, officers of the Centennial Association said yesterday. It will not be any night this week, as the Coliseum will be in use tomorrow night for the final dress rehearsal of the drama "Missouri," and during the rest of the week for the performance of the drama.

The Riverview Club held a Centennial ball last night, and by its invitation, some of those who had prepared costumes for the Lafayette ball were there in the costumes they had made for the ball.

Centennial Services at the Old Cathedral Today.

Services in honor of the statehood centennial will be held under the auspices of the National Council of Catholic Women at the Old Cathedral, Second and Walnut streets, today. High mass will be celebrated at 10 o'clock this morning. Archbishop Glennon will preach and the Rev. C. L. Van Tourenhout of Ste. Genevieve will be celebrant of the mass.

It has been considered appropriate to hold this service in the Old Cathedral because of the antiquity of the edifice. On this "square," set apart by Laclede for religious purposes, mass has been celebrated since March 15, 1764.

The corner stone of the present cathedral, the fourth church on the same site, was laid 90 years ago. It was there that Felix de Andreas, first vicar general of St. Louis, a priest of the Vincentian Order, died in October, 1820. His remains lie in the crypt beneath the Old Cathedral.

St. Louis University to Celebrate State Centennial.

St. Louis University will celebrate the statehood centennial tomorrow. At 9 a. m. there will be a solemn high mass at St. Francis Xavier (College) Church, with the Rev. M. J. O'Connor, S. J., Rector of the University, as the celebrant. The Rev. Gilbert J. Garraghan, S. J., an authority on the development of this section of the United States, will deliver a sermon historical in character. In the evening there will be a social and literary celebration for the alumni and friends of the University in the university auditorium. Addresses will be delivered by the Rev. Robert S. Johnston, S. J., representing the faculty; Daniel Lord, representing the post graduate student body; James W. Byrnes, representing the alumni and the Centennial Endowment Fund Committee, Judge Hugo Grimm, of the Institute of Law, and others. Music will be furnished by the university orchestra, and by the Choral Club of the divinity department.

PAY CUTS IN MINES AND ON ROADS URGED

Valley Association Board Passes Resolution Asking Government Action.

By the Associated Press

DECATUR, Ill., Oct. 8.—The Executive Board of the Mississippi Valley Association today passed a resolution urging "that all Government bodies concerned, and especially the Railroad Labor Board, adopt the measures necessary to bring about abrogation of the so-called national agreement of railroads and employes and a substantial reduction in railway wages. The board also urges as a further step in the process of business readjustment that measures be adopted to insure a substantial reduction of coal mine wages by April 1, 1922, when the present contract expires.

Congress is urged to put an immediate stop to the issuance of tax-exempt securities in a resolution adopted by the board yesterday. Another resolution urges the Government to continue to give support to the barge line service on the Mississippi River, and insists that "withdrawal of this service at this time would not only be a grave economic menace, but a violation of the understanding with the people of the valley at whose earnest request such service was re-established."

Support of the Jones shipping act was given in another resolution, and the directors "urge exporters and shippers to specify their shipments, wherever possible, be carried in American ships, and to make this practicable they urge the United States Shipping Board to confer at once with representatives of industries controlling the largest quantities of imports and exports, and to co-operate with these industries in devising means whereby they may obtain as satisfactory rates from American ships as from foreign ships."

"For the continuance of the high railroad rates the public itself is to blame," said Samuel O. Dunn, editor of the Railway Age and vice president of the railway division of the Mississippi Valley Association. "It cannot be denied that the present rates are too high. They are necessary because of the excessive operating costs of the railways. Practically all operating costs are the cost of material, supplies, fuel and labor."

WOMAN AND SON END LIVES WITH GAS IN HOME

Mrs. Christiana Mauch, 63, and Henry Mauch, 45, Found in Kitchen at 3018A Minnesota Avenue.

NOTES SAY ONE WAS ILL, OTHER SLEEPLESS

Instructions Left for Cremation of Bodies—Joint Will Disposes of "All," Including Insurance.

Mrs. Christiana Mauch, 63 years old, and her son, Henry W. Mauch, 45, a department manager for the C. F. Blanke Tea and Coffee Co., were found dead in the kitchen of their home, 3018A Minnesota avenue, at 11:30 a. m. yesterday. They were side by side in chairs in front of a gas stove, the four burners of which were turned on, but not lighted.

Notes found in the room showed they had ended their lives because Mrs. Mauch thought she had an incurable disease and because her son had been unable to sleep for a week. Apparently they had been dead several hours, as all the notes bore Friday's date. Neighbors had not seen the mother and son since 5 p. m. Friday.

Gas Noticed by Neighbor.

Mrs. Minnie Klein, who lives in the lower flat, smelled gas about 11 a. m. and called a policeman who forced open a door of the Mauch flat. All of the windows and outer doors had been locked. On a table in the kitchen were the notes and a tin box containing $136 in cash and a $25 check of the C. F. Blanke Tea and Coffee Co.

A note signed "Henry W. Mauch and Mother" read:

"Farewell to all our relatives. Goodby and may God bless you. Forgive us and pray for us."

Another note named the undertaker who was to have charge of the funeral and specified that Mauch and his mother should be cremated. The undertaker was instructed to send the bill to Oscar N. Silverson, 2920A Wyoming street. It asked that the curious be kept away from the funeral.

Joint Will Left.

A letter addressed to Silverson said: "Dear Oscar—Do the best you can with everything and may the good Lord reward you at some future time. Tell your mother and Aunt Decie goodby for us and forgive me. I have not been able to sleep at night for over a week and mother has an incurable disease, I am afraid."

A joint will was found in the room. It was signed by Mauch and his mother and read:

"All we own, including life insurance policies, are to be given to Oscar N. Silverson to distribute to each relative as he sees fit." Appended to this was the nc : "Oscar Silverson to be exeecuto without bond. Have small burial notice in all the papers and telephone Bob Hallahan, care Aeolian Piano Co., and Otto C. Smith, baker on Greer avenue. You are to be the judge of what all the relative are to get outside of special beq ests. Mrs. Klein is to have the wood and coal for her trouble."

Mauch Away From Office.

There also were notes to the police and the Coroner giving instructions that all property of Mauch and his mother was to be turned over to Silverson.

At the office of the C. F. Blanke Tea and Coffe Co. it was said that Mauch went home Tuesday because of illness, and that fellow employes Friday reported they had inquired about him and had been told he was better.

IRISH DELEGATES REACH LONDON AND RECEIVE GREAT WELCOME

Crowd at Station Waits Half Hour After Arrival of King and Queen on Another Train.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—Irish peace delegates, who are to begin negotiations with representatives of the British Government on Oct. 11, stepped from their special railway carriages in Euston Station this evening and received a stormy welcome from several thousand of their countrymen and partisans whose cheers were reinforced by the thundering of a kilted pipers' band.

The Irish delegates' train pulled in at the same platform as the train which carried the King and Queen from Balmoral scarcely half an hour earlier. For the sovereigns the entire platform had been railed off and cordoned by squadrons of police, and the floor had been covered with a red carpet, on which a group of court attendants, with the usual uniformed functionaries, welcomed their majesties. Their departure from the station was cheered by many of those among the crowds which had assembled to greet the Irish peace mission.

Porters quickly removed the carpet and all evidences of the recent presence of royalty disappeared. In a few minutes the delegates' train arrived. Men bearing enormous Sinn Fein color standards and women waving smaller republican flags, many of them singing and the rest cheering, with the booming of guns, made the great station reverberate until the delegates and their secretaries moved away in automobiles, headed by the pipers.

Their progress was slow for a considerable distance from the station, as other thousands were crowded along the route. Many climbed on the sides of the cars, the lighted interiors of which made plainly visible the faces of Arthur Griffith, Robert C. Barton, Eamon J. Duggan and George Gavin Duffy. The party motored to the Cadogan Square headquarters, through many of the principal streets of the West End.

PETITIONS TO HYDE TO ENFORCE LAW IN COUNTY

Governor Says They Will Be Given "Very Serious Attention."

Copies of a petition addressed to Gov. Hyde, and reading as follows, are being circulated in St. Louis County: "We, the undersigned citizens and taxpayers of St. Louis County, protest against the open and notorious violation of the laws in this county. We ask if there is not something that you, as Governor, can do to relieve the situation."

While in St. Louis yesterday, Gov. Hyde was told about the petitions by a Post-Dispatch reporter. He said: "This is the first knowledge I have had about the matter, and I dislike to prejudge the case. However, you certainly may say that if any such petitions come before me, I will give them very serious consideration, and will take such action as the facts seem to justify."

Asked what action he could take under such circumstances, the Governor laughed, and said he didn't want to cross the bridge until he came to it.

Herbert A. Taylor, a retired business man, living near Maplewood, said last night, in reply to a reporter's inquiry, that he had helped circulate copies of the petition, but declined to say any more about the matter.

ZOO TO DUPLICATE OZARK SCENERY IN ANIMAL PITS

Members of Board Visit Arcadia and Ironton to Study Rock Formations.

Members of the Zoo Board of Control and directors of the St. Louis Zoological Society departed last night for the vicinity of Arcadia and Ironton, Mo., about 90 miles south of St. Louis, to study the rock formations there with a view to duplicating them in the proposed cageless pits for lions, tigers, panthers, leopards and jaguars in the Forest Park Zoo.

The rocky formations around Arcadia and Ironton are famous features of Missouri scenery. Their peculiarity is their reddish hue, which causes them to resemble granite, though they are really iron-bearing porphyry. They are different in texture and appearance from the white limestone river bluffs which were reproduced in the zoo bear pits.

As was done in the case of the bear pits, it is planned to make plaster casts of the rock formations and to mold realistic imitations of the rocks from these casts, so that when the pieces are put together at the zoo the result will be a faithful reproduction of the "Shut In" at Ironton and other fine examples of porphyry formations in that section of the State.

CHILD, 4, DIES FROM BURNS

Inez Thornburg, 4-year-old daughter of C. C. Thornburg of 622 North 75th street, East St. Louis, died at 12:30 a. m., yesterday from burns suffered at 1:30 p. m., Friday, when her dress became ignited.

The child was in charge of her grandmother, Mrs. W. M. Thornburg, her mother being a patient at St. Mary's Hospital where she underwent an operation last Wednesday. Inez struck a match and a few minutes later her grandmother, who was in an adjoining room, was attracted by her cries. Mrs. Thornburg in trying to smother the flames with her apron was burned on the hands.

SALE OF COUNTY BONDS WOULD AID THE UNEMPLOYED

500 More Men Could Be Given Work if $1,632,500 in Roads Securities Were Sold, Engineer Says.

BOARD WOULD SELL ONLY $380,000 WORTH

Member Thinks County Can Save Interest by Holding Rest Till Spring — Price Below Legal Minimum.

If wealthy men were to buy or underwrite the unsold portion of St. Louis County's $3,000,000 road bond issue, which cannot now be sold because the bond market is much lower than the minimum for which road bonds may be sold under the State law, what would be the effect on the unemployment situation by thus providing work on the county roads?

The Post-Dispatch made this inquiry as to the county road situation yesterday, with a view to learning what work could be provided if the bonds were sold. Less than half of the issue has been disposed of, after much work, there remaining $1,632,500 bonds to be sold. The issue was voted on Feb. 15, 1916, and held up for a considerable time by a suit over their validity.

William Shields, one of the three members of the County Court, which is the administrative body, said that the county does not want to dispose of the unsold bonds this winter, except $380,000 worth for resurfacing the Gravois and Lemay Ferry roads. He said that this is because the county does not want to pay interest on the bonds during the winter. While the other members of the County Court could not be reached for statements, it is understood that they concur in Shields' view.

Would Plan Projects First.

"The opinion of the County Court," Shields said, "is that it is best to have its road projects carefully laid out and then sell the requisite bonds for each project. The resources of the county for getting road work done are not such that the bond money could be spent in a short enough time otherwise to avoid the payment of too much interest on the bonds."

Shields did not amplify his statement to explain why the county could not handle a greater volume of work. When asked the attitude of the County Court in the event a group of wealthy men should propose to take over the unsold bonds at 95, which is the legal minimum for the sale of road bonds, he replied:

"They might go to 100 on the market," indicating that then the county would lose by the lower sale.

He was asked if he saw any chance of the bond market leaving its present level of about 90 in the near future and replied:

"I don't know, but you never can tell."

There are about 500 men now at work on county roads which are being resurfaced, Shields said. About 150 more could be employed for the Gravois and Lemay Ferry road jobs. Most of the workmen are laborers whose pay ranges from 30 to 50 cents an hour, with gang foremen getting $6 a day.

Would Sell $380,000 of Bonds.

It is the desire of County Court members to sell $200,000 bonds for resurfacing the Lemay Ferry road and $180,000 for resurfacing the Gravois road as quickly as possible. Farmers, neighborhood banks and merchants along the road will be asked to subscribe to these bonds at 95, which is the way bonds for other roads were sold this year.

Gravois road is to be paved with concrete 18 feet wide on straightaways and 20 feet on curves, for 6.7 miles west from the Weber road. One mile of concrete road, in fair condition now, has existed from the city limits to Weber road for a number of years.

Lemay Ferry road is to be paved with concrete 18 feet wide from the intersection with the Telegraph road southward. During the war the Federal Government built a concrete road from the city limits along the Lemay Ferry and Telegraph roads to Jefferson Barracks.

Work on the Gravois and Lemay Ferry roads will start whenever the sale of the bonds is assured. Grading work could be done all winter, unless the weather is very severe, in the opinion of County Highway Engineer William Elbring.

The St. Louis County Improvement Association, a neighborhood organization, has affected the sale of almost all of $55,000 bonds which had to be sold for the laying of a bituminous-macadam surface on Page avenue for two and one-half miles from the western city limits to Spring avenue, St. Louis County. Elbring said he did not know if it would be practicable to start work there this winter should the sale be completed. Not a large number of men could be employed on the grading work. The road is now mud and cinders.

Olive Street Road Needs $200,000.

Elbring was asked to point out what other roads should be among the first improved. He mentioned the Olive Street road, for which he would like $200,000 for an unspecified stretch, and the Bellefontaine road, for which $100,000 could be used on a shorter stretch. Were the unsold bonds disposed of some men could be put to work hauling materials to the Olive Street and Bellefontaine road jobs.

Elbring said that if all the $1,632,500 unsold bonds were sold more than 1000 men, or twice the present number now working on the roads, could be employed this winter. He said that virtually all the county roads subject to much travel, which were not recently resurfaced, need repairs or new surfaces. There remains about $1,250,000 of the bond issue which has not been allotted to specific roads. Elbring said that in view of the increase in Liberty bond prices he thought road bonds would be higher by spring.

It is expected that the St. Charles Rock road, a 20 and 22-foot concrete highway, will be open for travel its entire length by Nov. 1; it is open now except for one detour. The improvement extends 12.7 miles, from Wellston to the St. Charles bridge approach, and the county has acted as its own contractor, at some saving over the bids of private contractors. The work started last November. About 125 men are working on the 6½-mile stretch from Marshall avenue to Taussig avenue.

Halls Ferry Road Open.

A new bituminous-macadam surface road on Hall's Ferry road from Baden for three miles northward was thrown open a week ago, though the work is not complete.

Work was started a month ago on the Manchester road, which is to have an 18- and 20-foot wide concrete surface for 15.6 miles, from the North and South road to Ellisville. The job should be done by next summer. It is advisable for through traffic to detour by way of Clayton road to Ballas road, which joins the Manchester road at Des Peres, or by the Big Bend and Barrett Station roads.

The Telegraph road will be open for traffic on Nov. 1 for three miles of new surface being laid from the end of the Government road at Reavis Barracks road, to the Fine road. The county is its own contractor here.

About 25 men are doing preliminary grading work on the Antire road between Valley Park and Eureka, a stretch that is to be graveled and, in places, straightened and leveled. The work should be done by spring.

Bonds for these five major jobs were sold this year as follows, none of them to brokers: St. Charles road, $330,000; Manchester road, $330,000; Telegraph road, $84,950; $20,000 of these being taken by F. W. A. Vesper, president of the Vesper-Buick Auto Co.; Antire road, $75,000, $20,000 of these being taken by D. C. Kerckhoff, president of the Pevely Dairy Co.; Hall's Ferry road, $32,500.

The remainder of the bonds sold, a large amount of which went to brokers, amounted to $520,000, sold in 1920, divided as follows: Clayton road, two miles from North and South to Conway, warrenite, $91,500; Florissant road, three miles from Natural Bridge road to Ferguson, bituminous-macadam, $44,390; Page avenue, grading from Spring avenue to Link road, $35,300; Big Bend road, one and one-quarter miles, Manchester to Newport, concrete, $27,100; Hall's Ferry road, preliminary, $32,633; St. Charles road, preliminary, $22,000; concrete mixers and other machinery for St. Charles road and other jobs, $19,000; bridges, $85,602, and the rest for overhead and other costs.

Several Bridges Built.

All the work under these sales has been completed. Among the better bridges included in the bridge item were one for $22,545 on the Big Bend road across Rives des Peres; one for $18,000 on the Florissant road across Moline Creek, and one for more than $10,000 on the Hall's Ferry road across this same creek.

Federal aid at the maximum rate of $20,000 a mile was obtained in equal proportion to the county's expenditures for all roads which are State highways. The Lemay Ferry, Gravois, Manchester and St. Charles roads are the State highways that pass through St. Louis County and practically the maximum of Federal aid was or will be obtained for each of these. These roads radiate from St. Louis like the ribs of a fan, and with lesser roads which have been or will be improved, will give St. Louis County a good basic road system when the plans are consumated.

Fine New Chime Heard Several Blocks Away Above Rattle of Traffic

Many Persons Within and Outside Holy Communion Church Listen to Hymns and Marches—Another Concert Today.

Hymn tunes and festal marches rang out over the rattle and blare of traffic at Washington and Leffingwell avenues last evening, when the new chime of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Communion was played for the first time. A program lasting from 5 o'clock until after 6 was heard by hundreds of persons, some of whom sat within the church, while others sat in automobiles within a block of the building, or stood on the sidewalk.

One of the listeners in the church was Mrs. Dorothy Liggett Kilpatrick of 32 Portland place, widow of Claude Kilpatrick, and donor of the chime, which is a memorial to her husband and her daughter, the late Mrs. Charles Scudder. The names of Claude Kilpatrick (1849-1918), and Elise Kilpatrick (1884-1917), wife of Charles Scudder, are inscribed on the two largest bells.

Best Effect a Block Away.

The chime, which cost about $11,000, is considered the finest in St. Louis, and the chimer, M. H. Mettee of Christ Church, Baltimore, who came here to play the dedicatory program, said he knew of no finer set anywhere. Last evening, in spite of the noise made by street cars and automobiles, the sound of the bells could be heard on Franklin avenue, three blocks north, or on Olive street or Jefferson avenue, two blocks south or east, well enough to distinguish the tune being played. The effect was best at a distance of a half-block to one block.

The bells are hung in the low Norman tower of the church, and have not the carrying power that they would have in a high steeple, such as that which was once on the old Pilgrim church, a block west on Washington avenue, where a chime used to hang, or that of the present Pilgrim church on Union boulevard, where the same chime has hung since 1907. However, Holy Communion church, though a low-lying structure, is on comparatively high ground, and at times when passing traffic is light and the air is calm, the chime may be heard much farther than it was last evening.

There are 11 bells in the Holy Communion chime, which are the eight notes of the octave D, a sharp fourth, flat seventh and one tone above the scale. The bells weigh from 575 pounds to 3050 pounds, 13,125 pounds in all. The three extra notes furnish a much wider range than a one-octave chime would have, and the chimer, as extra numbers, played the State song, "Missouri," and the latter part of "The Star-Spangled Banner," beginning at "Oh, say, does that Star-Spangled Banner yet wave."

Opera Selections Played.

The first number, following a playing of the scale, was "America," and this was followed by "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name." The next selection was a secular one, "O Promise Me," from DeKoven's "Robin Hood." In this number, a "natural" had to be omitted, but there was no impairment of the effect.

Successive numbers completing the program were "Crown Him With Many Crowns," "March of the Men or Harlech," "He Leadeth Me," the grand march from Verdi's "Aida," Wagner's "Lohengrin" wedding march, "Hail Columbia," "Softly Now the Light of Day," and "Abide With Me."

Today, from 10 to 11 a. m., at 12:30 p. m., and from 5 to 6 p. m., sacred selections will be played. Tomorrow noon, and from 5 to 6 p. m. tomorrow, there will be programs of secular, patriotic, sentimental, and Scotch and Irish airs.

Vigorous Task for Chimer.

After the departure of the visiting chimer, young men and boys of the Holy Communion Sunday School will try their hands at ringing the chime. A chimer need not be an expert pianist, but must know the scale and have a sense of time. The chime is played from a room over the choir room, and the operation is by levers, which are pressed down with a quick motion. Wire cables connect the levers to the bells. A number of visitors watched the chimer at his vigorous task, for which he had to remove his coat.

Mettee succeeded his father as chimer in the Baltimore church, and his son has been trained in the same task, and will play the chimes there today in his absence. He prefers to play church tunes, which he believes are best adapted to rendition by bells.

M'CUMBER MAKES ATTACK ON BORAH'S FREE TOLLS BILL

Declares Congress Cannot Exempt American Coastwise Vessels Under Hay-Pauncefote Treaty.

SAYS ACTION WOULD BE "DISHONORABLE"

Both Parties Pledged to Measure — Merely Question of Business Judgment, Says Ransdell.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—The Panama Canal free tolls bill, set for a vote in the Senate Monday under an agreement made several weeks ago, was brought up for debate again today, setting aside the tax bill temporarily.

Senator McCumber, Republican, of North Dakota, and a Foreign Relations committee member, today came out in opposition to the Borah bill, which would exempt American coastwide vessels from canal tolls. He declared that the Hay-Pauncefote treaty did not give America the right to exempt coastwise vessels from tolls and asserted that such a declaration by Congress would be "dishonorable."

Referring to the free tolls plank of the Republican national platform, Senator McCumber said it made "little difference if national honor forbids following the course pointed out."

"We are asked to declare that the Hay-Pauncefote treaty shall be treated as a scrap of paper," said Senator McCumber.

"Our duty is a simple one. Keep our word. We have invited the other great nations to join us in a solemn compact to check the mad and exhausting race of the nations for navay supremacy. Let us not enter the council chamber with soiled hands."

Senator Ransdell, Democrat, Louisiana, spoke in support of the bill, emphasizing that both Republican and Democratic parties had declared for the principle.

"It is merely one of business judgment," said Senator Ransdell, denying that any moral consideration was involved. "There are no tolls on our improved harbors and lakes and rivers and great national highways, and the Panama Canal should be treated the same. Free roadways on land and sea are not subsidies."

Coastwise traffic through the canal, Senator Ransdell contended, is purely a domestic function and question. A great majority of Senators who supported the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, he declared, did so with the understanding that it preserved the right of the United States to regulate its domestic ships using the canal.

GIRL AND TWO MEN SEVERELY INJURED IN AUTO COLLISION

Service Car Driver Arrested on Charge of Driving on Wrong Side of Street.

A girl and two men were severely cut and bruised in a head-on collision of two automobiles in front of 3642 Lindell boulevard at 6:30 o'clock last night. They were Bertha Janesch, 16 years old, of 2292 Howard street, and Charles Obert Jr., 22, of 2200 Howard street, who occupied one automobile, and Fred Miller, 50, a service car driver, of 729 Aubert avenue, who was in the other.

Obert was driving west, and Miller was going east. After the accident Miller was held on a charge of driving on the wrong side of the street. The collision occurred on the north side of Lindell. Miller, whose injuries were treated at the city hospital, said he had swerved to avoid another machine. Obert and Miss Janesch were taken to their homes.

Fred Schmiedes, 59 years old, a grocer of 3695 Laclede avenue, was hit by an automobile driven by Leo Sophir, a school teacher, of 4715A McMillan avenue, as Schmiedes crossed Laclede avenue at Spring, about 8:30 p. m. Schmiedes suffered scalp wounds, cuts and bruises.

STATE CAN SEND ONLY THREE MEN TO SOLDIER'S FUNERAL

Thirteen of Sixteen Designated to Go to Washington at Federal Expense to Be Disappointed.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 8.—Thirteen of the 16 Missourians, all former service men, designated by Gov. Hyde to go to Arlington Nov. 11 at Federal expense to attend ceremonies incident to the burial of an "unknown" soldier of the United States, killed in the recent world war, are destined to be disappointed, as the War Department has notified Hyde that he may send only three. The Governor last Saturday announced a list of 16, recommended by Adjutant-General Raupp, who had been chosen to make the trip.

Hyde was away from the capital today, but his secretary said that the Governor had not named the three under the new ruling.

The tangle is due to a change in the plans of the War Department, which was made after the Missourians had been appointed, Secretary of War Weeks having refused to make an exception in this case, the representation of all of the States having been cut.

MRS. M'CORMICK DENIES TILT WITH MARY GARDEN

Expresses Indignation at Reports of Discord Over Chicago Opera Plans.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Oct. 8.—Gossip detailing alleged antagonism between Mrs. Harold F. McCormick, daughter of John D. Rockefeller and Mary Garden, general director of the Chicago Opera Company, was refuted today in a statement issued by the opera management at the request of Mrs. McCormick. The statement follows:

Mrs. Harold F. McCormich has requested and authorized the following statement in her name:

"Mrs. McCormick, who, with her husband is a principal guarantor of the Chicago Opera Company, is amazed at the untruthful and obviously malicious statements appearing both in cable-dispatches and in sections of the American press during the last week, reciting an alleged 'clash' between Mary Garden and Mrs. McCormick in Paris this summer.

"Mrs. McCormick denies emphatically any discord at any time with Miss Garden and reaffirms her unlimited faith in Miss Garden as an executive and an artist.

"Mrs. McCormick did not see Miss Garden in Paris this summer.

"Mrs. McCormick entertained Mary Garden in the McCormick home on Lake Zurich, Switzerland, and is very happy to relate that the two went over the Chicago Opera plans for the coming season in detail. Mrs. McCormick was of some assistance in solving the problems presented, and the two were in entire accord at all times.

"Mrs. McCormick is truly grieved that Miss Garden's generosity in donating her services without pay as general director of the Chicago Opera Company should subject this matchless woman to the malicious and untruthful attacks that are being made upon Miss Garden.

"Mrs. McCormick reiterates her approval of the 500 guarantor project in which the financial support of the Chicago Opera Association becomes a semicivic undertaking. In confirmation of this, Mrs. McCormick has accepted an invitation to speak before the Chicago Association of Commerce Ways and Means Committee Oct. 19, at which time she will discuss the extension of opera and music to the public at large.

"Mrs. McCormick anticipates with pleasure the departure of Miss Garden from France for America on Oct. 15 and the early resumption thereafter of the Chicago reins by Miss Garden."

ROOSEVELT ENTERS PAINTED HISTORY OF OLD ST. LOUIS

Portrait Replaces One in Old Courthouse Dome Which Retoucher Is Unable to Identify.

When the retouching of the interior of the Courthouse dome is completed an added feature not hitherto connected with this venerable building will be a portrait of Theodore Roosevelt by James Lyons, of 2415 Fall avenue, fresco artist who is doing the retouching. The picture will take the place of one which was painted on a panel in the lantern of the dome before Roosevelt was born.

Instructions to put Roosevelt's portrait in place of the one which had faded out were given by Director of Public Safety and Building Commissioner McKelvey.

In the lantern of the dome, 140 feet above the rotunda, Lyons found four panels which originally contained representations of marble busts of great men. He made out one as Washington and another as Grant. The third seemed to be Lincoln, but he couldn't place the fourth celebrity. He let himself down on his scaffold to one of the balcony floors and telephoned McKelvey for instructions.

Before Lyons had been on the retouching job long he found that he needed someone familiar with the early history of St. Louis to sit with him on his swinging scaffold and give him pointers as to what some of the pictures originally represented.

Among the paintings are several which were done more than 50 years ago by Carl Weimar, a great painter of Indians. When Lyons came to one of these, he frankly admitted that he couldn't make "heads or tails of it." The paint had cracked and blistered and fallen off. Lyons had been told this painting represented an Indian massacre in St. Louis in its early days. If a massacre was wanted, that was what Lyons was there for, and so he wielded a facile brush and painted a massacre on the aged panel. Those who viewed the completed work said it was a highly successful massacre.

The Cranstans said the baby was born at the city hospital Aug. 6 and that they adopted it Aug. 18. On Oct. 1, they said, they discovered the child's left leg was swollen and applied home remedies. Later they had the baby sent to the city hospital.

ONE ARREST IN MAIL ROBBERY AT DETROIT

Two of 26 Pouches From Canada Which Were Stolen, Contained $4000.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 8.—One man has been arrested in connection with the holdup of a Canadian mail wagon from which four bandits last night took 26 pouches, two of which contained registered packages. The man arrested was Carl Grece, 34 years old, held on a technical charge of violating the United States code. Police declare Grece, a railroad employe, was indirectly implicated in the Toledo postoffice robbery several months ago, and stated they believe he might know something of last night's robbery here.

Today's investigation, the authorities announced, brought no clew to the identity of the robbers or to their whereabouts. No trace of the mail pouches has been found.

The Postoffice Department posted a reward of $2000 for the capture of the robbers, dead or alive.

Postal inspectors here said tonight they were unable to fix the value of the registered mail, at first estimated to amount to approximately $100,000, mostly in currency shipments from Canadian banks to their correspondents here. Canadian officials, however, believe a much smaller amount was involved. The value of only two of the 72 registered packages stolen had been fixed. These contained $4000.

All large postal stations of Canada have been asked to check up on their registered mail shipments dispatched to Windsor by the Royal mail train last night. A considerable part of this mail was carried on the wagon held up here just after it had crossed the Detroit River by ferry.

THREE-TRILLION-RUBLE STATE BANK FOR SOVIET RUSSIA

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Oct. 8.—The Russian soviet council of commissars, of which Premier Lenine is president, has decided to create a state bank which will be authorized to make loans to afford credit facilities to develop industries, argriculture and trade and also to control circulation and exchange. The bank will be capitalized at three trillion rubles.

A decree soon will be published giving the full details and explaining that fear no longer exists that the bank will be controlled by the bourgeoisie, since there are no big industrialists and since the Government is running all the big plants.

RIGA, Oct. 8.—The actual capital of the new Russian soviet State bank amounts to 70,000,000 gold rubles, according to a dispatch by the official soviet agency from Moscow today.

American Tinplate Magnate's Son, and His Bride, Princess Xenia

WILLIAM B LEEDS, JR

WILLIAM B. LEEDS JR. WEDS RUSSIAN PRINCESS

Civil Ceremony in Paris First of Three in Marriage to Xenia, Niece of Greek King.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Oct. 8.—William B. Leeds Jr., the 19-year-old son of Princess Anastasia of Greece, and the late William B. Leeds, the "tinplate" king of Richmond, Ind., and Princess Xenia, also 19, niece of King Constantine of Greece, were married by civil ceremony here at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

A second ceremony will take place at the American Church of the Holy Trinity at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon and the third, the Russian, at the Russian church at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Today's ceremony was conducted with the utmost simplicity, only the close relatives of the young couple attending. The Mayor of the First District performed the ceremony in his office in less than five minutes. The ceremony was interrupted several times by the clicking of cameras, photographers having succeeded in reaching the platform on which the Mayor was seated.

The Bridal Party.

The princess was attended by her cousin, Grand Duke Dimitri Pavlovitch of Russia, who also acted as a witness for her. Prince Christopher of Greece was a witness for Leeds.

Princess Xenia was accompanied by her mother and sister, the Princess Nina, and Princess Marie of Greece. She wore a yellow crepe dress with a cape of the same material, a brown toque with a large feather of a similar shade, and shoes and stockings of the same color.

Leeds appeared with his mother, who was dressed entirely in gray.

After the ceremony the party walked into the court yard, where it posed for motion picture men. Leeds and his bride were temporarily "lost" in the crowd of several thousand men and women who had gathered outside the building to watch their departure, when they hurried into the street to find that their automobile was waiting on the other side of the building. When the couple turned around they were surrounded by a good-natured crowd. Prince Christopher saw their plight, came to their rescue and led them to the automobile.

All the wedding gifts today were from royalty except two, which came from Americans.

List of Presents.

King George and Queen Mary of England sent a diamond and ruby pendant with a crown on which are the initials "G. M." Queen Mother Alexandra of England gave an amethyst and diamond bracelet, and Princess Mary of England gave a fan. Others who gave presents, and their gifts, follow:

The Crown Prince and Princess of Rumania, a sapphire ring; Prince and Princess Christopher, a diamond and ruby tiara; Prince and Princess George of Greece, a gold pendant watch set in sapphires; Queen Mother Olga of Greece, a diamond leaf brooch with a large ruby; Grand Duchess Amastasia of Russia, a blue enameled cross with pearls; Warner Leeds and Mrs. Leeds of New York, uncle and aunt of the bridegroom, a diamond and sapphire bracelet; Henderson Green of New York, a gold bag studded with sapphires and diamonds.

The Russian ceremony will last nearly all of tomorrow afternoon. It will be conducted with the picturesque pomp of the historical Russian church.

The couple will have no attendants at the religious ceremonies tomorrow. They will depart for London immediately after the services and will spend part of their honeymoon on a houseboat which is now in England. They plan to tour the canals of England and France and then to travel for two or three years. Princess Anastasia's secertary said Leeds had been granted an allowance by his mother upon which to live pending his coming of age. She refused to divulge the amount, but explained that it was "sufficient for a gentleman to live on."

DETROIT MURDER VICTIM WAS WIFE OF POLICEMAN

Body of Woman Who Was Thrown From Bridge Into River Recovered.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Oct. 8.—The body of a woman thrown into Detroit river from Belle Isle bridge Thursday night was identified tonight as that of Mrs. Herman Rademacher, wife of a Detroit policeman. Rademacher made the identification and later made a statemtn to the prosecutor.

Police announced they had not yet established the indentity of the man who hurled the woman over the bridge rail, but added one man was being investigated in connection with the murder. The body was recovered today 300 yards below the bridge, where it had lodged upon a sand bar.

BOY, 14, HELD AFTER MURDER OF GIRL, IS RELEASED ON BOND

Officials Unable to Give Reason for Arrest of Lad in Connection With Death of Child, 12.

ACTION WAS ORDERED BY BOROUGH COUNCIL

Body of Victim at Madison, N. J., Had 30 Knife Wounds and Is Thought to Have Been Deed of Maniac

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Francis Kluxen III., the 14-year-old boy arrested last night for the murder of 11-year-old Janet Lawrence, whose mutilated body was found Thursday evening in a patch of woods near the Kluxen home, in Madison, N. J., was admitted to $5000 bail this afternoon by Supreme Justice Parker at Morristown.

The proceedings before Justice Parker, while ostensibly a hearing on an application for admission to bail, partook of the essentials of a habeas corpus action. They developed that a 13-year-old boy, apparently normal, had been committed to the county jail charged with the commission of one of the most revolting murders that this section has known for years.

Chief of Police Johnson of Madison, who swore on the complaint on which young Kluxen was locked up, admitted in court today that he had no evidence on which to base such a charge against the boy.

Frank F. Gibney, president of the Borough Council and acting Mayor of Madison, was unable to state to the Court a substantial reason why the lad should have been arrested.

Sheriff Byram said he did not know why the boy had been taken into custody.

County Prosecutor Mills frankly admitted his belief that the boy should not have been taken into custody on such a charge, and when Justice Parker called on him as the prosecutor to oppose the motion for the fixing of bail, Mills stated that he didn't know what to do.

Council Caused Arrest.

The boy's arrest was brought about at the instigation of the borough Council, at which all members were present. The Council had enlisted the services of a private detective, and at the conclusion of their meeting Friday night summoned Prosecutor Mills and informed him that he had not been conducting his investigation of the case to the satisfaction of the Council.

When Chief of Police Johnson was instructed by the Council to arrest the Kluxen boy, the prosecutor told reporters today, the Chief said he would rather resign his position than carry out such an order. Johnson took the position that the boy was under surveillance, without chance of escape, and that action against him could not be taken without the knowledge and co-operation of the county officials.

The Council was insistent, however, and Johnson finally obeyed orders. President Gibney of the Council, opposing in court the boy's release on bail, said: "We have hardly had time to come to a conclusion. We have hired an outside man and we think the boy should be held until we have strengthened our case against him."

Justice Parker then placed the bail at $5000, which was furnished and the boy left court with his father.

Spots on Knife Blade.

The young man had a scout's knife in his possession when we arrested him," said the sheriff. "The knife has a can-opener blade and there were indications of blood on that blade. The boy said he had been cleaning fish with that blade the day before the murder. We thought it best, however, to turn the knife over to Dr. Edell and have him analyze the blood spots. I don't think the boy should be released until it is determined whether those spots are fish blood or human blood."

The little girl, from all indications, was murdered and mutilated by some perverted maniac. Searchers found her body against a felled tree, hands tied behind the back with a knotted cord and a handkerchief about the throat. There were 30 knife wounds in the body, all inconsequential excepting one which severed the jugular vein and caused death.

Young Kluxen is 5 feet 7 inches tall and weighs 120 pounds. He has a dark complexion and his girlish face gives him an appearance of innocence. He is an only child.

Suspicion was directed against him Thursday night, when he and his father took part in the general search for the missing girl. As he and his father stood in the woods, a policeman talked to them. The father walked away and the policeman noticed the boy was trembling.

Boy Expelled From School.

Last midnight the boy was put through the third degree by the police. Although the police refused all information, it was learned he denied he had anything to do with the murder.

Young Kluxen attended St. Vincent's Parochial School until the present term. A priest, who refused to give his name, told a reporter for the Post-Dispatch the boy had been expelled for misconduct. He would not explain what the misconduct consisted of.

The boy's father was questioned by newspaper men, but declined to make any statement.

DINNER TO HAWES TUESDAY

Arrangements were completed yesterday for the testimonial dinner to be given to Congressman Hawes at the Missouri Athletic Association Tuesday night at 6:30 in recognition of his 10 years of activities for good roads in St. Louis and Missouri.

Approximately 400 acceptances have been received from 1000 invitations sent out to business, financial, professional, educational and clerical men in St. Louis. The speakers will be W. Frank Carter, president of the Chamber of Commerce; Melville L. Wilkinson, president of the Associated Retailers; George S. Johns and Congressman Hawes. Altogether there will be 25 places at the head table.

Congressman Hawes wired last night from Washington that he would discuss national affairs before opening his discussion of good roads and that among the topics will be the recognition of Obregon in Mexico.

INQUIRY COURT ASSAILS WEAKNESS IN ZR-2

Report Says There Is No Evidence Economies in Design Were Studied as to Strength.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—The design of the dirigible ZR-2, which came to grief in the Humber River, at Hull, in September, should have been examined and discussed by an official competent committee before its actual construction was commenced, declared a report of the Court of Inquiry which investigated the disaster, issued yesterday. The report adds that there is no evidence to show that this was done, and finds that the accident was due to structural weakness.

The report was issued together with a communication from the Admiralty, which says the Admiralty is conducting a full investigation into the history and design of the airship and the initial stages of its construction up to October, 1919, "when its responsibility for the design and construction of airships was transferred to the Air Ministry." The Admiralty's communication adds that the result of this investigation will be published. The report notes that Commander Horace P. Dyer, U. S. N., represented the American navy at the inquiry.

Opinion of Court.

The opinion of the court is that the airship, flying at approximately 1200 feet over the Humber, broke in two, due to the failure of the structure to the rear of the after-engine cars, while being subjected to control tests.

The findings of the court of inquiry confirm evidence introduced at the inquest into the disaster. They say that fire, probably originating from a spark from electric wires, was mainly responsible for the large loss of life. They note that a quick reversal was being made at the time of the accident, bringing a heavy strain on the other portion of the hull of the craft, due to the swing of the stern.

Reference to Economy.

Then the court found, among other things, that "the requirements as to maximum height and speed, together with limit in length, imposed by the only available construction sheds, necessitated the utmost economy in design, and it appears evident that in some cases there was lack of vital erodynamical information as to the effect of these modifications on the strength of the structure."

Declaring that there was no evidence the official committee examined and discussed the design of the airship, the report adds that opportunity to study the designs arose after the armistice, when information as to the details of ships built elsewhere became availble.

The court, while finding that there was one parachute available for every person on board the ZR-2, asserts that no survivor of the disaster owed his escape to a parachute.

LINDSEY FREES YOUTH ACCUSED OF GIVING GIRLS LIQUOR TO DRINK

Puts Them on Probation, Saying It Is Unjust to Punish Lesser Offenders While Rich Have Wine.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Colo., Oct. 8.—Declaring that it would be unjust to punish a lesser offender against the bootleg laws, while wealthy social leaders of Capitol Hill art allowed to have their wine cellars without fear of molestation," Judge Ben B. Lindsey of the Juvenile Court today put on probation Chester Lasater and Clete Hinton, accused of giving young girls liquor to drink.

In a statement read in optn court, Judge Lindsey charged that a "conspiracy exists among the rich to have the laws enforced only against the poor."

"If we are to have jail sentences," said Judge Lindsey, "I would recommend that the prominent men involved in the delivery of thousands of dollars worth of first-class booze—free of the poisons that are in the booze of the poor—be followed, prosecuted and sent to jail.

"I would recommend that the society leaders and women of prominence who are interested in getting these laws enforced send their investigators into the homes of the rich with search wararnts to inspect their cellars and then have the courage to go after thtm.

"I would recommend that they call one of our leading business men and social lights before their boards and committees and if possible make him tell what he had to do with thousands of dollars worth of first-class booze in his garage this week."

55 NUNS TO APPLY FOR CITIZENSHIP TUESDAY MORNING

Members of Catholic Women's League to Attend the Unusual Ceremony.

Fifty-five nuns will appear in a group at the Federal Building, Eighth and Olive streets, Tuesday morning, to make application for citizenship. Their appearance will be such an unusual one that the Catholic Women's League has notified its members to attend the ceremony, which will take place in room 300, at 9:30 a. m.

The nuns are members of various Catholic sisterhoods having mother houses in St. Louis. It is nothing novel for a nun to obtain citizenship papers, but naturalization officers said it would be the first time in the history of the office that such a large number had appeared in a body.

As a Result of Yesterday's Postponed Date, Huggins Hopes to Land the World's Series Plum

Giants and Yankees Both Helped by Postponement; Mays and Douglas, Today

New York Regards It as Almost Certain That the Pitchers Who Hurled the Opening World's Series Contest, Will Be Rivals Again Today—Rest Will Help "Babe" Ruth.

By J. Roy Stockton,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Mascots and magnates, batboys and bookmakers, rabid rooters of whichever persuasion—Giant or Yankee—found comfort today in the rainstorm which blew over New York an hour and a half before game time and prevented the playing of the fourth game in the contest for the world's baseball title. It was one of those peculiar strokes which strategists in both camps complacently accepted as making better their position and strength.

Of course, the Giants regretted for a moment that the delay prevented their carrying on, when they thought they had the Yankees on the run. It was a bit too bad, they reasoned, that they could not get at the Yankees again before Huggins' men had a chance to recover their morale, which reasonably was supposed to have been weakened by that terrible 13-to-5 trouncing.

But, on the other hand, it gives the Giant pitchers more time to prepare. Nehf will be ready tomorrow if Douglas should falter.

The Yankees, on the other hand, welcome the delay, as the 24 hours will enable Ruth to come nearer to a condition which will permit him to play again. The Babe had an abscess on his left arm, just above the elbow, and it was lanced today The doctor told him he would be unable to get into today's game, and that possibly he might not be able to participate any further in the series. But Ruth refused to accept this pessimistic view.

However, there were grains of comfort to make up for the apparent slaps of fortune, and everybody made the best of it, except the holders of one-day tickets, whose business prevented their staying over for the postponed game. And they did the best they could and easily disposed of their rain checks to the speculators who sprang up like mushrooms outside the Polo Grounds, announcing they would buy or sell. They buy and sell everything on the streets of New York, by the way.

Even the Weather Commercialized.

Umbrella peddlers with arms full of rain sticks reaped a harvest of dollars from the crowds, and clothing merchants even rushed from their stores with bundles of raincoats and light overcoats, thrusting them under the noses and into the faces of shiverers who, leaving home or office in the warm morning, were unprepared for the chilly blasts which whipped the rain.

Psychological Effect of Giants' 13-5 Victory Being Figured by the Dopesters

Baseball diagnosticians and prognosticators, as the silly persons might be called who insist on predicting the outcome of every sporting event, despite the fact that history has proved the impotence of baseball "dope," are now basing their calculations on the effect that the 13-5 drubbing will have on the Yankees.

Almost every prediction is hemmed in with "ifs" and "ands" on tomorrow's game There is unanimity of opinion that the next game will be the turning point in the series. If the Giants, who have won one game to the Yankees' two, take the American Leaguers' measure tomorrow and square the series, many believe that the betting odds will go back to quotations favoring Clan McGraw. If the return to the hill of Carl Mays restores the Yankees' strength, and they take another game, the Giants' chances will be reduced to atomic size.

If Mays should lose, it is said, the confidence that carried young Waite Hoyt through the second game of the series to a brilliant victory would be hard to regain. If the Giants hammer Mays from the hill, young Hoyt will carry to the hill the impression that the Giants are a terrible steam-rolling machine and that his is an uphill battle. In his game of Thursday there were many moments where the slightest slip on his part would have changed the complexion of the contest.

But the futility of trying to predict stares at you from a chart of what has happened. Who would have suggested that Johnnie Rawlings, thrown into the breach at second base when McGraw could not buy Hornsby or hornswaggle Judge Landis into letting him sign Heine Groh, would bat .400 in three games? While Rawlings was getting four hits in 10 trips to the plate, the Giants' greatest slugger, George Kelly, the league's leading home run batter, was going hitless in 11 times at bat and striking out four times.

Rawlings the Series Surprise.

Rawlings' performance is the usual world series development where a player jumps from obscurity and plays far above his season's average. In the field he has missed several chances, but thus far has escaped without being charged with an error.

It is regarded as a certainty that Mays and Douglas will be the pitchers tomorrow, if the weather permits play. In the absence of Ruth Huggins wil send Fewster to left field, dropping him to Schang's place in the batting order and moving Schang to third place. If it is a bright, sunny day Fewster will move to right and Bob Meusel to left, as in left field the sun is in the fielder's eyes and Fewster cannot do well with that handicap.

Earl Smith, who was fined $200 by Judge Landis for his alleged verbal attack on the Yankees, Bob Meusel particularly, will be eligible to play, but it is likely that Snyder, who batted so well Friday, will be kept in the game.

Today's rain drenched the beacher crowd, which arrived early in such numbers as to indicate that the game would be witnessed by the largest crowd thus far. The athletes were in uniform, but did not appear on the field. The only entertainment was furnished by the band and by comedians Altrock and Schacht, who put on a rowboat pantomime, on the tarpaulin-covered infield.

It was evident early that it would be impossible to play, but the crowd huddled under what shelter it could find until the umpires, who were forced by commission rules to wait until 2 o'clock, went through the formality of walking out on the field for a conference and decided that the water was wet.

Pittsburg Beats W. Virginia 21-13

90-Yard Run by Mountaineers' Fullback Feature of Hard-Fought Football Game.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 8.—In one of the most spectacular football games ever witnessed here, featured by terrific line plunging and sensational long runs, the University of Pittsburg triumphed over West Virginia University at Forbes Field today, 21 to 13.

Pitt outplayed the mountaineers in line bucking, but the West Virginians excelled at the aerial game.

A 90-yard run by George Hill, the West Virginia fullback, in the last period for a touchdown, was outstanding feature. He took a kick in his own 10-yard line and ran it back for a score.

Oberlin Defeats Ohio State, 7-6

Light Backs of Victors Carry Ball 85 Yards on Successive Downs for Touchdown.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 8.—Ohio State's Western Conference prospects were given a setback today when Oberlin, a small up-State college, accomplished the unexpected and defeated the Buckeyes, 7 to 6.

Ohio State showed little of the driving offensive which earned the Conference championship last year, and was unable to stop the swift Oberlin backs, who carried the ball from their own 15-yard line over the Buckeye goal on successive first downs in the third period.

Ohio's only score came in the first period, when left end Huffman blocked a punt, recovered it and ran 20 yards across the goal line. Pixley failed to kick goal.

'Has-Been" Kilbane Proved Huge Surprise When He Kayoed Frush

Public Generally Believed Champion Was All In and Was "Selling Out" the Title to the Highest Bidder — Loser, Who Drew Only $2500, Also Badly Shocked.

By Robert Edgren.
(Copyright, 1921.)

As Jimmy Dougherty, the Leiperville philanthropist, says, Johnny Kilbane "came back with bells on" when he knocked out Danny Frush of Baltimore in the seventh round.

Danny Frush was the second Baltimorean to razz Kilbane into a championship match when everyone was sure Kilbane had dropped into old age and lost his punch.

The other young gentleman from Baltimore was George Chaney. Like Frush, Chaney looked like a coming champion. He had a long list of knockouts to his credit. He was a go-getter. He polished them off in a round.

So along in 1916 he challenged Kilbane, who was taking life easy, having been champion for four years, and was so disagreeably persistent that Johnny went into hard training and announced that he'd punch Chaney's rep as full of holes as Swiss cheese.

Chaney met Kilbane Sept. 4, 1916. He was a rugged, rough fighter, with big shoulders, big hands and a southpaw wallop. Kilbane fairly massacred him. Knocked him out in three rounds. There was no more talk of Kilbane as a "poor old has-been."

He retired to comparative ease again, taking on a small bout occasionally for revenue and caring little about challenges. He had shown he could beat the best featherweights. He boxed Freddy Welsh, Frankie Fleming, Young Kansas, and two or three other good men, and then thought he might as well take over the lightweight championship, as he was getting big for the feather class.

This was Kilbane's one mistake. He tried for the lightweight title just when we had the best lightweight champion in many years—Benny Leonard. Benny outboxed and outpunched Kilbane, and knocked him out in three rounds. That is, Kilbane was out when his manager, Jimmy Dunn, leaped into the ring to save him from taking the long count, throwing a towel ahead of him as token of defeat.

Kilbane as boxing instructor at Camp Sherman, did fine work during the war. Afterward he boxed a little, but didn't take the trouble to make weight, and seemed careless about getting into his old condition.

Johnny was a successful business man in his home town, in politics, all wrapped up in his large family, and tired of boxing, anyway. Last year he seemed to be slipping. His speed was less dazzling. His punch didn't go past the no-decision mark. In seven fights he landed only one knockout, on a second rater.

Benny Valgar, the skinny, fast rap-a-tap boxer, outpointed him and made him look a little clumsy—probably the first time Kilbane ever look clumsy in the ring.

So everyone thought it was about time for Johnny to retire and let some other good featherweight have the title.

He Wasn't Selling Out.

Danny Frush, coming along fast and showing a good enough punch for a champion, got the chance. Kilbane consented to fight him for a consideration—$60,000 for fighting and $3000 for his autograph to the articles.

Frush got $2500. He was expected to make his profit afterward if he won the championship.

It was a hard bargain Kilbane drove. But the public regarded his end as the price of the championship. At 32 Kilbane is a veteran of 14 years in the ring. His black hair is turning gray. He wears a few decorative wrinkles. He was supposed to be making a farewell appearance.

Frush showed plenty of gameness and punching power. He outboxed Kilbane at times, outslugged him now and then, but to the astonishment of the crowd, Kilbane fought a rough, spiteful fight, like a coming champion, rather than a fading one. He knocked Frush down in the third, the sixth, and three times in the seventh.

He knocked Frush down with the right and with the left.

There was plenty of "kick" in the old champion's fists. He had trained hard for the fight, was in fine condition, and showed all the form that made him champion. So now it will be some time before the idea that Johnny is a "poor, old has-been" crops up again.

Kilbane a Lightweight.

At that, Kilbane wasn't a featherweight. He didn't weigh in. He was a lightweight. His weight was unofficially given out as 128 pounds. Frush weighed in at 126. Champions in the weighing-in classes have a trick of growing heavy and forcing contenders to meet them at increased weights. The featherweight limit was once 112 pounds. It grew gradually to 122 and there it stayed for years, although 126 pounds is now recognized as the featherweight limit in some countries.

Kilbane may be a little heavy for the class, but he is and has been a remarkable little fighting man. When he started in Cleveland in 1917 he was a slim little fellow, 5 feet 5 inches tall, fast as a streak, smiling, handsome, symmetrically built.

He wasn't a great puncher. Now and then he won a fight with a knockout, but usually his bouts went the limit and he won on points. He was so clever that in a year or two he was fighting the top notchers in the feather class.

His first sensational work in the ring was when he met Joe Rivers, the great little Mexican fighter, in California, in 1911. In May, Rivers won a decision over Kilbane in 20 rounds.

Sept. 4 Kilbane had a return match. He told all his friends that he'd knock Rivers out. It was a whale of a fight, rip-tear from start to finish. And Kilbane pulled through a terrific hammering and beat Rivers down in 16 rounds, knocking him cleanly out.

It was Kilbane's only knockout in 15 fights that year. But he knocked out the most dangerous man he met. His reputation was made. The following February he met Featherweight Champion Abe Attell, who had been invincible for many years. He beat Attel on a decision in 20 rounds and won the title.

Disliked K. O.

After that, as champion, Kilbane held back his knockout punch. He was content to box at high speed, dancing around the ring, ducking or pushing aside punches, laughing at his opponents and nodding to his friends at the ringside.

In 1912 I saw him box Johnny Dundee in New York. Dundee was becoming famous for his jumping-jack tactics, and his curious trick of bending low and thrusting his jaw out to meet a blow, which he avoided by moving a few inches.

Kilbane thought fighting Dundee was a joke. He imitated Dundee's movements, jumped when he jumped, and made a hippodrome of the fight. The spectators wanted action from a champion. Kilbane who enjoyed showing his cleverness, couldn't understand why the crowd didn't have as much fun out of it as he did. He went along in his own way. Johnny told me then that he didn't like to knock out an opponent, and wouldn't do it if he could win clearly on points. Packey McFarland had the same idea.

Now and then Kilbane varied his exhibitions of uncanny boxing skill by doing a little real fighting, and when he wanted to fight he was a streak of blue lightning with a thunderbolt driving behind his tight-closed fist.

In 1913 he knocked out five men, which was a record for him. In 1915 he fought 15 no-decision fights without a knockout, meeting good men like Benny Leonard, Patsy Brannigan, Eddy Morgan, Young Kansas, Kid Williams, Mel Coogan, Ritchie Mitchell and Cal Delaney.

The fight with Kid Williams was the most interesting of the lot, six rounds, in Philadelphia. Kid Williams was a great bantamweight champion, a sturdy little fellow and a crashing, snorting terror in the ring. He wanted the featherweight title, too, and thought Kilbane was "going back."

Somehow they're always picking Kilbane as a "poor old has-been." Many people thought Williams would beat Johnny. But Johnny danced circles around him and jabbed him so fast for six rounds that Williams was as dizzy as a hop-head in a merry-go-round.

The next year Kilbane knocked out Patsy Cline in two rounds and Willie Jackson in five, as well as George Chaney in three. This was about as much knocking out as he needed to do to show he was still a champion.

Even With Ruth Out, Yankees Will Not Suffer, Fullerton Declares

Fewster, Fast and Capable, May Be Able to Accomplish More in Coming Games Than the Bambino, Who Has a Bad Arm and Leg—Rain a Disappointment to Giants Yesterday.

By Hugh S. Fullerton.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Rain forced an armistice in the New York civil war today, and the cold, clammy sheets of wetness which swept over the grounds, already packed with spectators, may have decided the series. The rain was almost as good for the Yankees as a victory, and a severe blow to the hopes of the Giants.

The dope indicated plainly that the Yankee's great hope of winning series was that Mays or Hoyt, the stars of the Yankee outfit and the only pitchers they have who can cope with the Giant batters, could not repeat quickly after pitching hard games. Mays it is well known, needs four or more days' rest before he can pitch another game at his best form. Hoyt tears himself to pieces pitching, weakens toward the end of a game and exhausts himself so that he has a hard time recuperating and does not as a rule come back strong until he has had a week's rest.

On the basis of the dope, which indicates that, if the Yankees are to win they must win with Mays and Hoyt, the day of rain which gives both pitchers an extra day of rest is a godsend. The dope indicates clearly that the Yankees are to win the next game with Mays pitching against Phil Douglas, and I want to say confidentially that the rainy day did not do Douglas any good, if it did not do him absolute harm.

The Yankees certainly gained considerable advantage because of the rain and, if the rain or wet grounds prevents the Sunday game, the Yankees will be a tremendous favorite to win the series. With Mays and Hoyt well rested the Giants will be at tremendous disadvantage for the remaining games.

Ruth a Real "Game Bird."

The Yankee stock had taken a tremendous slump prior to the falling of the rain today. Ruth is in a bad way and is suffering from a boil on the arm and an injury received early in the series. The big fellow has been working under a heavy disadvantage and he never showed his quality as well as he has done in concealing the fact that he is crippled from the Giant pitchers. Hit hitting in all three games has been unnatural and he has been taking strikes and refusing to hit at stages in which ordinarily he swings hardest. His hitting style has been so off color that it has been evident to me that something was amiss—and now it develops that his arm has been in such condition that he has not been able to swing at low balls without suffering excruciating pain. Whether the Giant pitchers have known this or not I cannot tell, but they have pitched low and slow to Ruth and succeeded beyond all hopes in stopping him.

Ruth may be out of several more games. But the Yankee team is not materially weakened, because Fewster, with his speed, and with his condition improved by a long rest, is not a handicap to any team and he increases the defensive strength of the Yankees. Ruth, however, expects to be back in action within a short time.

Fans Disappointed.

The calling off of the game today was a tremendous disappointment to the fans. New York, which has been rather apathetic toward this series, partly on account of the prices, partly because the newspapers scared the fans away by claiming no one could get inside of Harlem because of the crowds. The crowd came today early, and sat and shivered and got drenched hoping for play which was impossible.

The calling off of the game is certain to cause a wild scramble in the next contest, as the ticket holders for today and the rain checks hold precedence over the tickets which have been treasured against the Sunday game, which means a scramble and a lot more dissatisfaction over the arrangements.

Odds Should Be 2 to 1.

The wagering on this series is one of the oddest things I ever saw. The odds this morning, with the Yankees leading 2 to 1, were 7 to 5 the Giants would win today, and 5 to 6 that the Giants would win the series—odds that are ridiculous. The moment the game was called off the odds switched to 2 to 1 that the Yankees will win the series and better than that that Mays will beat Douglas in the next game.

It is a weird series, and promises to be even more weird before it is over.

The prospects for rain tomorrow are fine—and another day of rain will simply add to the Yankees' chances of victory, as it will give Mays and Hoyt more time and Ruth a chance to recover.

Iowa Wins From Notre Dame 10-7

Hawkeyes' First-Period Attack Too Much for South Bend Team to Overcome.

By the Associated Press.

IOWA CITY, Ia., Oct. 8.—A first period offense consisting largely of off-tackle smashes by Aubrey Devine and line plunges by Gordon Locke through holes made principally by Slater, the big Hawkeye tackle and Heldt, Iowa's center, gave the University of Iowa football team a 10 to 7 victory over Notre Dame University here this afternoon. A touchdown early in the initial period by Locke and a long drop kick by A. Devine a few minutes later gave the Hawkeyes their points. Notre Dame scored its seven points on a touchdown in the second period and a goal after touchdown.

After Iowa had scored its first points, it was unable to penetrate far into Notre Dame's territory, while the Indiana team, playing desperately, opened up an assortment of forward passes intermixed with crossbucks that kept the Hawkeye team guessing and that were so successful that Iowa partisans were uneasy most of the time.

The lineup:

Iowa, 10.	Position.	Notre Dame, 7.

Aggies' Overhead Attack Smothers Washington, 21-0

Pikers Show Well at Straight Football, but Have Weak Defense Against Kansas' Forward Passes.

FARMERS USE SUBS IN FINAL QUARTER

Pikeway Team Unable to Develop Consistent Attack Either of the Rushing or the Aerial Type.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MANHATTAN, Kan., Oct. 8.—Two football teams, evenly matched in straight football, but greatly over balanced in the overhead game, met here today—Washington University and the Kansas Aggies. It was the opening Valley conference contest and the Aggies, playing a brilliant open game, swept the Pikers off their feet in the second and third periods, winning, 21 to 0. The last period was played by the Aggies' second team.

Washington had a bit the edge throughout the first quarter, which was a kickers' battle between Thompson of the Pikers and Stark of the Aggies. Neither side gained a distinct advantage, although once the Aggies were obliged to punt from behind their goal. The ball was on the Aggies' 25-yard line in Washington's possession when the period closed.

The first two Aggie scores came in quick succession in the second period. Toward the middle of the quarter Swartz received a punt and carried it to the Washington's 45-yard line. Three successful passes, Swartz to Burton twice, and Swartz to Stark once, followed. Then the Aggies were forced to kick, and Stark sent the ball out of bounds on the Washington 2-yard line. Thompson kicked from behind his goal line to Stark, who returned 20 yards to the Piker's 15-yard line. A pass, Stark to Burton, netted three yards for the Aggies. Sears made three through the line. Then Stark received a pass, which he carried across for the first touchdown.

A Washington fumble, which Schmitz of the Aggies recovered, led to the second touchdown a few minutes later. Two passes, Swartz to Burton, and Swartz to Sebring, advanced the ball 25 yards. Sears scrambled through guard for seven more and first down. With three to go and less than a minute to play, Sears cracked the line for the rest of the necessary gain, scoring the second touchdown just before the whistle ended the half.

Bad Pass Hurts Pikers.

The third touchdown was made in about the same way. Shortly after the beginning of the third quarter, on an exchange of punts, it was Washington's ball on their own 40-yard line. Thompson dropped back to kick and Hafner, Piker center, threw it over Tommy's head. Thompson fell on the ball on his own 20-yard line. And Shanley punted out of bounds on the Washington 35-yard line. Successful passes, mixed with short gains off tackle, put the ball in the Washington danger zone, and a pass, Swartz to Sebring, resulted in the last score of the contest. Sebring kicked all three goals.

Head Coach Bechman began sending in substitutes as soon as the victory seemed clinched, but the Pikers couldn't get an offensive started and the game closed with Washington showing flashes of forward passing, but never with consistency.

The contest ended with the ball in possession of the Aggies on the Washington 25-yard line.

Heavy Tigers Batter Billikens, 32-0; Breaks of the Game Favor Visiting Team

Missouri University Eleven Forced to Fight at Top Speed to Show Decisive Advantage Over Locals.

St. Louis Fumbles Contributed to Scores, Which Included Touchdowns, a Field Goal and a Safety.

The University of Missouri football team imbibed the spirit of the State centennial celebration, yesterday afternoon, by rambling through, around, and over the St. Louis University Billikens for a 32 to 0 victory. That convincing total represents all the possible ways of football scoring, including four touchdowns, two goals after touchdown, a field goal, and a safety. Such an accumulation bespeaks a well-rounded Tiger offensive. The local scoring blank speaks for itself in regard to its ineffective attack.

And yet the figures do not tell the whole tale. Judging from them and the analytical table of the game's progress, one would think that the Boone County athletes had a rollicking afternoon of it, with very little opposition. As a matter of fact, the Billiken adherents have much to be satisfied with. They saw a St. Louis University football team fight, and that's something in itself.

Billikens Badly Outweighed.

Those Billikens, outweighed at least 12 pounds to the man, seemed to be about the only individuals in the Sportsman's Park enclosure who did not know that they were in for a beating. They dug their cleats in the ground, spat on their hands, and hurled themselves against the odds. They tackled fiercely and simply reeked with determination; but it availed them not. It was as if an army of Spartans faced modern shrapnel with bare hands. The Billikens did not know enough football to cope with the more experienced and brawnier minions of Coach Jimmy Phelan.

There were a number of things that the Blue and White lacked to a woeful degree. They had not the slightest definition to their play, because they were without a leader. A trio of quarterbacks endeavored to lead them against the State players, but each showed an uncertainty in generalship, which made their effective attack unimpressive. They shifted with painful sluggishness, and checked and rechecked signals until their own followers bellowed for action.

There was not a real forward passer on the team, and the same thing might be said of the receiving ends. Yet these tyro leaders essayed to continue their efforts at the aerial game, although the abovementioned deficiencies were shown time and again. Of course, it is far to much to expect that Coach Steve O'Rourke should assemble a makeshift squad and teach them perfected open play as well as the fundiments in a month's time. It is well to say that O'Rourke taught his men to fight; whereas other Billiken mentors have failed in years.

Another thing demonstrated yesterday was that the locals will have to recover from their fumbling tendencies. No less than nine times did they fumble, and on six of these occasions the ball went to the opposition. Missouri erred in this manner a half-dozen times; but their fumbling was due to the fierceness of the St. Louis tackling. St. Louis fumbled without provocation. Perhaps it was due to stagefright, or perhaps to overanxiety; but whatever the cause, it was not varsity work

Tiger Line Is Weakened.

The Tigers did not appear as strong as last year. They have a wonderful set of backs, especially Lincoln, who gained more than 200 yards by himself. How this young leviathan smashes opposing groups, although he goes to the line standing up, is, indeed, a gridiron wonder. Lincoln violates a cardinal principle of backfield play; but he gets away with it famously. Kershaw and Bundschu are a scrappy, shifty pair of halfbacks, and "Chuck" Lewis is the same old wonder. But the Tiger line shows that Travis is missed and the ends are inferior to last season's.

O'Rourke had previously announced that punting was going to be his defense, and it obviously was. Fifteen times Drace was called back to kick and on a number of occasions he put the ball back in enemy's territory, after his goal had been threatened. However, several other times, he was hurried when the Tiger forwards broke through and his boots were pitiful. As a result of these weak efforts, his average was brought down to 31 yards. And to show that Missouri had not everything its own way, Lewis had to punt 13 times. He averaged about four yards more to the kick than Drace.

The Game in Detail.

St. Louis was in hot water from the start when Safety-man McConachie fumbled a punt on his 25-yard line and a Tiger fell on it. However, a favorable break immediately followed when Missouri was penalized 15 yards for tripping. The Tigers showed that they were going to try everything, when their second play was an attempted pass. It was intercepted and the ball changed hands. There was another St. Louis fumble. Then "Chuck" Lewis essayed a drop kick. It failed and everybody breathed easier.

However, the Missouri scoring was not long delayed, as subsequent events proved. Lewis returned a 40-yard punt to the Billiken 25-yard line, and five line smashes carried the oval to the one-yard line. Lincoln and Bundschu did the line smashing, wriggling through with the frenzied locals hanging to them. From this vantage Kershaw, a former Central High star, punctured tackle for the first touchdown. Lewis then booted goal.

St. Louis Has a Chance.

The first St. Louis opportunity to score presented itself and went scurrying away early in the second period. Bundschu fumbled on his 30-yard line and Roche was after the ball and had a clear road through the Tiger land. But he handled it like he had bandages on his hands and the ball escaped him. Then Matheson dropped on it on the 13-yard line.

It might be pertinent to mention that two Missourians were hanging around during the fumbling bee, but didn't seem interested enough to make any personal investigation in the matter. Blue and white banners were unfurled and there was much hurrahing when the "Bills" took the offense at this stage, but a fumble by Horton put the quietus on matters.

Another Tiger score came late in this period, after a spirited punting duel between Drace and Lewis. Finally "Chuck" grabbed a kick and returned 20 yards from his own 35-yard line. The burly backs from Rollins Field then advanced 30 yards on line bucks, but were held for three downs when 15 yards from the posts. Lewis then dropped back to the 25-yard line and drop-kicked three points for Old Mizzoo.

Another fumble gave the visitors their next score in the form of a safety, early in the second half. McConachie fumbled a punt on his 17-yard line, but recovered, because the Tiger ends had been well boxed upfield. Everything was set for a punt on the next play, but Geraghty passed far over Drace's head and the ball bounded behind the Billikens' lines. Drace fell on the ball, and at least saved a touchdown. To relieve Geraghty of any stigma from the fault it should be mentioned that he was battered and beaten to a frazzle at the time, after having played a truly heroic game. Shortly afterward he had to be removed from his position; but his coach and fellows were proud of him as he made his exit.

Fumble Help Billikens.

The next attack was sponsored by O'Rourke's men. They were put into an offensive position, when Lewis fumbled on his 40-yard line, allowing Thornton to grab the ball and scamper 10 yards before being downed. The latter was off like a flash to a touchdown, but a speedy Tiger caught up with him and dived successfully at the fleeting figure. A short pass, Donovan to Finnegan, was good for eight yards, and five yards through the Tiger center gave first down on the six-yard mark. Three bucks netted five yards and two feet of the required distance, but the fourth effort was a failure. The punch was lacking.

There was quite a rumpus concerning the next score. Hume had made eight yards from his 40-yard mark, and then Lincoln found an opening in the middle of the line. He smashed through for 15 yards and was knocked to the ground; but was up in a jiffy and off for a touchdown.

The victims claimed that the Tiger had been downed, as the forward progress of the ball was stopped; but the officials ruled otherwise, as the athlete was not at that time being hampered by an opopnent. Score, 19—0.

Scoring continued early in the final session. The Missouri battering ram started battering on the 20-yard mark and battered the distance in three tries. Lewis' 15-yard snake dance was the largest contribution while Linicoln went over. The kick was not made, as some sapient local youth dashed from under his goal-post when the referee dropped his hand and kicked the ball from the mound, before the kicker was able to get his bearings. It was good to see that the "Bills" had their heads up, despite the trimming which was being administered them.

Billikens Strong at Close.

Twice during this period, St. Louis had scoring chances, but once they were nipped by an intercepted pass and the other time by a poor pass from center. The intercepetd pass came just when they were having success at the rushing game.

The locals were on the offense most of this period, but of course it must be remembered that Coach Phelan sent in a number of substitutes at this stage of the game. Everything was brought to a close shortly after Allan Lincoln had found a hole on his own 39-yard line and ripped through it and evaded the secondary defense or 61 yards and a touchdown. Packwood added the final point, and everybody went home wondering whether they should be disappointed or satisfied with the balm of Billiken courage.

PRINCIPIA FOOTBALL ELEVEN ROMPS OVER YEATMAN HIGH, 27-0

The Principia Academy football team defeated the eleven from Yeatman High School, 37 to 0, in a game on the former's campus yesterday afternoon. For the first three quarters the Academy eleven had no difficulty in keeping the ball in the North Siders' territory. Yeatman showed some improvement in the last quarter, but was unable to cross Principia's goal line.

Opening the game with a variety of plays, the Principia players took the ball down to their opponents' territory and made the first score toward the end of the quarter. Allie Crouch carried the ball over for a touchdown and then kicked the goal.

In the second quarter Yeatman had possession of the ball twice. On one occasion they were forced to kick and on the other lost the ball in an attempted forward pass. Principia continued its tactics of the first quarter and took the ball close to the North Siders' goal, where Right Halfback Berninger scored the second touchdown of the game on an end run. Crouch kicked the goal, bringing the score to 14 to 0.

Principia started the secon dhalf with a rush. The Academy eleven was held for downs on the 20-yard line and was forced to kick. Yeatman could not gain on the next four plays and lost the ball. By the Associated Press.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Oct. 8.—Pennsylvania State College piled up a score of 35 points against North Carolina State, in their football battle today, while the Southerners were dashing themselves to pieces against their opponents' heavy line, in a futile effort to make a touchdown.

North Carolina's closest approach to a touchdown came in the third period, when it rushed the ball to Pennsylvania State's five-yard line. Here, however, the Keystone line held fast and the viistors could not break through.

CLEVELAND, AIDED BY RANKEN FUMBLES, WINS BY SCORE OF 19 TO 0

Cleveland High School's eleven triumphed over the Ranken Trades School football team, 19—0, at High School Field yesterday afternoon. The only feature was the stubborn playing of the losers. In spite of the fact that Cleveland had an obviously heavier aggregation, the score would have been much smaller had it not been for six fumbles by Ranken players. On four occasions, South Side players recovered the ball for long gains, one for 35 yards. The eagerness of the losers also cost them a total of 65 yards in penalties for roughness and off-side.

Cleveland started with a rush. Plank returned the kick-off 30 yards to his own 40-yard line and four successive first downs, an end run and a line plunge by Paule scored the first marker for Coach Fenenga's boys. Starkloff kicked goal. Shortly afterwards, a fumble by Ranken gave Cleveland the ball within the 20-yard line and Williams carried it over for the second touchdown. Starkloff missed the goal.

The second and third quarters saw the Mechanics fighting their hardest, with the result that Cleveland could make no consistent headway. Drozda, Ranken fullback, played brilliantly, stopping Cleveland backs by shoe-string tackles and frequently tearing his way through the offense for gains.

The final Cleveland touchdown was registered late in the fourth quarter when Ranken fumbled a punt which Cleveland recovered on the 5-yard line. The Ranken line withstood three plunges, but on the fourth gave way and Williams again scored. The subsequent kick was missed.

The line-ups:

Ranken.	Position.	Cleveland.
Bretsinger	Left guard	Starkloff

Harvard Defeats Indiana, 19-0; Rain Ruined Our Attack--Stiehm

Fitts, of Crimson, Intercepts Pass and Runs 78 Yards for Score in Final Period—Wet Weather Nullifies Western Team's Aerial Game.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 8.—Harvard defeated Indiana today, 19 to 0. An Eastern eleven in the making met a Western Conference team almost intact from last year and stopped it without great effort. The Hoosiers appeared unable to get started, lacking the strategy to get under way, and when Harvard fumbles gave them the ball, they did not seem to have the strength to follow up the advantage for scores.

For the first two periods Indiana was content to kick every time it got the ball, with two minor rushing exceptions; this nothwithstanding that Kyle's kicks were falling short. In the last two periods the Hoosiers, twice recovering Harvard fumbles, tried to go forward by rushes and by forward passes and succeeded to the extent of several first downs, but never to the point that a score appeared possible.

Rain came down in sheets during the last half of the contest and to this coach Jumbo Stiehm of the Hoosiers, attributed his team's defeat.

Pitts Makes 78-Yard Run.

"The weather man beat us," he said. "We had planned to open up our forward passes in the second half, but the rain came and made it impossible." He added, however, that his team was a disappointment in its negative play in the early periods, part of which he attributed to an injury to Hanny, right end, which lessened his effectiveness.

Except for a 78-yard run from an intercepted forward pass, made by Pitts at the outset of the fourth period for a touchdown and Harvard's last score, there was little in the play of the Harvard team today that stood out as noteworthy.

"An intelligent team," was Stiehm's appraisal of his successful opponents.

Buell Boots Field Goal.

The Crimson's other touchdown was an individual effort also, Gehrke catching a short punt by Kyle and scampering 12 yards to the goal. Buell made on field goal from the 35-yard line for the Crimson's initial score in the opening period, and failed in another. Pfaffman, a substitute, booted one from the 30-yard line in the second period.

PRINCETON DEFEATS COLGATE TEAM, 19-0

By the Associated Press.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 8.—Princeton humbled Colgate's football eleven, 19 to 0, today, in a contest that was harder fought than the score would indicate. Playing on a rain-soaked gridiron, the visitors forced the Tigers to battle for every inch they gained. In the first period the best Princeton could score was a safety, Mason falling on the ball behind his own goal line after Keck had blocked Sanford's punt.

Princeton added 17 points to her score in the second period by mingling irresistible line plunges with effective forward passes, but was held scoreless in the last half. Colgate's effort to score by playing an open game availed nothing. The Tigers used 11 substitutes.

YALE'S AERIAL ATTACK BEATS NORTH CAROLINA

By the Associated Press.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 8.—Yale defeated the University of North Carolina in Yale Bowl, this afternoon, 34 to 0. The first three periods were played in a heavy downpour of rain, but about 6000 spectators braved pneumonia and chills to watch the Blue eleven swamp the warriors from Chapel Hill. The visitors failed to make a first down against Yale.

Yale showed a surprising aerial attack. In the first half, four forward passes out of seven attempts were successful. One from Aldrich to Becket paved the way to the first touchdown by Aldrich. In the second period Aldrich went through the left side of the Carolina line for a 30-yard advance and a touchdown.

Neidlinger intercepted a Carolina forward pass in the third period and ran 35 yards for a touchdown. In the last period, Wight and Knapp battered the Southerners' line for consistent gains and Wight went over for the final Yale touchdown. North Carolina held Yale on downs twice in the last period.

WESTERN RESERVE EASY VICTIM FOR NAVY, 53-0

By the Associated Press.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 8.—Western Reserve of Cleveland fell easy victim to Navy on the football field here today, 53 to 0. Despite the overwhelming score, Western Reserve fought pluckily to the end, but they gave their best efforts in the first period, when they held the Middies without a count. After that Navy scored rather handily and many substitutes were given a chance. The Reserves never seriously menaced Annapolis' goal line. The lineup:

Navy (53)	Position.	West Reserve (0)

Chicago Lucky to Beat Purdue 9-0 In Hard Struggle

Touchdown and Safety Result in Victory for Maroons When Two Punts Are Blocked.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 8.—The Goddess of Fortune beamed on Stagg Field today, giving the Maroons a 9-0 victory over Purdue. Two blocked kicks turned a stubbornly-fought battle into a Maroon victory, although both sides battled evenly most of the way.

Chicago used the forward pass effectively and several times forced the ball into deep Boilermaker territory. The husky Indianans held at the crucial points, however, and Chicago was unable to push the ball across.

The game was largely a punting duel with the ball in Purdue's territory most of the time. Chicago gained more consistently on the offensive, mainly through Purdue's right tackle and the Pyott-Romney aerial combination, which entered the game after the game was well under way.

The Maroons scored first in the second period. Purdue's line had halted a Maroon march on the Indianan's 2-yard line. Strohmeier broke through the Purdue line to block an attempted punt by Miller and Fletcher fell on the ball for a touchdown. Capt. McGuire kicked goal.

Another break of luck for Chicago netted two more points in the third period, when Fletcher blocked another punt and the Purdue kicker, Williams, fell on the ball for a Chicago safety.

Chicago used many substitutes during the game. The opening lineups were:

Chicago 9. Purdue 0.

WISCONSIN WINS FROM S. D. AGGIES, 24 TO 3

By the Associated Press.

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 8.—Wisconsin's back field men tore up the South Dakota Aggies' defense today and with straight line plays ran up a score of 24 to 3 before they slowed down. It was the first real opposition of the year for the Badgers.

Wisconsin's fumbles caused the loss of at least one touchdown and gave the Aggies a chance to score their field goal, a pretty kick by Hoon.

Michigan Crushes Case.

By the Associated Press.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 8.—Michigan crushed Case, its ancient foe, 64 to 0, here today. Sogginess of the gridiron slowed the play at times. Yost's eleven remained close to straight football. Only one of the few forward passes attempted figured in the scoring. Case invaded Michigan territory but once.

Miss Stirling Is Beaten in Final Of Golf Tourney

Atlanta Girl Loses Title Held Since 1916 to Miss Hollins, 5 Up and 4.

Miss Stirling a Real American, but British Subject, Father Says

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 8.

DR. A. W. STIRLING, father of Miss Alexa Stirling, former champion golfer of the United States, today explained the political status of his daughter, declaring that, while technically, under the British laws, she is a British subject, nevertheless, as a golfer and, under American laws, she is "absolutely an American." Dr. Stirling said:

"Considered as a political technicality, under the British law, Alexa is a British subject, as she was born of British parents in Atlanta. This is at variance with the American law, which makes any child born in America an American. Alexa as a golfer is absolutely American, born in America, learning her game in America and playing always from an American club—The Atlanta Athletic Club.

"She went abroad on a British passport, by reason of the political status mentioned. In England and Scotland she was referred to always as 'The American.' Only a few of my personal friends knew that, under the British law, she was technically a British subject. I am surprised that any question should have been suggested as to her being an American golfer."

Dr. Stirling is a Scotchman and Mrs. Stirling an English woman, and neither has been naturalized.

By the Associated Press.

DEAL, N. J., Oct. 8.—A new champion woman golfer of the United States was crowned on the fourteenth green of the Hollywood Golf Club today, Miss Marion Hollins, of Great River, New York, succeeding Miss Alexa Stirling of Atlanta, Ga., who had held the title since 1916.

In the final round of the week's annual national tournament Miss Hollins defeated Miss Stirling by 5 and 4 in a 36-hole match. Miss Stirling was never in the lead, and was 4 down after the morning play. Miss Hollins consistently outdrove her much younger opponent, and this told in the end in the strong wind which marked the morning play. They fared about alike in approaching and putting.

Heavy rain was falling as the afternoon play began. Before it had ceased Miss Stirling had cut her opponent's lead to 1 up, winning three of the first four holes in the afternoon. The minute the rain stopped Miss Hollins had better control of her long tee shots and began to increase her lead. At the turn in the afternoon she was 4 up. She lost two and won three of the last five holes.

Miss Stirling's Worst Defeat.

In being dethroned from the place which she had occupied as Queen of American golfers since she was 18 years old, Miss Stirling suffered her first defeat in a championship tournament from an American since she won the title. It was also the worst defeat of her career. This is the second title she has lost this summer, Miss Cecil Leitch having taken the Canadian championship from her. She was also defeated by Miss Leitch in the British championship tournament and failed to survive far in the tourney for the French title.

It was her first 36-hole match in an American championship event. Miss Hollins, as a committee chairman, had arranged for a 36-hole final, but if it had been 18 holes Miss Hollins would have won at the fifteenth green in the morning.

The championship thus is retained in American hands, although golf followers had expected Miss Cecil Leitch, champion of Great Britain, France and Canada, to take it. Of eight starters in the tournament at Hollywood who played as representing clubs from outside the United States, only three representing English clubs, qualified, and these were eliminated before the semifinals—the Misses Cecil and Edith Leitch and Mrs. Latham Hall, English-born wife of an American citizen.

Heisman's Coaching Plans Ruined By Interpretation of Shift Play

Princeton Football Dictator Declares Arbitrary Ruling as to What a "Full Stop" Means Will Break Up Penn Team's Special Form of Attack.

By W. W. (Bill) Roper.
Head Princeton Coach.
(Copyright, 1921.)

Before the opening of the season I have sometimes mentally built my team around a couple of exceptionally good men and have found my plans going astray because the men I had counted upon were not eligible to play when the season opened. But I have never had to face a situation where at the eleventh hour my entire plan of attack was swept away by a changed interpretation placed upon a rule that really did not seem to need any such interpretation.

This is exactly what has happened to John Heisman, the University of Pennsylvania coach. For years he has believed in the "shift play" which has been his offensive dogma. At the end of the 1920 season and after the Rules Committee had passed on the 1921 code, Heisman planned his attack for the coming season based upon the shift.

The rule was clear and explicit. Section 5 of rule 9 reads:

At the moment when the ball is put in play in a scrimmage, no player of the side which has the ball shall be in motion except that one man of the side having the ball may be in motion either directly or obliquely towards his own goal line or line extended. If the end is the man in motion another player must take his place on the line of scrimmage. A player shall not be ruled to be in motion if he has both feet stationary on the ground.

It would seem to me there was nothing doubtful or ambiguous about this rule. At the interpretation meeting of officials in New York the other evening, the shift came in for more than the usual amount of discussion and an interpretation was suggested that Heisman feels is alien to the rule itself. It was the consensus at the meeting, that sufficient time must elapse after the shift to permit the officials to decide that the men in motion have come to a full stop.

The officials, no matter what their technical knowledge, have no authority to change the rules, and it would seem that this almost amounts to changing a rule.

May Abandon Shift.

I saw the Penn team in action the other day and Heisman told me:

"I feel there will be so much uncertainty in the rule in regard to shift plays, that I have about decided to drop them from my repertory."

He may think better of it later, but there was no sign of the "Heisman shift" the day I saw his team work.

The coach who has to change his style of attack after the season has really begun is at a disadvantage. A rightly-equipped eleven goes on the field with a set of formations and developments growing out of them, carefully considered several months before the actual opening of the season. No coach can throw his team on the field one day and on the same day devise his formations and plays.

Personally, if Heisman does not come back to his famous shift, I think it may prove a blessing in disguise, as I never have felt plays from any shift formation are as strong as those from some other running attack built upon sounder lines than the shift.

The Penn squad sizes up much better than I thought it would. The line is really very rugged and powerful though just now a trifle slow. Heisman knows football thoroughly and has his coaching force very well organized. There is no loitering or loafing on the field and there was a snap to the practice in spite of the hot weather.

Heisman has used good judgment in securing the services of "Bill" Hollenback, who with Bell and Light, have the backfield in good shape for this stage of the season. Hollenback has the personality for a successful coach and I know the players will work their heads off for him.

There is this primary difference between the old and new football. The old rules, which required that the ball be handled on every play by two players in addition to the center, made it necessary to choose for quarterback a man who could be absolutely trusted to handle the ball cleanly and quickly whether or not he could think, run, catch punts or do any of the other things which are vital in the modern game.

No play could even start, unless the quarter took the pass from the center and got it to the runner and no amount of straegy or running ability or strength could offset a weakness in this one respect.

Under the new rules the quarter never need take a pass from the center and there is certainly no necessity for feeding the ball to the runner at any stage of the game.

All of the Penn offensive plays start from a direct pass, as I believe they should. I was particularly impressed with the makeup of the backfield though it looked a trifle light for heavy going. Whitehall is a natural football player and a mighty good punter. Whitmer runs hard and ought to make a fairly good man in the interference. Miller and Wray are fast and shifty.

Should Perfect Interference.

If I was making any criticism of the Penn backfield, it would be that it is top-heavy in running strength and not strong enough in inteference. Interference, while it was always a vital part of the game, has become a far more difficult affair to perfect under the new rules which forbid the old system of pulling and dragging a runner after he had been tackled.

There is no longer any way of atoning for a poor beginning by jerking a tackled runner along. The interference has to cut out his man before the tackle is made or not at all, and the tremendous dodging possibilities of the open game make this harder than ever to accomplish. Rightly played, this eternal conflict between interferer and tackler is the prettiest feature of the modern game and people who only watch the ball and fondly imagine that a good gain is due to the runner alone, or a loss attributed solely to his failure, miss the really fine points of football.

There is no way of giving proper credit to the interferer and this is really one serious defect in the game. I have often wished that some scoring system might be adopted similar to the baseball method of crediting both putout and assist, for it is more often unjust to credit all the gain to the runner than it would be to give full credit to the first baseman for a lightning play from deep third or short.

I have no doubt Wray, Miller and Whitehall will run wild against weak opposition, but when they get up against the Dartmouth and Pitt lines, they may find it a different proposition to gain ground.

I don't anticipate that Heisman will have the trying fall he had last year, but I have tasted victory and defeat myself, and I always try to boost the hardest when things look the gloomiest.

Forest Park Golf Team Gains Lead

Lynch With 154 Score for 36 Holes Has Best Card in Intercity Match.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 8.—Four golfers, representing the Forest Park Golf Club of St. Louis, today finished the first round five strokes up on a quartet of Memphians, carrying colors of the Memphis Associated Amateurs in the intercity series over the Colonial C. C. course.

Aggregate cards showed Forest Park's total as 659 for the 72 holes medal play. The locals retired for lunch one stroke in the lead with 329, but ran this to 664 in the afternoon.

The series will be resumed tomorrow with a similar test.

Today developed some excellent golf, some of mediocre caliber and some very poor shots. Cards ran for the most part in the 80s, but two players—Jack Wenzler of the home club, and former State champion, and Frank Lynch, Forest Park—getting 76s in the forenoon and Lynch a 78 on the second 18. They were paired together.

The cards:

Frank Lynch, Forest Park	76 78	—154
Ed Held, Forest Park	81 82	—163
John Pep, Forest Park	85 86	—171
Frank Pep, Forest ark	88 83	—171
Aggregate Forest Park		659
Jack Wenzler, Colonial	76 80	—156
Nelson Giddens, Overton Park	81 84	—165
Chasteen Harris, Colonial	82 81	—163
L. P. Jones, Overton Park	89 91	—180
Aggregate, M. A. A.		664

The St. Louis contingent, used to a pitch and run game, found much trouble with approaches. John Pep was the only one who consistently shot a mashie. They all had trouble with the greens, too. Of the visitors, not one could fathom the tricky Bermudas, which were a wee bit stiff and in consequence slow on some of the holes and lightning on others. Lynch, with one ball out of bounds on the ninth, turned in 35 in the morning.

Champion Scullins Face Screw Co., While Ben Millers Tackle DeAndries.

With the most promising products of the Municipal Soccer League of last year scattered through its ranks, the St. Louis Soccer League, probably the strongest professional soccer organization in the United States, will open its 1921-22 season at High School Field, Grand and Laclede avenues, this afternoon. Each of the four teams, the Ben Millers, Scullins, De Andries and St. Louis Screw Co., will take the field with two or more new players in positions which appeared weak last season.

The Scullins, with no marked changes in their lineup of last season, will take the field against the Screw Company in the first game, starting at 2 o'clock. This, and all future games in which the Screw Company participates, is apt to be a speedy affair. Manager Harry McCarthy, in his effort to build a winning combination, has brought in many likely youngsters.

Ratican's Ben Millers will be altered only at inside right, fullback and goal. Manager Pete, although not wholly recovered from a very serious illness, will be on the scene, weather permitting. "Hap" Marre is his field marshal.

The younger generation will get a fine opportunity to make good with the De Andries. Foley has signed half a dozen former Municipal stars whom he intends to use in the early league games.

Vincent Richards Ranked Third Best U. S. Tennis Star

New York Expert Places Him Above Johnson, Semifinalist in National Event.

Vincent Richards, three years junior champion, is singularly honored in the following article by Samuel Brookman, who submits a ranking of the first 10 players of the country, in both men's and women's division. Richards is placed third above the runner-up in the national championship, above Norris Williams, former champion and Davis Cup team member, and against Watson Washburn, another Davis Cup team member. Richards was not considered good enough to "make" the Davis Cup squad this year. Brookman writes of his selections in part:

"No difficulty is encountered until position three is reached in the men's list. William T. Tilden, of course, is at the top and not a soul in tennisdom will dispute his right to be there. In second place William M. Johnston of California is practically a unanimous choice. Outside of Vincent Richards, who surprised and defeated Tilden at Providence, and Zenzo Shimidzu, who came near beating him at Forest Hills, no player gave the champion as close a tussle this season as did Johnston in the national championship. Although ill from the effects of an attack of ptomaine poisoning, the Californian overcame a brilliant exhibition on the part of Vincent Richards in the third round of the tournament and then on the following day took one set from Tilden and came very close to taking two others, only to fail when his strength failed him. With the exception of his match with Watson M. Washburn a Newport, Johnston in the tournaments leading up to the national championship—in the Seabright, Longwood and Davis Cup challenge-round events—looked every bit as brilliant as in the years when the American title fell to his prowess on the court.

Passes by Johnson.

"Now for third place in the ranking: No doubt many will insist that the place belongs to Wallace F. Johnson, who reached the title round in the national championship. Perhaps so, but for the benefit of those who favor the Philadelphia chop-stroke specialist for the place, it may be pointed out that, barring victories over Watson M. Washburn and James O. Washburn of Australia in the national championship, Johnson accomplished little of note during the season. He was late in getting into competition and his early season record scarcely supports the contention that he deserves a ranking just behind Johnston. Then, too, in the title match with Tilden, Johnson was fairly swept off his feet.

"On the other hand witness the record of 18-year-old Vincent Richards, the only player to defeat Tilden this season, and defeat him decisively, a youth who played the most startling effective tennis in the national championship, took two sets from Johnston and made a great bid for victory over the Californian, who defeated R. Norris Williams, Ichiya Kumagae, John B. Hawkes, G. Colket Caner, Howard Kinsey, Walter Hayes and others of note. Some will discount the performance of Richards in beating Tilden at Providence on the ground that the champion was not himself then, yet the fact remains that in the same tournament Tilden eliminated R. Norris Williams and Watson M. Washburn with ease.

Early Victories Aid Washburn.

"In our opinion not only Richards but Washburn deserves to be rated just ahead of Wallace Johnson. Victories over Johnston and Williams at Newport boosted Washburn's stock considerably three weeks before the national event, but his defeat at the hands of Wallace Johnson in the second round of the championship cost him an opportunity of earning third place in the standing. Yet his record for the season's important tournaments surpasses that of Johnson. In their match in the national event Washburn after taking the first two sets in masterly fashion went to pieces without warning and practically threw the match away on errors, although Johnson deserved great credit for a remarkable uphill fight.

"In sixth place we have named R. Norris Williams, who held a victory over Vincent Richards and who forced some of the topnotchers to close scores but whose tennis, brilliant in one match mediocre in the next, was decidedly erratic. Willis E. Davis, who won the Southampton tournament and reached the semifinal in the national championship, is placed seventh, and in eighth place is Robert Kinsey, whom Davis defeated in a five-set match in the fifth round of the title tournament. Two weeks or so prior to that match Kinsey triumphed over Davis in the metropolitan championship final, and there really was little to choose between them, although their tennis styles are totally different. It is pretty close between S. Howard Voshell, Francis T. Hunter, Howard Kinsey and Frank T. Anderson for ninth, but they have been placed in the order named. Voshell's two victories over Shimidzu aided his ranking considerably."

ST. LOUIS BILLIARD FANS TO ATTEND TITLE GAME

St. Louis billiard followers will go to Chicago next month to see the international match between Willie Hoppe, present world's champion, and Edouard Horesmans, the Belgian, when they play their match in the national tournament. Twenty-five local enthusiasts have already signified their intention of making the trip.

Jones Defeated After Giving One Hit in 9 Rounds

Flack's Error Enables White Sox to Tie and Win Out in Tenth, 4-3.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 8.—A muff by Max Flack in the ninth inning and timely hitting by Mulligan and Strunk in the tenth enabled the Chicago White Sox to defeat the Chicago Cubs 4 to 3 today, making it three straight in the series to decide the city championship.

With a man on third and the tying run on second and two out in the ninth, Sheely flied to Flack, who dropped the ball, and the score was tied and forced into extra innings.

The Cubs were leading the White Sox, 3 to 0, having scored twice in the first inning on two hits and two errors, and put over the third run on two passes, a single and two sacrifices. Percy Jones, who was on the mound for the Nationals permitted only one hit, a scratch single by Hooper in the second inning, up to the tenth.

In the ninth he weakened and walked two men, and in fielding a grounder became confused and threw too late to get a force out at second. An infield out sent one run home and after the next man popped out, Sheely hit to Flack, who dropped the ball which resulted in the tie score. Mulligan started the tenth with a single and Jones then was replaced by Freeman. A sacrifice and walk and Strunk's single to right sent home the deciding run.

Jones injured his ankle in running to second base in the seventh inning, but refused to leave the game. He limped around the box, until taken out in the tenth. The White Sox lost the services of Ray Schalk, when he was hit on the finger by a foul tip which tore off his finger nail.

The attendance was 11,833 and the gross receipts $10,965.10. The commissioners' share was $1644.70; players' share $5592.25, and the clubs' share $3728.15.

ILLINOIS RUNS OVER SOUTH DAKOTA, 52-0

By the Associated Press.

URBANA, Ill., Oct. 8.—Illinois downed South Dakota University, 52 to 0, today, in the first game of the season for the Illini. Coach Zuppke used two teams, sending in an entirely new lineup at the end of the third quarter, and repeatedly shifting the players to new positions.

In spite of the score, Illinois' play was rather ragged with the exception of the moments when touchdowns actually were being forced across the goal line. Crangle, at fullback, and Peden, at half, were the stars of the Illinois backfield. The defensive play of Wilson prevented Illinois rolling up an even bigger score, as he repeatedly broke up plays before they were well started.

Tates Win From Ruskin Team In First of Series

Municipal League Champions Gain 11 to 8 Victory Over Memphis Team.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 8.—The St. Louis Municipal baseball champions took the first of a three-game series from the Memphis Association Amateur champions here today when the Tate Motors defeated the John Ruskins in a free hitting game, 11 to 8. The game was played on a very poor diamond at Overton Park. Two games will be played at Hodges Field tomorrow afternoon.

The contest hardly gave the two teams a chance to show their true strength. However, the large crowd that witnessed the contest was settled on the fact that the fielding of the Tate team is up to the standard of any amateur club which ever exhibited in Memphis. The conduct of the visitors was very commendable and a cleaner bunch of ball tossers has never appeared as a representative team from St. Louis.

For the Tate team the individual work of Shortstop Hill stood out. He handled many hard chances with the greatest ease, despite the condition of the field. The teamwork of the St. Louisans was masterful. For the Memphis champions, the individual work of Shortstop Taylor was by far the best work he has ever shown in Memphis.

Roe, who hurled for the Ruskins in the first part of the game, was hit hard, yielding 10 hits in three innings and issuing three bases on balls, all of them in the third inning, when the Tates scored six runs.

ST. LOUIS NET STARS WIN THREE OF FOUR MATCHES AT MEMPHIS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 8.—Of the four matches in tennis series between the St. Louis and Memphis Amateurs this afternoon at the Tri-State Fair grounds, only one Memphis player was victorious, and this victory was not without strenuous opposition.

In the ladies' singles, Miss Roever, St. Louis women's singles champion, defeated Miss Fleece, Memphis champion, 6—1, 6—3. Miss Roever played a safe, steady game, showing better control and better all-round skill. Miss Endicott, also of St. Louis, defeated Miss Edgington, local runner-up, in the ladies' singles, 6—1, 6—1.

In the men's singles the city champion, Sidney Allenberg, was defeated by Carl Kammann, St. Louis, score 6—2, 6—3, 4—6 and 6—0. This match was hard fought throughout, particularly the second and third sets, as almost every game was deuced. Allenberg did not kill shots at the net when possible, and this aided his opponent materially.

In the singles match won by Memphis, Lew Hardy, veteran of many hard-fought matches, defeated Elmer Schwarz of St. Louis, 3—6, 6—2, [illegible] 7—5 and 6—1.

Kamman and Hardy meet in the men's singles tomorrow afternoon, while Allenberg meets Schwarz. In the mixed doubles Miss Fleece and Elmore meet Miss Roever and [illegible]ney, while Edgington and [illegible] meet Miss Endicott and Schwarz. It is possible that men's doubles matches will also be played.

DANVILLE, Ky., Oct. 8.—Scoring two touchdowns in the final quarter the Centre College eleven defeated the strong Virginia Polytechnic Institute team here this afternoon, 14 to 0.

During the first three quarters the two teams battled up and down the field between the 20-yard lines with the Virginia eleven on the defensive most of the time, but in the final quarter the Centre backfield began to find holes in the visitors' line and scored two touchdowns in rapid succession, Tanner and Armstrong carrying the ball over. Tanner kicked both goals.

No Unpleasant Encounter.

I was thrown almost entirely wit them during my term of imprisonment, for I suspect that I was purposely isolated from persons from Western countries, and I never once had an unpleasant encounter with any of my fellow-prisoners. Besides the Russians I had Poles, Finns, Letts, Luthuanians, Esthonians, Ukrainians and Jews as companions.
They were drawn from every class of society, from great ladies to illiterate peasants; they represented every political party from monarchists to anarchists, and every shade of morals from puritans to prostitutes.
There were some disagreements in our room, of course, but on the whole we pulled together remarkably well, and no backward-looking male can ever tell me again that women are incapable of teamwork.

In Russia there are no generalizations of this kind about women;
there is no feminism; there are no
"women's questions." Women are just people. Perhaps this is the result of the "broad" Slav nature; perhaps it is one of the good effects of the revolution. But I have gone a long way from my story.

As I dumped my bags on the floor and looked around for a vacant bed one of the inmates, a slender aristocratic-looking woman in a wornout tailor-made suit that had once been a Parisian creation and wearing the shuffling straw slippers known as prisoners by the prison authorities, advanced to meet me with a smile,

very much as if I had been a casual

Mrs. Harrison Tells of Being Held Six Months in Russian Cell Without a Glimpse of the Sky

Room Shaped Like a Great Coffin Was Always Crowded With Women Victims of the Soviet Police—She Describes Daily Routine.

After several days in solitary confinement Mrs. Harrison demanded and obtained assignment to the general section of the Checka Prison. This is the third of her articles telling of her experiences.

By MARGUERITE E. HARRISON

(Copyright, 1921.)

THE room to which I was transferred was much larger than any I had seen before, but my first impression of it was that it was exactly the shape of the coffins that are used all over Europe. It was rectangular, about 18 feet long, possibly seven feet wide at one end and 10 at the other.

There were two windows, whitened, of course, at either end. They were double, with an air space between, which we used for cold storage purposes, dropping food down on cords through a small pane at the top, which opened on a hinge.

This little opening was our only means of obtaining fresh air, as the windows were hermetically sealed with putty. Through it, by standing on the sill, a glimpse of the courts into which the windows opened could be obtained, but not even a patch of sky was visible.

During the six months I lived there I never saw the sun, moon or sky, except twice, once in December and again in February, when we were taken to one of the public baths with an armed escort. I never left the room, except for our morning and evening trips to the toilet, or when I was summoned to a "dopros." It was well heated by steam, but the atmosphere was terrible, owing to the utter inadequacy of the ventilation and the chronic aversion of most Russians to drafts.

Women of Many Sorts.

When I entered it was occupied by seven women, some sitting, some lying on their beds, which were spread with nondescript coverings, here a plaid shawl, there a silk quilt and a lace pillow, farther on another with only the straw pallet provided by the prison authorities. On a long table there was a miscellaneous assortment of cups and utensils. From under the beds protruded pieces of baggage of all descriptions, from peasant sacks and baskets to fitted dressing bags.

The women were just as conglomerate as their belonging. They all stared at me curiously, appraisingly, and, as I thought, in a rather unfriendly manner, but I afterward learned to understand this apparent hostility and insatiable curiosity about newcomers. Living in such crowded quarters, an addition to our number meant more physical discomfort. Also she might be a spy. On the other hand, we were always hungry to hear the latest news from people who had just been arrested, and we welcomed anything that was a break in the monotonous prison routine. Actually the Slavs are the kindliest, gentlest, most hospitable people in the world, wonderfully lovable and sweet tempered.

No Unpleasant Encounter.

I was thrown almost entirely with them during my term of imprisonment, for I suspect that I was purposely isolated from persons from Western countries, and I never once had an unpleasant encounter with any of my fellow-prisoners. Besides the Russians I had Poles, Finns, Letts, Luthuanians, Esthonians, Ukrainians and Jews as companions. They were drawn from every class of society, from great ladies to illiterate peasants; they represented every political party from monarchists to anarchists, and every shade of morals from puritans to prostitutes. Soon Found a Friend.

"I see that you are a foreigner" she said in beautiful French. "This is very poor hospitality to offer you in Russia."

We both laughed, and then she helped me to unpack my belongings while we exchanged information. She was Mlle. Helena Sologyb, a member of one of the most noted families in Russia. Their Moscow home, a beautiful old eighteenth century house on the Povarskaya, which is described by Tolstoi in his great novel, "War and Peace," is now used by the Commissariat of Education as a people's palace, where lectures and concerts of the "Prolet Cult" are held. Up to her arrest Mlle. Sologyb had been permitted to retain a room there. She was accused of acquaintance with a "White" officer, of whom she had never even heard, and had been kept in solitary confinement for two months. We became good friends and I was very sorry several weeks later when she was ordered to pack and leave. I did not know what had become of her until long afterward, when a prisoner arriving from the Butierki, Moscow's largest prison, told me that she had been there for several months, finally being transferred to an internment camp.

My other fellow-prisoners were three women clerks from the War Office, a Lettish communist, the young wife of a naval officer who was imprisoned in the adjoining room, and a 16-year-old girl from Archangel, who had been kept in the local Checka, threatened with death, for six weeks, because she had repeated a remark she had heard to the effect that there would soon be a counter-revolution. I am glad to be able to say that Moscow had more sense than Archangel. After three weeks in prison she was questioned by a woman examiner and immediately offered her choice between being sent back to Archangel or remaining in Moscow and continuing her education.

The fact that minors who are arrested are invariably questioned by women and treated with great kindness is a point in favor of the Checka, though it is done with a view to ultimately making good communists.

Got Bed Near Window.

It is wonderful how naturally one drops into the routine of prison life. I was fortunate on arriving in finding a vacant bed at the narrow end of the room next to the window. There was just enough space to move freely between my bed and the bed opposite, but I had light, the benefit of what little fresh air was to be had, and the window sill to use as a bureau. Besides, it was a wonderful strategic position, commanding a view of the whole room, and as the door was at the extreme end of one of the long sides, I escaped the eye at the peephole. Goings and comings affected me very little. I could sit up in my corner and survey the confusion with a delightful feeling of aloofness. Occasionally, however, even my small measure of privacy was invaded. Eight beds covered the available wall space; nine or 10 meant beds in the wide part of the room and the shifting of the table nearer the narrow end.

Had to Walk Over Woman.

Once, for several nights, a woman slept on the floor between my bed and my neighbor's and I had to literally walk over her to get out. There were then 11 of us, and there was literally no floor space left, so when another prisoner arrived at about 2 a. m., we cleared off our cups and dishes and put her on the table. When she had just gotten settled still another appeared, so we offered her our one chair and she sat up for the rest of the night. These congested times were luckily not very frequent, and our average number was seven or eight.

Strange as it may seem, I was really very busy in prison. Realizing the importance of getting some exercise, I did Swedish gymnastics morning and night, to the constant wonder and amazement of my companions. One evening a peasant woman who had just been arrested, after watching me go through my gymnastics, asked me seriously if that was the way we prayed to God in America.

Hunted Cooties Daily.

Then there was the daily hunt for vermin. All the beds were infested with bedbugs and they had to be gone over several times a week. At first I did not realize the importance of special care of the hair and consequently acquired what are known to the learned as pediculosis and to school children at home as "nits." It took me some time to get rid of them and then only thanks to a friend who gave me a fine tooth comb, which was one of my chief treasures for the rest of my term of imprisonment. I always inspected my clothing twice a day, for we had many cooties, especially when prisoners arrived from a distance, and cooties are not only disagreeable but dangerous in Russia, for they are the carriers of the dreaded typhus. Occasionally we had lazy fellow-prisoners, who refused to join in the daily hunt, but public opinion usually forced them to it in the end. In spite of all our precautions we had three cases of typhus during the winter. As soon as the diagnosis was clear they were removed and after each one we waited for two weeks to find out if we were infected. There were also several shocking cases, such as that of a young girl who went suddenly insane in the middle of the night and had to be taken off to the hospital. We had many hysterical women and I was often kept busy for several hours applying cold compresses and administering valerian.

Bathed in Hot Tea.

The problem, of keeping clean took much time. Occasionally I cajoled one of the guards into bringing me a kettle of hot water from the huge samovar machine in the court which supplied the prison, but usually there was no hot water to be had, so I saved hot tea morning and evening in empty milk bottles. At night I took a tea bath in a small earthenware bowl that had been sent me by the Czecho-Slovak Red Cross, and in the morning I washed my underclothes in the same manner, one or two pieces a day. I made coarse lace with a crooked hairpin from linen threads drawn from an old bag, took Russian lessons from my companions and helped to mend the prison linen. This work was purely voluntary. We liked it because it gave us needles and thread to mend our own clothes and the privilege of having scissors, which, as a rule are strictly forbidden.

Besides, we were all very ingenious at inventing games and amusements. We had several packs of cards made of the mouthpieces of the Russian cigarettes, chessmen and checkers made of hardened bread, and paper dominoes, all these being kept carefully hidden, for games are not allowed. One of our favorite pastimes was fortune telling with cards, at which most Russian women are adepts and in which they believe implicitly. Once we had books, for two blissful weeks at New Year's, but they were afterward taken away from us. We often used to sing Russian songs in the evening after the lights were out, of course in an undertone, for we were not allowed to sing or to speak in tones that could be heard outside in the hall.

Still another popular amusement was one that is not considered good form in other countries, but which is perfectly correct in Russia at the present time. This was looking through the keyhole. If anything exciting was going on outside we took turns. The young wife of the naval officer next door always had the right of way when the occupants of that room were taken out to or returned from the toilet, and I had first call when Gen. Klembovsky went out for his daily walk. He was in solitary confinement for a long time in a room opposite ours, and I was interested in him because before my arrest I had often met his wife at the Checka when she was bringing him peredachas, or food packages, and I was bound on a similar errand for the American prisoners. Besides, he was chairman of the old Generals acting as an advisory commission to the general staff of the Red army during the war with Poland, of which my friend Gen. Brusilov was a member.

Knowing Russian Helped.

My knowledge of Russian enabled me to learn the meaning of many mysterious noises that went on in the Checka, which have often struck terror to foreigners unfamiliar with the language, and to read the prison rules posted on the doors, which kept me from innocent violation of regulations and the consequent penalty of the dark room or the cellar. The guards sounded much gruffer than they really were, and very often apparent threats were only rough jokes or friendly admonitions. Nothing was to be gotten by threatening them, but they were almost always responsive to dignity and quiet good breeding. Many of them were actually in sympathy with us, and not a few were deserters who had been condemned to be shot and pardoned on condition that they should work in the Checka.

Our prison diet was about the same all winter, consisting of tea, soup, bread and kasha with a little sugar, but many of the prisoners received peredachas, or food packages, from their friends and relatives, and we lived high when we happened to have a number of rich bourgeois companions. Knowing the prices of food on the open market, I wondered at the quantities of white bread, cake, cheese, sausage and other luxuries received by many of the prisoners. In many cases it meant that the families of the prisoners were selling their last possessions, but in others it was evidence of the enormous amount of hidden wealth that still exists in Russia.

A Package at Last.

For the first three weeks I received no food packages, and then the first peredacha came from the Czecho-Slovak Red Cross. I shall never forget my joy when I heard my name called for the first time, and saw the signature of Mr. Skala, the head of the Czecho-Slovak mission, on the list which accompanied the package. He and his wife had been good friends of mine, we had lived in the same house, and I felt that the small slip of paper was the one link which connected me with the outside world.

(Some of the strange persons encountered in prison and the political activities there are described in the next article.)

YOUNG MAN, BEWARE OF INFLUENCE

It is the WORST HANDICAP you can have. So says John D. Ryan, who tells you why.

If you will READ what he says and all that follows, CAREFULLY and ABSORBINGLY, you will have ACQUIRED in a few minutes a FUND of ADVICE that should materially AID you in FITTING yourself for a SUCCESSFUL CAREER in BUSINESS.

- Influence is the worst handicap any young man can have. It tends to make him feel he need not exert himself to his full capacity and has a bad effect upon him. When other workmen learn that one of their number has a pull with somebody higher up, they look at him askance and the effect upon these other men is bad. Then the foreman, or whoever is over him, will either show him undue favors and push him into a position for which he is not fitted, or, if the boss is of different stamp, he will hesitate to promote him even when he deserves it because the boss knows the others will think it is a case of favoritism. The effect, therefore, is bad upon the whole organization. When any young engineer or college graduate or anybody else comes to me asking for a letter to enable him to get a job at our works I say to him just what I have said here.

NO ONE IS BETTER QUALIFIED THAN MR. RYAN TO HAND DOWN THIS ADVICE. Born of parents who offered to give him a college education and who could have procured influence to lift him in life, he declined the education and at 17 obtained a job with an uncle in a merchandise store in the copper district of Michigan. Eight years later he was selling oil out of Denver. Today, in addition to numerous other achievements, he has attained the presidency of the foremost copper mining company in the world and is known as the Copper King.

TO THE YOUNG MEN OF THE GREAT SOUTHWEST who desire to emulate Mr. Ryan or any of the other successful men who are making St. Louis or America, a word of advice:

(1) Your happiness and well-doing in life rely mainly on yourselves and the exercise of your own energies, rather than upon the help and patronage of others.

(2) "To start in life with comparatively small means seems so necessary as a stimulus to work, that it may almost be set down as one of the conditions essential to success in life.

(3) "The best part of every man's education," said Sir Walter Scott, "is that which he gives to himself." This means physically as well as mentally.

(4) "Attention, application, accuracy, method, punctuality and dispatch are the principal qualities required for the efficient conduct of business of any sort."

(5) The lesson we learn, after reading the biographies of most successful men, is that patience, perseverance, stick-to-itiveness and unflagging courage are essential to achieve success.

(6) Most of the successful men have had to pay the price of success. "They worked harder and longer, they studied and planned more assiduously, they practiced self-denial and overcame more difficulties than those of us who have not risen so far."

MAN SOUGHT 2 YEARS SAYS HE NEVER HID

Carl Stieler Jr., Wanted in $234,000 Indiana Robbery, Surrenders.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 8.—For two years Carl Stieler Jr., wanted in connection with the $234,000 mail robbery at Whiting, Ind., in 1919, traveled throughout the West under his own name, gave Chicago as his home address, spent his share of the money, amounting to $45,000, and was never once questioned or even suspected.

This was the story he told to authorities following his return here yesterday with his wife and his surrender. Stieler went first to the home of his father, there admitted he had spent the last of his money and surrendered when his father called the police.

On Aug. 23, 1919, at Whiting, Ind., a mail sack containing waste paper was exchanged on the railroad station platform for one containing $234,000 in cash belonging to the Standard Oil Co.

The next day three men were arrested in Chicago and from them $181,000 of the money was recovered.

Stieler told the police that he left Chicago with Bessie Jastak, whom he married at Los Angeles under his own name, while papers were carrying accounts of the robbery and pictures of him. Later he entered an aviation school, was injured and that fact was reported in the newspapers, his own name being used.

He bought two $6000 airplanes and a $5000 racing car, but smashed both within a few weeks, he said.

A year ago, he said, he purchased another airplane and toured Arizona, New Mexico and Texas under his own name, giving flying exhibitions. In Texas his money ran out and he sold the plane for about one-fourth of what it cost. With his wife he then went to Memphis and later to Jackson, Tenn., where he received $40 for doing aerial stunts, he told the police. From Jackson the couple returned to Chicago, Stieler stating he had decided to give himself up.

$10,000 Verdict Against U. R.

Ralph S. Duke, 24 years old, 2663A South Grand avenue, yesterday obtained a jury verdict for $10,000 damages against the United Railways Co. in Circuit Judge Killoren's court. He was injured Dec. 30, 1919, when a street car struck an automobile which was being used by the plaintiff to tow another machine. He alleged that the injury resulted in his being afflicted with curvature of the spine. The defense alleged that the spinal trouble was caused by a previous injury to the plaintiff. The suit was for $60,000. The accident happened on Union boulevard, near Easton avenue.

CHINA'S REPLY TO JAPAN SAYS LATTER'S PROPOSALS ARE NOT ACCEPTABLE

Note, Text of Which Is Published, Declares Latest Offer on Shantung Fails to Prove Japan's Sincerity.

By the Associated Press.

PEKIN, Oct. 8.—The text of China's reply to the proposals of the Japanese Government concerning a settlement of the Shantung controversy was made public yesterday. It declares that Japan has advanced no plan for a settlement which is fundamentally acceptable to the Chinese Government and people and that the Chinese Government feels that there is much in the new proposals "still incompatible with the Chinese Government's repeated declarations, the Chinese people's hopes and aspirations and the principles laid down in Chinese treaties with foreign Powers."

It is added that if the proposals comprise Japan's final concessions, "they surely inadequately prove the sincerity of Japan's desire to settle the question."

The note was handed to the Japanese Minister Thursday by Dr. Yen, the Chinese Foreign Minister. The Japanese Minister said at that time that he received the document in a purely unofficial capacity and that he would return it to Dr. Yen if it was unacceptable to Japan. Yesterday, at the Japanese legation, it was said it had not been decided whether to forward the memorandum to Tokio or return it to Dr. Yen. The text of the memorandum in part is as follows:

Japan's Bases Objectionable.

"Introduction: Referring to the important Shantung question which is now pending between China and Japan, China indeed is most desirous of an early settlement and for the restitution of her rights and territory. The reason why China has not until now been able to commence negotiations with Japan is because the bases on which Japan claims to negotiate are all of a nature most objectionable to the Chinese Government and the Chinese people, or are such which they never have recognized.

"Furthermore, regarding the Shantung question, although Japan has made many vague declarations, she has actually had no plan which was fundamentally acceptable. Therefore, the case has pended many years, much to China's expectation to the contrary.

"On Sept. 7, Japan submitted certain proposals for a readjustment of the Shantung question in memorandum form, with the Japanese Minister's verbal statement that in view of the great principle of Chino-Japanese friendship, Japan had decided on this fair and just plan as her final concession. After careful consideration the Chinese Government feels there is much in the new Japanese proposals still incompatible with the Chinese Government's repeated declarations the Chinese people's hopes and aspirations and the principles laid down in Chinese treaties with foreign Powers.

"If these proposals are to be regarded as Japan's final concessions, they surely inadequately prove the sincerity of Japan's desire to settle the question."

No Reply to Two Sections.

The memorandum then takes up the points of the Japanese offer, but does not answer section four (promising that Japan will relinquish preferential rights acquired by the treaty in Kiaochau) and section eight (which outlines details for the carrying out of certain provisions of the proposals which are believed to be acceptable to China). Regarding the other points the memorandum, referering to them by sections, says:

"Section 1: The Kiaochau lease expired on China's declaration of war against Germany. Since Japan only militarily occupies the leased territory, the latter should be entirely returned to China unconditionally. There can be no question of any leasehold.

"Section Two: Regarding the opening of Kiao-Chau Bay as a commercial port for trade convenience and the residence of nationals of all friendly Powers, China already on previous occasions has communicated this intention to the Powers, and there can be no necessity for the establishment of any foreign settlement. Again, however, agricultural pursuits concern the vital existence of a country's people, and, according to the usual practice of all countries, foreigners are not permitted to engage therein. Vested rights of foreigners obtained through legitimate processes under the German regime shall, of course, be respected; but those obtained by force or compulsion during the period of Japanese military occupation are in no wise recognizable.

Favors Opening Ports.

"Also, although this article in advocating the opening of Shantung cities and towns as commercial ports agrees with the Chinese Government's intention and desire for developing commerce, the opening of such places should, nevertheless, be left to China's own judgment and selection, according to circumstances. As for regulations covering the opening of such places, China undoubtedly will remember her objects for affording facilities to international trade and formulating them according to the established precedents of self-opened ports and therefore sees no necessity for any previous negotiations on this matter.

"Section 3: The Chino-Japanese joint operation of the Shantung railway, namely, the Kiao-Chau-Tsinan line, is opposed by the the entire Chinese people. This because in all countries there should be a unified railway system and because joint operation destroys the unity of railway management and impairs the right of sovereignty. And in view of the evils of previous cases of joint operation and the impossibility of correcting them, China now no longer can recognize it as a matter of principle. The whole line of the Shantung railway, with right of control of the management thereof, should be completely handed over to China, and, after just valuation of its capital and properties, half of whole value of the lines not returned shall be purchased back by China within a fixed period.

Operation of Mines.

"Regarding the mines appurtenant to the Shantung railway, which the Germans already had operated, the plan of operation shall be fixed according to the Chinese mining law.

"Section 5. Referring to the construction of extensions of the Shantung railway, namely, the Tsin-an-Hsu-Hsunteh and the Kiao-Chau-Hsu,-Chow-Fu lines, China will, as a matter of course, negotiate with international financial bodies. As for the Che-Foo-Wieh-sein railway, it is an entirely different case and cannot be discussed in the same category.

"Section 6: The Custom House at Tsing-Tao formerly was situated in a leased territory, and the system of administration there differed slightly from others. When the leased territory is restored the custom house should be placed under the complete control and management of the Chinese Government, and should not differ from the system of administration of other custom houses.

"Section 7: The question of the extent of disposal of public properties is too wide to be limited only to that portion of them used for 'administrative purposes.' The meaning in the Japanese memoranda of the statement that such property will in principle be transferred to China,' is somewhat lacking in clearness. If it is Japan's sincere wish to return all public properties to China, she ought to hand over completely the various kinds of official, semiofficial, municipal and other public property and enterprises to China for distribution, according to their nature and kind, to administer by central and local authorities, municipal councils and Chinese customs as the case may be. In this regard any special arrangement is unnecessary.

Ask for Japanese Army Withdrawal

"Section 9 — The question of the withdrawal of Japanese from Shantung does not bear any connection to the retrocession of the Kiao-Chau leased territory, and the Chinese Government repeatedly has urged its actual execution. It is only proper that the entire Japanese army of occupation should immediately be evacuated. As for the policing of the Kiao-Chau-Tsinan Railway, China will immediately send a suitable force of Chinese railway police to take over these duties."

The memorandum concludes as follows:

"The foregoing statement gives only the main points which are unsatisfactory and concerning which the Chinese Government feels it is absolutely necessary to make a clear declaration. Further, in view of the marked difference of opinion between the two countries, and apprehending that the case might long remain unsettled, China reserves to herself the freedom of seeking a solution of the question whenever suitable occasion presents itself."

Japanese Chagrined Over China's Reply.

TOKIO, Oct. 8.—Japanese officials apparently are deeply chagrined over the reply of China to Japan's Shantung proposals and the difficulties which have been met in the negotiations with the Far Eastern as it was hoped progress toward lution of these problems made before the Washington conference.

EDITORIAL OPINION SHOWS HOPE IN DISARMAMENT CONFERENCE

Press of United States, France, Great Britain and Other Nations Emphasizes Public Demand That Washington Gathering Accomplish Concrete Results Toward Reducing Military and Naval Burdens.

Failure Would Cause Immediate Renewal of Race of Nations to Arm, Leading Inevitably to New Wars and Crushing Many Peoples With Taxation, Is Belief of Some American Observers.

Says Success Depends Upon Mobilized Moral Force of the Country

By Senator W. E. Borah

WITH 5,000,000 men out of employment, with sources of revenue drying up, with a great finance committee searching for things to tax, with current expenditures of the Government amounting to from $4,500,000,000 to $5,000,000,000 a year, and with the Government camouflaging through deficiency appropriation bills, and otherwise, to conceal the worst, we must fully realize that, while we are pleased to have able men on the delegation, the thing which concerns us even more is, "Will we do our part?"

It is now up to the people of this country to make their wishes known and opinions felt. It should be constantly in mind that, without the mobilized moral forces of those upon whom these crushing burdens are now falling, there is little hope that the load will be lifted. If it is not lifted, no one can phophesy what lies beyond.

There can be no relief from taxes, no relief from expenditures and no relief from war, except through disarmament.

Public Opinion United

PUBLIC opinion is united in demanding the ending of armament rivalry. President Harding's mail is said to be filled with letters on the subject, practically all of the same purport, and similar sentiment is reported in the other countries interested, not excepting Japan. This sense of what is expected and demanded will have its influence in bringing about agreement, or continuing effort for ultimate agreement. Whatever diplomatists may think, the world's peoples, who pay the costs of world wars, are determined upon an end to armament competition.—Topeka Capitol.

The Only Question

THERE can be no issue in the disarmament conference. The only question is whether it will achieve practical reduction of armament, for if it does not, public opinion will be crystallized as solidly in disappointment as it is now in hope.—Milwaukee Journal.

"HIGH hopes are fixed upon the Washington conference," says the New York Times.

A review of the editorial columns of the influential newspapers of America, Great Britain, France and Canada emphasizes this statement. "This country wants, demands and hopes arms limitation will come," is the way the Philadelphia Public Ledger voiced it, and continued:

"America understands herself. She wants disarmament, but she wants it even more for the world than for her own sake. We called the conference, but we called it for the world as well as ourselves. We believe that other nations need it even more than we. America knows full well that she can go the pace and run the race of armaments where others would be forced to quit. Armaments continually piled up would burden us; they would crush others. These are things that the five nations who are coming to Washington doubtless will bear in mind.

"America sees in the ending of armament burdens the salvation of a civilization that has taken all of history to build. She believes in it, works and strives for it."

On all sides is heard, with strenuous insistence, that partisan politics must have no part in this conference and all matters that concern it, "for the cause far transcends the interest of all political parties," in the words of the Columbia (S. C.) State.

Hearing From the Country.

President, Senators and Congressmen have been "hearing from the country." The White House mail, it is reported, is filled with letters and communications from all ranks breathing confidence that will not be lost on Washington. Congressmen who went "back home" with the vague idea that the country was not concerning itself about disarmament know better now. Mark Sullivan interviewed Senators and Representatives on their return to Washington and telegraphed the New York Evening Post:

"Taking the electorate of the country as a whole and especially including the women in that electorate, the general testimony is that interest in disarmament exceeds everything else. That large public sentiment, particularly among women and among what the politicians call church and school circles, which a year or two ago formed the backbone of the support of the League of Nations, now expresses itself in sentiment for reductions of armament. To the sentiment based on this old League of Nations idealism is added a hard, practical sentiment in favor of disarmament, based on the wish for lower taxes."

While insisting that the success of the conference is paramount to every other consideration, many newspapers unafraid faced the alternative —the possibility that the conference might fail to accomplish something concrete and far-reaching. Said The Literary Digest editorially:

"Something worse than failure may be the alternative to success when the representatives of five nations meet in Washington on Nov. 11 to discuss the limitation of armaments. For if the 20 men who will speak for the United States, Great Britain, Japan, France and Italy fail to reach an agreement, some editorial observers aver, they will leave the world in a far more desperate position than if the conference had never been held."

Failure Would Be Disastrous.

"Failure," declared the San Francisco Argonaut, "would sow throughout the world the dragon's teeth of distrust. It will not be a case where it was better to have tried and failed than never to have tried at all. The result incident to failure will be disastrous and unequivocal. Nations will part to arm," was its solemn warning, "and the suspicions exerted by the failure will increase the extent and the rapidity of subsequent armament."

Excerpts from the editorial comment of newspapers throughout the United States follow:

CHICAGO TRIBUNE—The Washington conference has this general background: If the conference can get agreements which will disarm distrust, eliminate provocative rivalry and stop competition in preparation for war, peace will be preserved. Otherwise the causes which make war are brewing in the Pacific.

SALT LAKE TRIBUNE—Limitations of armaments would be a long step in the right direction. It would lift the burden of taxation from the backs of the people of all the leading nations.

WASHINGTON POST—If a poll of the American people could be taken, it seems highly probable that the majority standing behind President Harding in his effort to bring about limitation of armaments would prove so overwhelming as to make the country appear unanimous. The skeptics and objectors are conspicuously few.

OHIO STATE JOURNAL—The question before the conference is plain as the moral law and simple as a schoolboy's logic. It is merely this: In what mutual proportion shall we nations reduce at once our contemplated naval strength? The more closely the conference sticks to that one grand subject, the more hope there is for a troubled world.

People Vitally Concerned.

COLUMBIA RECORD—The people are vitally concerned in this disarmament problem and they should be as free to make suggestions as should any of the diplomats at the conference, since those diplomats are only representatives of the people at large.

MINNEAPOLIS TRIBUNE—Not only the great labor organizations, but the League of Women Voters, the agricultural associations, the American Legion and other civic agencies will be quite within the proprieties in helping to let it be known to the representatives of the Powers that there is in this country complete accord and sympathy with the concerted move by these Powers to limit the armies and navies of the world close up to the point of safety and common sense.

FORT WAYNE JOURNAL-GAZETTE—In this day, with nine-tenths of the people of the earth passionately demanding that the politicians and rulers cease pouring 93 per cent of the money wrung from them into the rat hole of war, no 20 or 30 men, however able, have the moral right to deny their demand.

The duty between now and Nov. 11 is to impress this fact upon the 20 or 30 men.

INDIANAPOLIS NEWS—The next war, should there be one, would be frightful beyond all imagining. The American people should approach the disarmament conference in the most serious spirit, and with a firm and resolute determination to make it a success beyond even the fondest hopes of those who are responsible for it, or shall participate in it. It is a great opportunity to set forward the cause of peace and righteousness and to lift civilization to a really civilized plane.

The Universal Prayer.

DENVER NEWS—The universal prayer must be that the coming Washington conference may rise above petty jealousies and national and race hatreds and restore, in time, the earth to its axis.

TOLEDO BLADE—There is no likelihood that the nations concerned will fail to arrange some kind of a military holiday. It comes near to being a choice between doing that and going into bankruptcy.

SPRINGFIELD REPUBLICAN—No true friend of the League, or of the greater cause of international peace of which the League is only an instrument, can permit himself for a moment to hope that the conference at Washington will fail. Larger and still better things may grow out of its success; the world is in too precarious a condition to figure benefits from its failure.

BIRMINGHAM AGE-HERALD — Shall the world use its money in the development of friendly converse and interchange of commodities and for the advancement of its peoples in their home and civic life, or shall it continue to employ its major resources in bristling armaments that provoke war? This is the question which the nations coming to the disarmament congress face. What their people want is schools and roads and peace. These they cannot have if the greater portion of their revenue goes into armaments.

It is either emulation in the art of war or emulation in the arts of peace.

DAYTON NEWS—He is a poor kind of a citizen who doesn't want to see the forthcoming conference for the limitation of armament a success.

MILWAUKEE JOURNAL—America must in this new conference make her position good. "Statesmanlike documents" will not be acceptable results; there must be practical accomplishment.

World-Wide Effect.

THE NEW YORK WORLD—If the United States, Great Britain and Japan among themselves can arrive at an agreement to suspend naval expansion, or declare a naval holiday, or in other ways abate their preparations for war, the effect of their action will be world-wide. It is the fleets of these three nations that count in the final reckoning, and they alone can determine the future policy that shall prevail. The other nations, separately or together, can accomplish little or nothing except through their leadership and example. * * *

There can be no doubt where the smaller nations stand, as a moral influence, on the issue of disarmament. They have demonstrated it already at Geneva.

PHILADELPHIA PUBLIC LEDGER—We must do one of two things: We Americans must by agreement blast the seeds of war in the Pacific and make war there a possibility too remote for consideration, or we must begin to build as we have not builded before and to arm as we armed in 1917. The hammers must wake in deadly earnest in the shipyards.

Cost and strain, unending stress and constant menace; war always somewhere in the future— this is the meaning of continuing the old and evil days of nation against nation. It is this, exactly, that the world hopes will be lessened, if not eventually ended, by the six Powers at Washington. It is this that makes the arms parley so vital to the Pacific of tomorrow and the world of tomorrow.

NEW YORK TRIBUNE—Economy and protests against the burden of taxes, of course, have had a large influence in bringing the great reduction, but they are not the sole factors. The disarmament sentiment is equally consequential. We have returned to the traditional national policy. We are showing trust that the conference will achieve something and that confidence in neighbor nations which is the foundation of peace.

NEW YORK EVENING MAIL—It is America that has summoned the disarmament conference. If that conference results in relieving the suffering peoples of Europe from the burden of militaristic taxation, America will have done more for humanity than she could possibly do by butting into every European dispute.

For Any Practical Relief.

LOUISVILLE COURIER-JOURNAL—The delegations ought to be able to accomplish all that any American delegation could accomplish. The Courier-Journal not only believes that, but hopes that the conference will make a real beginning in lightening the armament burden of this nation. It will uphold every intelligent effort of the American commission to that end, and it will applaud any practical relief it may achieve, just as gratefully as if it came through the League of Nations or any other instrumentality.

THE NEW YORK EVENING POST—The obstacles to armament reduction in Europe which the League Commission enumerates will appear less insurmountable if it is shown in the Pacific that other obstacles can be surmounted. If Europe is confronted with the concrete example of the three naval Powers finding budget relief in a cutting of armaments, Europe's own crushing

Japan at Washington Conference to Favor Armament Reduction but to Bar Any Change in Her Status in Far East

WHAT of Japan? What will she do to help bring about the settlement of vexing issues at the conference to limit armament, to be held in Washington in November? Are her differences with the United States irreconcilable? Is she ruled by her militarists? Is she Prussianized? Does she really hate us? What of her attitude toward China? Is she seeking world dominion?

These questions and others will be answered in a series of articles written for the Post-Dispatch by Charles Merz, until recently associate editor of the New Republic, a student of world politics and a writer of ability, who has just returned from Japan and the Far East.

The first of his articles is presented herewith.

THE relations of Japan and America come to a head with the Pacific conference in November. What does Japan think about disarmament? What will be her attitude toward those Far Eastern questions which the Harding administration proposes to discuss?

It was on July 11 that Mr. Harding's invitation reached Tokio. And it chanced that on that same day I arrived in Tokio myself. I was there while the American proposal was debated. I was able to watch the situation while it developed. While the exchange of notes between Tokio and Washington was taking place I talked with various leaders of opinion in Japan—statesmen like Makino, Kato and Goto; such financiers as the governor of the Bank of Japan and Viscount Shibusawa, business men and college men, trades unionists and editors.

The first thing that was clear about Mr. Harding's invitation was that nobody in Tokio had expected it. It was a bolt from the blue. And various statesmen and a large section of the press were immediately suspicious. What was Mr. Harding aiming at?

"The purpose of the American Government," declared Marquis Okuma in an interview with the Kokumin, "is obviously to maneuver Japan out of her strong position in the Far East. This conference is the sequel of the Paris conference, where the American delegates failed to curb the supremacy of Japan in the Orient. Now they will try it again."

That idea was echoed by an important section of the press. The Osaka Mainichi thought the object of the conference was "for Europe and America to absorb Far Eastern interests in a manner convenient to themselves." The Kokumin declared itself opposed to "being befooled by America." And the Yoroduzu asserted that "all this is merely a plan for realizing American ambitions in China. The object in settling those problems (in the Far East) is to make Japan impotent and to make China act as America pleases. * * * Generosity toward a wolf only whets its greed."

Linked With English Move.

It was not alone the fact that Mr. Harding's offer was unexpected and broadly phrased, hinting at discussion of far-reaching interest to Japan. What troubled many Japanese was its coincidence with a certain move on England's part.

For it must be remembered that less than a fortnight before Mr. Harding's offer came to Tokio, the Government of England suddenly decided that there was no immediate need for settling the question whether the Anglo-Japanese alliance should be renewed. The Lord Chancellor announced that there had been a slight mistake. The treaty of alliance wasn't really dead. It was good for another winter, effective until July 13, 1922.

Now to Americans this action may have seemed either the bona fide discovery of a jurist better versed in treaties and their ways than Mr. Lloyd George himself; or it may have seemed an easy means of postponing a decision which (thanks to the Dominion Premiers) was proving hard to reach.

But to many Japanese it meant something far more explicit and disturbing than all that. It meant that Great Britain had turned a cold shoulder upon her ally in the East, thrown a 10-year-old alliance to the winds.

"Japan is threatened with isolation in international politics," the Osaka Asahi warned its readers. "It is impossible to escape the conclusion that England places more importance on the friendship of the Americans than on that of the Japanese."

Suspicion of England.

A dozen other influential newspapers agreed. Politicians and college professors struck the same note in interviews. Kenjiro Tokutomi, editor of the Kokumin and member of the House of Peers, asserted:

"Japan beat Russia in the Russian War. Japan drove Germany from the East in the World War. In other words, Japan has done all which Britain wished her to do. No wonder that the English are averse to a renewal of the agreement."

While Prof. Kojido Sujimori of Waseda University declared things had come to such a pass that "the only way for Japan to get out of her impending isolation is by the formation of an alliance with Soviet Russia," he did not propose a workmen's and soldiers' council for Tokio. "What I advocate is that Japan should cultivate the friendship of Russia."

It was natural that Mr. Harding's proposal, coming close upon the heels of a denouement in London which had excited so considerable a stir, should be received throughout Japan with somewhat more suspicion than it might normally have evoked. This connection between the two events is worth observing. And it was natural, too, that many of those who felt that England was turning from Japan should also see the hand of England in this new note from Washington. This innocent-looking proposal for a conference might be a counter stroke on England's part.

Such an interpretation of the Harding note was openly proposed. The Chugai Shogyu declared there was good reason for believing that "the two Anglo-Saxon nations have a secret purpose to serve in calling an international disarmament conference. * * * The result will be the injury of Japanese interests in China."

Caught Between the Two.

And the Kokumin informed its readers: "It will be seen that the plot of the Pacific conference has been drawn up entirely by Great Britain. * * * That Great Britain denounced the Anglo-Japanese alliance and projected the Pacific conference was for the purpose of recovering from America the interests in China which she has lost owing to the destruction of the alliance. Of course, Great Britain does not care a fig about Japan. The Pacific conference will prove only a trial of strength between the British and American diplomacy, and Japan will only be tossed about in the cyclone resulting from the contest."

Such gloomy forebodings were common in the first days following receipt of Mr. Harding's note. I have, to be sure, cited evidence only of one sort—that displaying suspicion and alarm. But I have done so for the purpose of showing that such opinion did exist, and exists in many quarters. Interests essential to Japan were being threatened. An Anglo-Saxon plot was brewing.

This was a first reaction. And second thought has proved more reassuring. There is still hostility in Japan to the idea of any conference at all. But under the leadership of Government spokesmen and of the more conservative section of the press there has been a growth of confidence. Only by this means, however—only by the drawing of a definite line between the two halves of Mr. Harding's offer.

First, there is the question of disarmament. That half of Mr. Harding's invitation now meets with wide approval in Japan. The Prime Minister of the Navy is ready to reconsider plans already formulated. Japan, he says, "will not insist on the completion of her present expansion program if an international agreement on restriction is reached." The Tokio Asahi, the Nichi Nichi, the Jiji, the Hochi and a score of other influential journals bid the Government lose no chance to make disarmament a success.

Her Huge Armament Expense.

The fact is that figures showing how much greater a percentage of her total governmental expenses Japan now devotes to army and navy than does America are impressive from two points of view. To Americans they suggest trouble possible in the future. To most Japanese they mean trouble already come.

For Japan, without America's resources, is attempting to swing a heavier program of armament, relatively. And those Americans who believe that all Japan acclaims the building of a military machine to outmatch our own ignore the fact of taxes. It is significant that some weeks before Mr. Harding's invitation reached Tokio the eight leading Chambers of Commerce of Japan called upon the Government to conclude "a proper agreement with the Powers regarding disarmament," so that "more energy may be devoted to the development of industries."

In Japan, as in any Western nation, the larger the army and navy the higher the taxes, and there are forces working for a limitation of armaments as a means of eliminating waste. Moreover, it must be remembered that even for the militarists of the country the great goal is China, not the coast of California. That is true for plain geographical reasons. Any program for disarmament which leaves Japan no weaker in comparison with the other Powers will lighten the burden of taxation and free for other purposes the capital and energies of the empire.

Those purposes vary with the purposes of the different groups which seek to shape the destinies of Japan. But, except in the case of that group which thinks Japan would actually be able to outbuild America in battleships and artillery, a program of relative disarmament is an obstacle to nobody's ambitions.

Weapons Against China.

Even for the expansionists a "supreme" military machine is not the essential factor. It is not with such a machine that Japan could reach out into China—but with loans and intrigue, a mortgage on the resources of the country, and the half-hidden threat of force that will remain superior to China's, regardless of any decisions that can be made in Washington.

Japan, at the Washington conference, will be interested in disarmament; will be more interested in naval disarmament than military; still more interested in the question of island fortifications in the Pacific.

When it comes to the second half of Mr. Harding's proposal—the invitation to a "discussion of Far Eastern questions"—the situation is a great deal different. There exists in Japan today a widespread concern about those "Far Eastern questions," and how it will be proposed to discuss them. This concern is expressed partly in the fear that Mr. Harding's conference will attempt to bite off too large a piece. As the Jiji says:

"If concrete problems, the interests of the Powers in which are very complicated, are taken in hand it will needlessly confuse the discussions and interfere with the proceedings, with the result that it may become impossible to discuss the disarmament question, to which America attaches the greatest importance."

But behind this doubt lie graver worries. Is "discussion of Far Eastern questions" only a polite way of saying "discussions of ways to curtail the privileges of Japan in Eastern Asia"? Statesmen and publicists have suggested that interpretation, it has occurred to every newspaper in the empire.

"In the light of ideas among the Powers since the war," said the Yorodzu, "it is more than clear that the proposal is one designed by those who do not like us, to place our affairs before an international conference."

And the Hicho urges: "Japan should explain that she stands in a special position in regard to China, especially Manchuria, in the same way that America stands in relation to South America, and on this point an understanding should be reached with the countries concerned."

Japanese Reservations.

Such concern is everywhere apparent. And to the outsider it seems that all important political factions and an overwhelming majority of those people who think about politics at all stand behind their Government in the reservations it has made regarding the approaching conference. Two classes of Far Eastern questions must be "scrupulously avoided"—those involving problems "such as are of sole concern to certain particular Powers" and those seeming to threaten the integrity of "accomplished facts."

Problems "such as are of sole concern to certain particular Powers" mean China in general, Manchuria in particular. "Accomplished facts" mean Yap, Shantung, Korea. It is possible that before the conference meets an agreement concerning Yap will have been reached between America and Japan on some such basis as American recognition of Japan's mandate, Japanese Principles of Politics.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

LIKE many another woman, I am anxious to exercise my voting privilege understandingly. I have tried to "read up" on politics but I am dismayed to find that history of politics has been worked almost to the exclusion of theory of politics.

To my inquiries as to principles my male friends show curious reactions. Most of them set down as "principles" certain lines of policy which they personally fancy. Many others deny the possibility of first principles in politics. Politics, they say, is a practical art which can know no hard and fast rules. In vain I tell them that I perfectly understand that hard and fast rules, i. e., absolute principles, are not for us finite beings; that I am asking for the tentative working principles by which men have been steering our ships of state. They never tell me, but they hotly repudiate my suggestion that they seem to be simon-pure opportunists. And the amazing part is that they are otherwise very intelligent men, no one of whom would for one instant think of running his own private business without a well-considered, fairly definite plan of action.

You have an editorial writer who from time to time tackles the subject of political fundamentals and comes very near to satisfying my understanding. He takes the proposition of "government by consent of the governed" as his base, and reasons upward from that. If only he would dig down a bit below that stratum!

The "consent" postulate is incomplete. It may mean anything you please. The consent of how many of the governed? Not all of them, certainly. That would be unworkable. The majority then? Majority of what—of the whole people?—of the qualified voters?—of the actual voters? Even if it were possible to get the real sentiment of the majority of all the people, would that sentiment constitute a "right" of government? We all know that it wouldn't. Government doesn't rest on "rights" at all. Popular government is plainly a device which freemen set up to maintain a tolerable social order. This much, at least, is acknowledged by practically all men and women who give the subject two or three consecutive thoughts. This much, then, would seem to deserve formulation as a basic principle of government. But if the people wish their government to undertake functions which look beyond that social order which we all demand, then surely far more than the bare numerical majority must "consent" before such functions can pretend to rational warrant or workability. Isn't our failure as self-governors primarily a failure to bring our common sense to bear on the question: How many of the governed must consent?

The Way of a Woman.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WHEN the Creator put Mother Eve on earth Father Adam was so enraptured and enthralled with her physical charms that he lost interest in everything else, and spent all his waking moments in attendance on her and preparing for her bodily comforts. And ever since his male descendants have vied with each other in competition as to who would have the most regal consort.

They scaled the almost inaccessible peaks of the Andes in pursuit of the swift gazelle to secure the softest leather for shoes to encase her tiny feet.

They followed the mink and otter even into the frigid Arctic circle in search of rich furs to drape across her alabaster shoulders.

They penetrated far into the tangled jungle in chase of birds of rarest plumage to adorn her silken tresses.

They delved into the very bowels of the planet far beyond reach of the rays of the sun to dig glittering gems and precious metals to fashion ornaments to encircle her tapering fingers.

They slaved in wind and weather to erect palatial abodes for her home life.

And in return!

She now demands his pants.

The Myobs.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I SUGGEST the formation of a new fraternal order, the name being derived according to modern usage, from the initials of the motto "Mind your own business." There will be no mystic nomenclature, no regalia, no ritual, no initiation, no fees and no officers.

It should be a voluntary association of American citizens who are willing to respect the right of their fellow-citizens.

A great deal of the inharmony existing today in human intercourse is due to the persistent effort of the individual to make his ideas a standard for others to follow. Husbands and wives tempestuously, and as a rule ineffectually, attempt to regulate each other. Neighbors, with varying degrees of ardor, dictate to neighbors. Friends seek to dominate over friends, and everybody tries to insert a finger in every one else's pie.

We are cursed not only by overregulation on the statute books but superabundance of regulation in private capacities. The Myobs would endeavor to let each man lead his own life. A. C.

PUTTING MEN TO WORK.

The suggestion of James W. Byrnes that the city borrow from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 for immediate clean-up and repair work to relieve unemployment—excellent if it were possible—seems to be barred by law. The city cannot borrow beyond the limits of its anticipated revenue without the approval of two-thirds of the voters.

The suggestion that jobs be multiplied by division of time between the employed and the unemployed, making half-week instead of whole-week employment for each man, does not seem practical. It would be costly to both the employed and the employers. The men employed now would be put on half-pay, with a compulsory readjustment of living conditions to an extremely low basis. Many would be compelled to suffer losses in addition to loss of pay and would be impoverished. All would be poverty stricken. In any but manual labor jobs the employers would suffer great inconvenience and probably heavy losses on account of changes from experienced and trained employes to inexperienced and untrained employes. Where would the line of division be drawn?

The plan would not increase production or the wage fund, two most desirable objects. It would be better to have a general reduction of the wage scale to meet the emergency and thus permit the employment of more men.

The suggestion that each manufacturer take on one or two more men is more to the point. Reduction of wage scales and material costs seem necessary to a revival of business in some industries. This plan is particularly needful in the building industry, where wages and material costs are very high. Better employment at good wages than high wage scales without employment. Better business at fair profits than no business at excessive prices. Agreements, if only temporary, for fair reductions of wages and of material prices would be wise because it would result in immediate activity in industries that are now stagnant. The revival of these industries would absorb a large percentage of jobless men. In the case of building it would ease the housing situation and reduce rentals, which at present excessive standards impair purchasing power and depress all business.

The reduction of prices to a basis of reasonable profit at every point, from the factory to the retail store, was the best recommendation of the Unemployment Conference. Of course, wages should follow the reduction in proportionate degree. Business would then return to normal and profitable activity in every direction would be stimulated.

For the city's part in unemployment relief there seems to be no feasible plan except a bond issue. The deficit in the city's treasury precludes increased expenditure from current revenues or from temporary borrowing. It is a pity that some great work of permanent value such as the improvement of the river front or the River des Peres should not be included in the bond issue projects. A great permanent project of that kind would put the bond issue on a high plane of achievement, but the list of improvements submitted by Mr. Aloe for his suggested $16,000,000 bond issue is excellent. All of them are valuable and immediately necessary to the development of the city and the convenience and safety of the people. The suggestion of the Associated Retailers of a war memorial building which would meet various public needs is admirable. St. Louis should have a memorial of this kind. Every dollar of the $30,000,000 bond issue recommended by the Associated Retailers could be used to the great benefit of the city.

The amount of the bond issue and the uses to which the proceeds are to be put, if approved by the voters, are to be determined by the local commission, in co-operation with the city authorities. But if the city is to do anything it must be done through a bond issue. The people of St. Louis should realize that St. Louis cannot afford to lag behind other municipalities in this crisis. It must do its part.

The problem of providing work for the unemployed is not the problem of the city alone; it is the problem of the State and of every unit in the State. The State and every community in the State must do their share. Otherwise the cities will be overburdened and the movement will fail of full fruition.

THE CRAZE FOR SPECIALIZING.

The American craze for specialization, which has gone to extreme lengths in recent years, apparently has made such conquests among universities that the average student may now be said to finish college without an education. The tendency is well and sharply criticised in a recent article of Mr. J. Middleton Murray, in which he analyzes one of the prevailing "surveys" with which a university attempts to impart a superficial coat of general culture to students who are specializing.

Unquestionably the growing severity of competition in the business and professional world is largely responsible for this alarming mania for one-sidedness, just as it is responsible for most of our other phases of cultural decadence. The engineer, the doctor, the economist who has to compete with men who have abandoned everything else in the effort to get on in their professions, must do likewise or perish. And he finds no time for history, the classics, a comprehensive examination of contemporary literature, art and music—nor even, for that matter, of the other professions. And so, instead of moving toward communism, as the utopians would have it, we seem in the process of breaking up into new blocs, divided on the lines of business and professional interest.

This is a "return to tribalism" of a far more real and dangerous sort than Mr. Lloyd George was talking about. If the future is to be one in which mankind is comprised of countless "special" groups, maintaining a sort of remote contact, what hope is there for peace, common understanding and the universal brotherhood? If there is one plane on which we can be brothers, it is on the plane where we find the beauty and sublimity of life. A universal and mutual absorption in these things would likely do more toward establishing general understanding and good will than all the exchanges of the diplomats.

Yet the universities, which should be the most aggressive and uncompromising protagonists of broad and deep knowledge, seem to be supinely yielding to the demands of the market place, and, by making it easy for the "specializing" student to acquire a gloss of tinsel culture, betraying the very cause which should be dearest to them. Specializing is necessary, and is a logical development of our complex civilization, but civilization does not demand that it be carried to the exclusion of culture—if it did, would it be the sort of a civilization worth preserving?

A RICH WOMAN ON STRIKE

As the daughter of John D. Rockefeller Mrs. Harold F. McCormick of Chicago enjoys hereditary eminence. There is distinction, too, in her position as the wife of the head of the harvester company. But this reflected greatness has failed to satisfy her. She is ambitious to be a personage in her own right. She has chosen psychology as the medium in which to achieve individuality.

That the lady's ambition should have snapped the McCormick family ties is, of course, unfortunate, but in this instance such a misfortune will be regarded as incidental. Public interest will focus rather on the dissatisfaction with fortuitous glamor and the purpose to do something "on her own." Probably public interest will be sympathetic, too. The unrest which permeates the so-called rank and file today, according to a sociologist of some standing, is caused by the "desire to be somebody." That "quantity production" and factory practice generally take no account of such aspiration is believed by some to be one of capital's grossest blunders.

Mrs. McCormick, it may be surmised, does not know that she is a striker, but she is. She is protesting the order of things in her sphere. If she were not the daughter of the richest man in the world, if she had come to America a Russian peasant, if she had learned how to make cigars and subsequently achieved leadership among the workers of that trade, she likely today would be a Rose Pastor Stokes.

"Julia O'Grady and the Colonel's lady are sisters under the skin." Does not a similar relationship exist between the president emeritus of Harvard and the man with the hoe?

SOCRATES AND HIS PUPILS.

SOCRATES: I don't suppose you young men have thought very much about the singular plight in which the country finds itself after the war?

Glaucon: We do think about it, of course; but it is too much for very young philosophers, Socrates.

Socrates: I dare say. As a matter of fact, I am not sure that it is not proving too much for even us oldsters. At any rate, we do not seem to be making our way out of the dilemma.

Glaucon: No, we don't.

Socrates: Suppose we consider what would probably happen if we launched some great national undertaking?

Thrasymachus: You mean something on the order of the Panama Canal?

Socrates: Exactly. Let us say, for instance, that at a time when there are millions of people out of work and business is so nearly at a standstill that almost no industrial stock can get on its feet, we undertook to improve the Mississippi River and its principal tributaries. Would not that give employment to a great horde of people, and would it not revive all business for creating a great market for supplies?

Polemarchus: Of course.

Socrates: We have these rivers to improve, any way. The Mississippi barge line has established beyond all debate the comparative cheapness of water-borne freights. We knew they were cheaper. It has been established on the seas and Great Lakes. We let people dissuade us from applying the same principle to the rivers by believing the rivers in some way different. We know better now. We know that from the parent stock on the Lower Mississippi there is to grow a vast system of inland waterway traffic, extending into every tributary of the Mississippi and becoming in time one of the great transportation systems of the world. Why not seize the present opportunity to hasten that day by improving and making serviceable all of these rivers? They are not in some far away place. They run through the most fertile part of our country, and in their watershed resides a majority of the people. We know that in time this section, because of its comparative nearness to all parts of the country, its easy access to power and fuel, and the cheapness with which freights can be moved up and down from the sea, is to become the great industrial region of the United States. Why not, then, turn our national energy and wealth into making these streams what they are bound to become, thereby meeting halfway what is inevitable and bridging the gulf into which we can otherwise easily fall?

Glaucon: Do you think the rest of the country would consent to such a program?

Socrates: Great Caesar! The rest of the country would be so glad to see something done to revive business and provide work that it would not care what it was. The objection most likely to be made is that this would take time, whereas the need is immediate. My answer to that is that nothing really helpful can be done without some preparation. Let us take the organization of Mr. Hoover's commission. Probably the most practical man in our public life has not yet got his commission together and held a meeting. Once the country determines to do something like improving the Mississippi and its tributaries, the work can be speedily got under way. You may recall what happened when we decided to build the Panama Canal. Other people hem and haw, but when the people of the United States decide to do something they do it with dispatch. Ask the gentleman who formerly answered to the address of Kaiser Wilhelm. He knows something about our alacrity.

Polemarchus: You have it, I think.

Socrates: Thanks, Polemarchus. Now let us all fall silent and see who can think of something else.

There is no foreseeing what may be found in the Cahokia Mounds. This same Mr. Moorehead, just before the Chicago fair, made a remarkable find in the Hopewell group of Ohio. He found an altar upon which the Indians laid in some sort of sacrifice or ceremony a great quantity of obsidian blades. Obsidian is the glass fused by the heat of volcanoes. Some of the finest ceremonial objects made by the Indians were made of obsidian. This is particularly true of the extreme Northwest, where obsidian is abundant. Obsidian objects are infrequent in the Mississippi Valley, but Mr. Moorehead nevertheless took from this altar in Ohio the finest collection of obsidian blades ever found in America. He has been unable to find exactly that obsidian nearer than the Yellowstone Park. How did those blades get to Ohio? What a romance is suggested by that question, and what flights through dim and silent time the fancy does take in the course of speculating upon the history of those beautiful ceremonial relics. No such work in flint or obsidian has been found anywhere else in the United States. As exquisitely as our Cahokia Indians worked in flint, hematite, quartzite and copper, we have nothing from them equaling those obsidian blades from the Hopewell group. So that when we stand and look upon those hoary old earthworks across the river, let us not be too sure that they do not tell a greater story than our own. What is that story, and how else may we know it than in the way Mr. Moorehead is working? He is going into the mounds to see what they reveal. He expects to be engaged at that through several years, and if he does not find something entirely beyond anything we know at this time of the people before us hereabouts, the disappointment will be the keenest in American archeology. For there are no more Cahokia Mounds. Here was the old American metropolis. There was no other, and if we cannot learn what we wish to know here, where then may we turn?

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by the leading published newspapers and periodicals on the question of the day.

FREEDOM OF THE SEAS.

From the Washington Post.

THE freedom of the seas was one of the prime demands put forth by former President Wilson as a basic point in the world peace that was to be attained at Paris. The United States has built up a merchant marine of the first rank and intends to keep its ships upon all seas, engaged in peaceful trade. It intends that those vessels shall carry on business in times of war, carefully avoiding infringement upon the rights of belligerents. This Government for many years has urged the adoption by the nations of the rule of exemption from seizure of private vessels in time of war. This rule, it is held, should apply to the private vessels of belligerents as well as to those of neutrals. The British Government, however, has always held tenaciously to the right to capture the merchant vessels of an enemy, and during the recent war the rule was extended to include the right to capture neutral vessels suspected of carrying goods indirectly destined for the enemy. In the next war there will be belligerents and neutrals, as heretofore. The belligerents will endeavor to capture the enemy's merchant vessels, and neutral nations will be embroiled whenever their vessels are seized by a belligerent on the charge that the vessels are carrying goods for the enemy. The world's commerce will be subjected to all the losses and perils which were experienced in the recent war, if the belligerents are strong enough upon the sea to work their will.

THE EUGENIC CONGRESS.

From the New York Tribune.

WITHOUT examining the agenda of the second International Congress on Eugenics, in session at the American Museum of Natural History, one may be sure the program is altruistic. The delegates are as well-born as they can ever be. "Each man is an omnibus in which all his ancestors ride," said Oliver Wendell Holmes. The eugenic idea? Is it not to make the omnibus a many-cylindered automobile? The eugenists look forward a hundred generations or so. The complexities of heredity, the prenatal influences that shape character and ability are admittedly almost beyond human ken. Great men and women have not in most instances had a noteworthy ancestry. Exceptional parents are more likely, it is conceded, than commonplace parents to produce exceptional children, but this is not a scientific certainty. Nature is full of disappointments and as full of welcome surprises. The pioneer in this baffling field of genetic research was Sir Francis Galton, who invented the word eugenics. He was a cousin of Charles Darwin, and it is of good augury that a son of the evolutionist, Maj. Leonard Darwin, is among those assembled at the present congress to challenge the mysteries of birth.

THE FINANCIAL DEPRESSION.

From Scribner's Magazine.

WHAT is to be the outcome of this strangely confused position? Its circumstances are no doubt peculiarly complicated by the consequences of the war, yet it differs from other periods of after-panic depression only in degree and aspect but not in kind. The answer to the question will be the same as has been made in every previous period of economic reaction and relapse after a period of wasted capital and credit. In such episodes prices are readjusted first, debts are paid next through the slow process of new production and new business energy. Eventually, when economic equilibrium turns out to have been restored, the world's real necessities compel resumption of production and trade activity on a larger scale than history had ever previously witnessed. But the real question in the mind of the markets is not whether such revival in finance and industry will come, but how long it will be in coming.

Keen Interest in Children's Hospital Benefit at Which Experts Will Play Bridge Game, Using Elaborately Gowned Young Women as "Cards," Miss Eleanor Simmons Being the Queen of Hearts.

ALTHOUGH the social season is now nominally opened, the real winter gayety will not begin until the numerous debut parties are in progress in early November. The interim, however, will not be dull, for much enthusiasm has been awakened by another large, public affair, the triple benefit which the Auxiliary Board of the Children's Hospital will give on the evening of Oct. 26 at the Missouri Athletic Association to raise funds for the sick and needy children of the city. A human bridge game, in which the decks of cards will be represented by girls, will be a novel feature of the program, which will include, also, a ball and a bridge tournament.

The human card game is new in this country and the players will be experts of national reputation. Among those expected are Milton C. Work, Wynne Ferguson and Bryant McCampbell of New York. They will be seated at a table below the stage on which the human deck will be assembled and each player will play his "hand" by indicating moves to the girls on the stage. These will be costumed in quaint representations of playing cards.

Miss Eleanor Simmons, Veiled Prophet Queen, will be garbed as the Queen of Hearts, the three other queens being impersonated by Mrs. Harrison Hoblitzelle, Miss Ada Johnson and Miss Marian Franciscus. Included among the various "cards" will be Misses Elizabeth Bemis, Frances West, Gloria Geisinger, Mary Denman Clark, Elizabeth Parker, Emily Milliken, Elizabeth Cook, Elise Garneau, Elizabeth Luytics, Audrey Faust, Florence Leland, Marie Clarkson, Elizabeth Ballard, Mary Scudder-Bond, Dorothy McBride, Julia Fay Carton, Dorothy Simmons, Irene Goddard, Elizabeth Terry, Oguita Queeny, Janet Gregg, Idella Bush, Mary Etta Randolph and Catherine Louise Crunden.

Mrs. William LaBeaume, Miss Frances Reid Jones, Mrs. Allen Cockrell, Mrs. Charles Parsons Pettus and William LaBeaume have charge of the human game. Mrs. Louis Hayward of the bridge tournament and Mrs. Aaron Rush of the dancing committees. Other members of the auxiliary board active in the benefit plan are: Mmes. C. R. D. Meier, George K. Conant, Dudley French, Robert Holland Jr., Edwin Stanard, James L. Ford Jr., Leslie Dana, Charles L. Russell, William Cocke, Sam Plant, William Maffitt, Edwin Nugent, O. L. Garrison Jr., L. R. Carter, Joseph W. Lewis, S. M. Kennard Jr., Theron Catlin, Leo De Smet Carton, and Miss Violet Bulleck and Miss Jane Shapleigh.

$5000 ALLOWED ADMINISTRATOR OF $1,000,000 LARKIN ESTATE

Fee Granted to Henry S. Caulfield, Now City Counselor, Who Served During Litigation.

Probate Judge Holtcamp yesterday allowed a fee of $5000 to Henry S. Caulfield, now City Counselor, for his services as administrator pendente lite in the estate of Eli H. Larkin, who died April 16, 1920, leaving property valued at about $1,000,000. Larkin left the bulk of his estate to the Ranken School of Mechanical Trades. Relatives contested the will.

Caulfield was appointed administrator April 16 last, after the filing of the contest, which was settled out of court last week. An allowance of $8000 also was made to Caulfield's counsel, the law firm of Case & Miller, of which Victor J. Miller, president of the Police Board, is a member.

Lectures on Foreign Paintings.

The first half of each lecture will be illustrated by lantern slides, and the second half will be in the presence of the paintings under discussion.

NEW MISSOURI U. BUILDINGS AS SOON AS PLANS ARE REABY

$1,000,000 Program to Be Started Soon, It Is Announced After Meeting of Curators.

Buildings to cost approximately $1,000,000 are to be constructed at Missouri University as soon as plans for the work have been completed, it was announced yesterday following a meeting of the board of curators. Gov. Hyde attended the meeting, which was held in the office of E. Lansing Ray, a member of the board. The university administration was represented by acting president J. C. Jones. Judge James E. Goodrich of Kansas City, chairman of the board presided.

The money for the building program has been appropriated by the State Legislature and will be available as soon as the work is commenced. A new hospital building to cost $250,000 will be erected on the west campus of the university. The plans for this building have been approved and the construction will begin in a few weeks. It is expected that the building will be ready for occupancy the latter part of next year. With this building the university intends to extend its medical course from four to six years.

Other buildings included in the program are a women's gymnasium to cost about $150,000; agricultural administration building, $200,000; chemistry building, $125,000; reconstruction of mechanical arts building, $50,000; enlargement of present medical building, $35,000, and power plan, $150,000.

The board also announced that plans are being prepared for the erection of a bureau of mines building at the School of Mines at Rolla. This building is to be constructed at the expense of the State and is to be used by the Government for research work as well as by the student body for educational purposes.

Business Houses Victimized.

Four Washington avenue merchandise houses reported to the St. Louis Association of Credit Men last week similar cases of having been defrauded of small amounts of merchandise, valued in all at less than $200. In each case some one telephoned the store and ordered a bill of goods in the name of a small furnishing goods store on Olive street, saying a boy would be sent for it. The furnishing goods store had nothing to do with the orders, which were delivered to the boy.

Take Your Headache To 423 N. Broadway

DR. F. J. GUILBAULT, OPTOMETRIST and OPTICIAN

People hate to acknowledge any physical infirmity. Long after they are convinced in their own minds that they need glasses or that their present glasses should be changed, they will put off having their eyes tested until headaches or other annoying symptoms of defective vision compel them to seek relief.

Thousands of persons during the past 17 years have found this relief from the pain and discomfort of impaired vision in the glasses which I have prescribed for them.

If you feel that you need glasses and particularly if you suffer from chronic headaches, I want to see you. One low price covers examination, lenses, frames and fitting.

NEW INDUSTRY AT FERGUSON

St. Louis, already known as a photographic center on account of the presence of several large dry plate companies, will soon add to its industrial district a large plant for the sensitizing of photographic paper. A six-acre tract at Ferguson has been acquired by the Republic Photographic Co., and the contract for the erection of buildings has been let.

Although the executive staff will be recruited from the ranks of a Kansas City corporation which is interested, the new industry will furnish employment for several hundred St. Louisans. The company will maintain a branch office in New York and intends later to establish another in Los Angeles. St. Louis will be the distributing center for the company's product.

The October Exhibit and Sale of Furs

A PREMIER event in the season of Furs is this annual October showing of handsome pieces. It is outstanding, not only in elegance but in effective savings, as well.

From the display room of one famed furrier after another have we gone, selecting with an attitude of fine discrimination the best that each had to offer. The finest of pelts and the handsomest of designs were our demands at all times. Thus have we assembled for The Fur Event of the year, a collection of such extent, of such magnificence, and of such variety as to surpass even our original extensive plans.

The Fur Pieces and Wraps to be seen in this display touch the keynote of exclusive fashions for the coming season.

Beautiful Wraps of Broadtail, Baby Caracul, Eastern Mink, Royal Ermine, Alaska Seal Skin, Mole Skin. Handsome Scarfs of Russian Sable, Chinchilla, Hudson Bay Sable, Mink, Fisher —are among the handsomer and newer pieces included in this sale and showing.

A point of greatest interest attached to this splendid showing is the extreme sort of savings possible for the one who purchases at this time. Every piece shown, from the handsomest to the most modest, assumes a price for this selling lower than it is possible to quote at any other time. (Third Floor.)

JAPAN TO FAVOR ARMS REDUCTION, BUT BAR ANY CHANGE IN EAST

guarantee of America's privilege to use the island as a base for transpacific communication.

As for the rest? On the proposed program for the conference which the American State Department has devised one entry reads: "China—Territorial integrity." Will the American delegates urge or insist upon a surrender of the economic privileges in the Peninsula of Shantung, which Japan has taken over?

A second item reads: "China—Administrative integrity." Will Mr. Hughes and Mr. Lodge demand the cancellation of all quasi-secret agreements concluded by China under pressure from Japan?

Another heading reads: "Open door—Equality of commercial and industrial opportunity." Will that point be the subject for another broad statement of principle? Or will it call for the consideration of specific facts?

The Status Quo in Asia.

There are other points to which the same degree of uncertainty applies. The American Government is the doubtful factor in the conference, not the Japanese.

For the Japanese position, I think, will be "stand pat." Preserve the status quo. Her delegates will hold that ground with the same polite insistence which finally secured inclusion of the phrase "special interests" in the treaty Mr. Lansing negotiated with Viscount Ishii, which won for them Mr. Wilson's agreement in their acquisition of all German rights and privileges in Shantung.

And they will hold to this position in no mood of truculence, but with the genuine conviction that the status quo is essential to the present safety and future development of their empire. They will hope, no doubt, that their case will be apparent to the Western Powers.

It is the case of a rapidly expanding empire, excluded from the West, which cannot brook exclusion from the East. As for China? When will Great Britain surrender the complete sovereignty she exercises over Hongkong—another prize of victory in war—or France desert her monopolies in the South?

Today, of course, the first concern of Japan is security at all costs. Much depends upon the attitude which the delegates of England will assume. But upon the status quo in Eastern Asia I think the Japanese will make every effort to stand fast. In various ways the political situation will favor their position. The East is not a good place to begin throwing stones. Too many people live in houses made of glass.

The Attitude of America.

As for America, there was an idea going the rounds in Tokio when I left that city which is so cogent that it has probably suggested its lf to a large number of interested people. It follows this line of reasoning:

Here is Mr. Harding championing the idea of a Pacific conference. It is his first big effort, the real debut of his administration. It must be a big success.

It will, moreover, be the excuse for failure to make progress with domestic legislation—tax revision for instance—until the last foreign delegate has started home again. Washington will be "too busy" with its conference.

Yes, it must be a big success. And to the great newspaper public "success" is unanimity, a glorious oratorical blowout at the finish, everybody patting everybody else's shoulder. And so, because this is its first attempt, the Harding administration will be more inclined to make any and all concessions, than it would be—if it had a few earlier diplomatic victories tucked inside its belt. A few victories—and a present failure would not seem so costly. But now—making its initial bow?

To encourage disarmament—to show the American public that official Japan has no wish for "war"—to stand pat in the Far East. That, I think, will be the position of Japan's delegates at the Pacific conference in November.

(Who rules Japan? Mr. Merz asks in his second article. Mr. Merz answers his question by asking more. Is it the Emperor who on paper is nine-tenths of the Government? Or is the Diet supreme? Or the Cabinet? Neither of these is the real ruler, he tells us, explaining how the Japanese Government functions.)

Bullet Fatal to Negress.

Sarah Bowers, negress, of 1606 [illegible] avenue, East St. Louis died Friday from a bullet wound in the rigt leg received Monday night when a revolver handled by Herbert Winters, negro, of St. Louis, was accidentally discharged.

MORE DEPOSITIONS IN PILLOW MURDER CASE

Victor J. Miller Denies Barring McAuliffe and Casey From Seeing Attorneys.

Depositions were resumed yesterday in the case of Thomas (Dewey) McAuliffe and Leo Casey, under indictment on the charge of killing Erris Pillow, a negro messenger for the North St. Louis Savings Trust Co., who was shot in front of his home, 4046 Fairfax avenue, the night of May 9 last.

Pillow was to have been a witness against James Hogan, paroled convict, charged with robbery following Pillow's identification of Hogan as one of the two highwaymen who kidnaped him in an automobile from Jefferson avenue and Wash street, April 4, and robbed him of $155, a $500 Liberty Bond, and $65,931 in checks which he was carrying from the First National Bank to the North St. Louis Savings Trust Co.

Testimony by Victor J. Miller.

Victor J. Miller, president of the Board of Police Commissioners, testified that he took a particular interest in the case because a State's witness had been murdered. He denied having at any time issued an order that McAuliffe and Casey were not to be permitted to see counsel while in custody of the police.

"The Chief of Police informed me that detectives had obtained valuable information concerning the murder from witnesses who did not want their identity known for fear that they would be put out of the way," said President Miller. "I interviewed the witnesses and assured them that they would be protected by the police."

Reference to Cartridges.

Chief of Police O'Brien testified that he directed that McAuliffe and Casey be taken to an outlying police station, and that the names of the witnesses be withheld. He said, in response to a question, that he took no part in the arrest of McAuliffe or Casey. He interviewed several witnesses. He was asked if he had seen cartridges passed to one of the witnesses at the Souland Street Station. He said he had, but that he did not observe who passed them. The defense contends that one of the witnesses was given ammunition by policemen to defend himself.

Syrena Walker, 17, of 4186 Delmar boulevard, a negro, testified that he was at Sarah street and Fairfax avenue when Pillow was shot. He said he saw a white man jump into an automobile as it was driven away from the scene of the shooting. He said he was unable to identify the man or the automobile.

Detectives Patrick Lardner and Louis Kaiser testified that they were detained as a special guard to watch McAuliffe and Casey when the latter were held at the Mounted District Station.

Gov. Hyde to Speak on Sunday School.

ELEVEN PRECAUTIONS TO PREVENT FIRES

List Compiled in Connection With Observance of Fire Prevention Day Tomorrow.

A list of "don'ts" and precautions was issued yesterday by the Fire Prevention Committee of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, in convention with the observance of National Fire Prevention day tomorrow. President Harding, Gov. Hyde and Mayor Kiel, by concurrent action, have set aside tomorrow as Fire Prevention day, and ministers in all St. Louis pulpits have been asked to mention this topic in their sermons today.

Eleven precautions follow:

Give the preference to "strike-on-the-box" or "safety" matches, but in case of buying the "strike anywhere" match, get one in which the white head is surrounded by a black bulb.

Never throw away a match until every spark is out.

Keep matches out of the reach of little children.

Caution as to Stoves.

Place stoves, furnaces and pipes far enough from walls and woodwork to avoid overheating, and cover the nearest wooden surfaces with sheet asbestos, sheet iron, or tin. If iron or tin is used, leave an air space behind it.

Never pour ashes into wooden boxes or barrels. Have a strong metal box.

Thaw frozen water pipes with hot water, not with flame.

Be careful not to use stove polish on a hot stove. Wait until it is cold, and be sure you know what is in the stove polish you are using. Buy the safe kinds.

Don't allow rubbish of any kind to accumulate.

Always remember that you must take no chances with gasoline. It is one of the most dangerous materials in common use. It must always be kept in a tightly fastened can, never in gasoline bottles. Never clean with gasoline in-doors.

Never look for gas with a match or flame.

Never leave an electric device, even for a moment, without making sure that the current is turned off.

Former Fire Marshal to Speak.

T. Alfred Fleming, formerly fire marshal of Ohio, and chairman of the National Fire Prevention Association, will speak on "The Red Peril," at a joint luncheon of the Chamber of Commerce and other civic organizations at Hotel Statler Wednesday. Moving pictures entitled "The Danger That Never Sleeps," also will be shown.

TORIAL COMMENT OWS WORLD HOPE IN DISARMAMENT CONGRESS

problems will compel a re- of land armaments.

league report declares that "the financial position of the European States imperiously demands further reduction of military expenditures, and indeed it is not too much to say that the economic revival of Europe depends largely upon such reductions being effected."

When the report goes on to say that limitation of naval armaments can be effectively secured at Washington it is only uttering an appeal for Washington to show the way.

Philadelphia Record—Of course, the people of this country know that "the Government at Washington will still live," regardless of the doings of the conference. What they want to see is a serious and sincere effort on the part of the representatives of this Government, which has issued the invitations for this international confab, to make the meeting a great success.

Boston Globe—The time will come when enough of the people of the world decide to put an end to war. Then it will stop.

OMAHA WORLD-HERALD—In the final outcome it is the people who pay the awful costs of war and give their sons to feed its black maw, who will pass judgment on the work of the conference which is to assemble in Washington shortly, and particularly on the contributions of its success or failure made by the American representatives. It is the people who are staggering under the back-breaking burden of enormous armaments, who realize that they are a growing menace threatening civilization with insolvence, and who see clearly that they point unerringly to future wars. Whatever diplomatics and Senators and rulers may do and say, the people will not be content with faint-hearted temporizing, or with conclusions lacking in vision, courage and true devotion to the ideals of peace.

Leading French Opinion.

A summary of the opinion expressed in the newspapers follows:

Bon Soir—France is not disinterested in the question of armaments. They must be limited; we agree with everyone on that point. And we will prove to our allies and to our present associates how weak is the accusation of militarism which is being levelled against us.

Journal Des Debats—If some reduction of armaments then can be brought about—at least in the resolutions which will be passed by the conference—if a definite agreement can be settled upon which will safeguard or favor the American interests in the Pacific, much will be done to make the American public put its trust in the new Governments. And Mr. Harding's policies will be singularly strengthened.

Matin—M. R. Raymond Poincare, commenting on an article in the Daily Telegraph, said: "It is certainly to be desired that the question (of a Franco-Anglo-American alliance) should be again discussed at the conference in Washington, and it is very evident that if, under the present circumstances, we are asked to disarm, we will be forced to answer, 'What guarantees have you to offer?' And, indeed, France will make haste to lighten her military burdens if reassuring realities come from Geneva or from Washington."

Soir—A reporter of the Giornalo del Popolo had an interview with an officer of the Japanese navy who was on a mission in Europe and especially in London and Paris. To a journalist who asked if a war was possible between Japan and the United States this officer answered:

"Not only is war possible, but it is inevitable. I can venture to say that hostilities from one side or the other will begin as soon as formidable enough naval armaments have been built up. This will take some years. War will not break out before 1925. * * * * The deciding factor will rest in the fighting power of the two fleets, and in this respect the two countries will make gigantic efforts. Naturally, the Americans have begun to set the pace. We have responded immediately to the limit of our resources. We have not hesitated to sacrifice 16 per cent of our budget to naval construction."

Evidently we must not put too much faith in these words. It is certain that responsible persons would take acount of the difficulties that would be occasioned by such a war. But it is none the less evident that such a state of mind, which is probably widespread in military circles, bodes ill for the conference in Washington.

Says Republics Should Collaborate.

Avenir.—The action of France in a discussion of this nature (concerning the Pacific question) can only be conciliatory and we will do nothing to cause confusion between Washington and Tokio. Moreover, it would not be amiss for our participation in the conference to be the supporting of the common interests for which in all respects we stand jointly with the United States. * * * * It is time that the two Republics changed heir sympathy into collaboration.

Figaro.—The acclamations with which Gen. Pershing was welcomed on his arrival in France showed once again how profound and sincere is our friendship for the United States. The occasion for looking back should be seized with eagerness because it allows us to measure the ground lost since the armistice. Is all this ground lost forever? With the aid of the Americans can we not regain some of it in the conference in Washington.

Canadian Comment.

From the press of Canada the expressions of the following leading newspapers are quoted as typical:

Manitoba Free Press—Here is the occasion beyond all others where Canada should play its role with consequences of good to the world not easily calculable. We know the views of America, because, in the main, we share them. Canada might easily, under such condition, play an essential part in bringing about an understanding with respect to the Pacific which would in turn facilitate disarmament.

Montreal Gazette.—Peace now reigns in the waters of the broad Atlantic and will continue as long as Great Britain and the United States stand together. The statesmanship of the nations can find a way to permanently realize the dream of peace everywhere through disarmament. It is a much cherished desire that when the delegates to Washington get settled to business there will evolve ways and means to save the world from future misery and destruction. If the present opportunity is availed of at the Washington conference, humanity will be rescued from a vampire which for generations has sucked the life blood of the world, in the shape of an expenditure of hundreds of millions annually in armaments, not to speak of the loss in human lives.

British Opinion Hopeful.

The tone of the British press is much like that of other nations, the hope being generally expressed that a forward step will result from the conference. Following are parts of some leading editorials:

Westminster Gazette—The problem of disarmament is the fundamental problem before the nations

A strike in the Wilton Rug Mills which continued through several months was ended a short time ago. On account of the length of time that these Wilton looms were idle there is at the present time

There Is One in Your Neighborhood

These 8 Points of Superiority Make It the Leader:

COPPER BOILER— Solid copper is the most practical and substantial material for this purpose. Boiler also has capacity of eight full-sized sheets or the equivalent. Large opening (10x15½) makes it convenient to handle large pieces. Being perfectly plain on the inside, there is nothing to wear or tear the most delicate article.

ENCLOSED CABINET— Heavy Armco steel sheets riveted to the frame makes a complete enclosure for all moving parts, making the Airplane Washer safe, especially where children are near.

GAS HEATER— Permits you to hold the temperature of the suds at 180, a pasteurizing temperature that sterilizes the clothes, kills every germ of disease and sourness and delivers a sweet wash. No machine really cleans after the wash water gets cold. Gas burner can be used for boiling white goods as desired. Throw away your old wash boiler.

OSCILLATING TYPE— With this principle of washing every ounce of water is in continued action. The spray, the surge, and the undertow created by the rounded ends, the flat bottom and the brisk rocking motion, give the water an action that is absolutely the most efficient in any power machine.

WRINGER— Extra large wringer, powerful enough to take care of the large, heavy pieces. This feature is one greatly appreciated by every home. Also the wringer lifts off, making the machine a flat top so it can be used for ironing purposes or as table between wash days.

SIZE AND FINISH— 18 inches by 37 inches makes it a convenient size to fit in a corner or to move through a narrow doorway. The egg-shell finish trimmed with gold stripes makes it a very beautiful piece of equipment.

MECHANICAL PARTS— There are only eleven moving parts to the entire machine, making it the most simple in construction; the frame being made of heavy angle iron, all welded together and the enclosure panel riveted in, makes the complete machine one solid steel structure which will last a lifetime.

PRE-WAR PRICES— With all the features embodied in this machine the manufacturer has the price reduced now to a pre-war price, making it the best value on the market. In this machine you get more than a dollar's worth for a dollar invested.

CENTRAL Y. M. C. A. TO BE REBUILT, BUT NOT SOON

Church Federation Council Decides Time Not Opportunte for Raising the Money.

The council of the Church Federation met Friday night to consider the question of rebuilding the Central Y. M. C. A. building, at Grand and Franklin avenues, which burned about a year ago. It was decided to biuld, not only a new central building, but also several branches in various parts of the city.

It was agreed, however, that the present time is not opportune either for raising money or for engaging on a building program, so the plan will remain passive for an indefinite time. Engineers reported that no attempt to repair the burned structure would be practicable.

EDITORIAL COMMENT SHOWS WORLD HOPE IN DISARMAMENT CONGRESS

today. They have to choose whether they will continue to place a fond reliance on the old ineffective safeguards and to drift toward new conflicts, or whether they will make a determined effort to find other methods of settling their differences and of safeguarding their national life.

The United States is in a position to give the world an invaluable lead in this matter and reports from Geneva indicate that to some extent the league is compelled to await that lead. We hope that all the nations who will participate in the conference will be determined to make the utmost use of this opportunity.

London Times—It is necessary for the groping, dazed and stricken world of men that the conference should not fail. It would be a calamity, whose extent could not now be measured, if this new light of hope were suddenly extinguished in hearts that have grown weary of strife.

It would be an exciting and bewildering event if all the nations were suddenly to agree to disarm and to forego forever the works of war. But it would be genuinely encouraging and certainly satisfactory in our present mood if the great powers were to decide on a limitation of armaments. Such a decision, no greater and no less we expect from the Washington conference. This is no matter that can be left to the discretion and convenience of busy diplomats. It is one in which public opinion must make itself felt, one on which public opinion must concentrate.

Western Morning News (English—At this juncture it is important that the British public should take keen and sympathetic interest in the Washington conference on armaments and promote its success in every possible way. The project does not mean merely the possibility of a reduction of armaments. On the success or failure of the conference depends the question whether in the immediate future we shall have to increase our navy.

Another consideration which should encourage this country to assist in making th Washington conference a success and relieve the world of the incubus of large armies and navies is the effect which such freedom would give to all nations. The nightmare of armaments may well terrify every man and woman. If that danger is removed and the limitation of armaments is agreed upon, the relations f all countries would change for the better and the fortunes of the world would be transformed.

Political Reconstruction Necessary.

London Morning Post—The only way to reconstruct the world economically is, first of all, to reconstruct the world politically. Economic chaos is the child of political instability. If men's minds are haunted by the fear of war, and by the forebodings of change, they cannot settle to that daily work which brings prosperity to nations. Now, a complete agreement between the three great Powers of the Pacific would radiate its beneficent influence throughout all the seas and shores of the world. It is the uncertainty brooding over the New World which, to a great extent, prevents the old from putting its house in order.

The London Daily News—No purpose is to be served by underestimating the difficulties that must be faced when the details of a practical scheme of limiting armaments are subjected to the test of discussion. There are no difficulties, however, which a generous candor and first class statesmanship may not overcome. Let it be said at once that if no definite advance toward producing a peaceful world comes from this conference ,it would have been better that it should never have taken place, for the blow struck at the principles by which the League of Nations exists will seem not only like a treacherous blow; it may be a vital one.

Manchester (Eng.) Guardian—The Pacific question concerns Canada, Australia and New Zealand as much as it does Japan or the United States, and India, be it remembered, figures in the Anglo-Japanese treaty. On whatever principle the British delegation and its advisers are chosen, it should secure that representatives of both of the dominions and India are at the heart of things in Washington.

London Outlook—We believe that in apathy to the Washington meeting lies a grave danger; we venture to state that upon the success or failure of these deliberations dep[illegible] is the peace of the world and the continued solvency of our own country, more than upon any of the distressing but temporary national ailments under which we now suffer.

London Daily Express—The crux of the disarmament problem is the attitude of Japan. There is a feeling, a strong feeling, in the United States that Japanese foreign policy is dictated by a military caste and that the continuous and rapid growth of Japanese naval power is not warranted by purely defensive consideration. There is only one way to remove that impression; it is by Japan associating herself, frankly and unreservedly, with the United States and ourselves in a concrete scheme for cutting down naval expenditure.

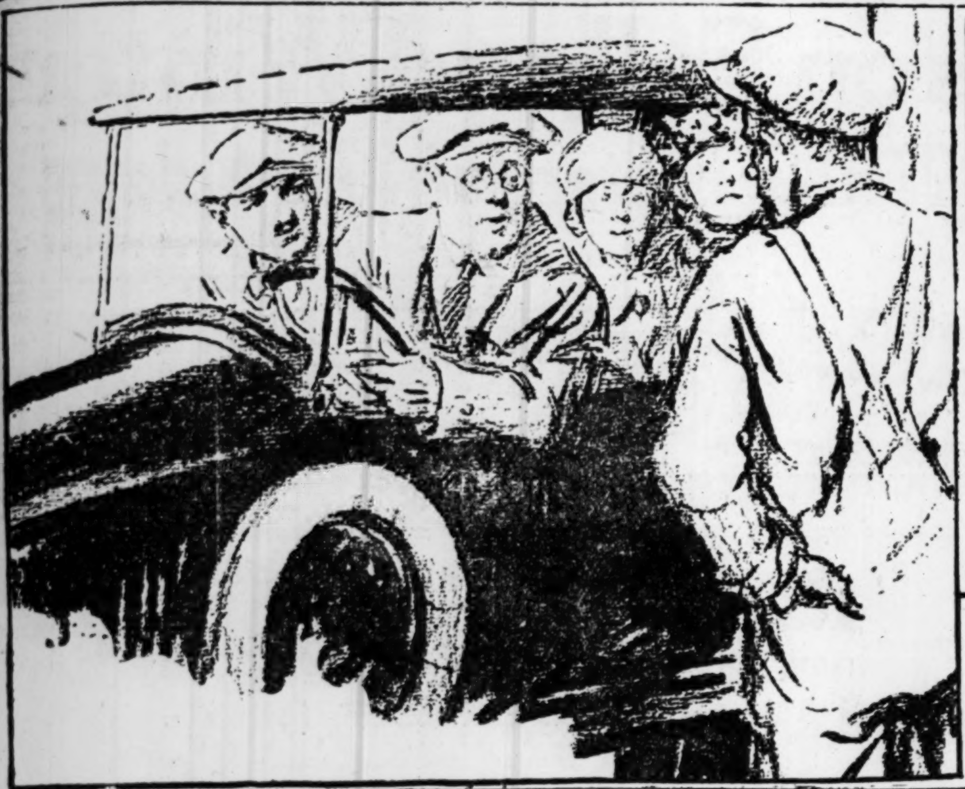
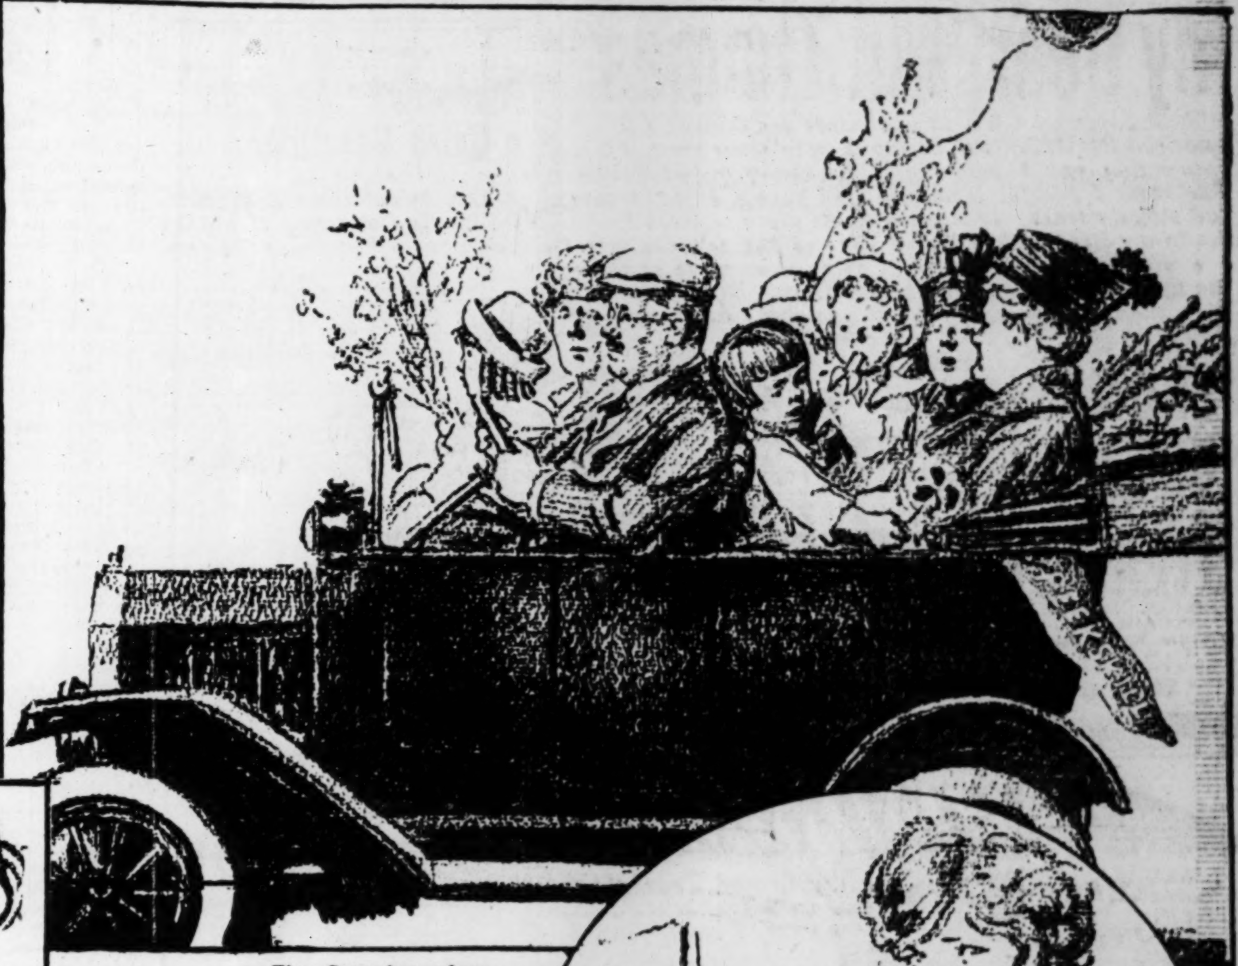
PART THREE. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 9, 1921. PAGES 1—14B.

THE SATURDAY MOTORISTS

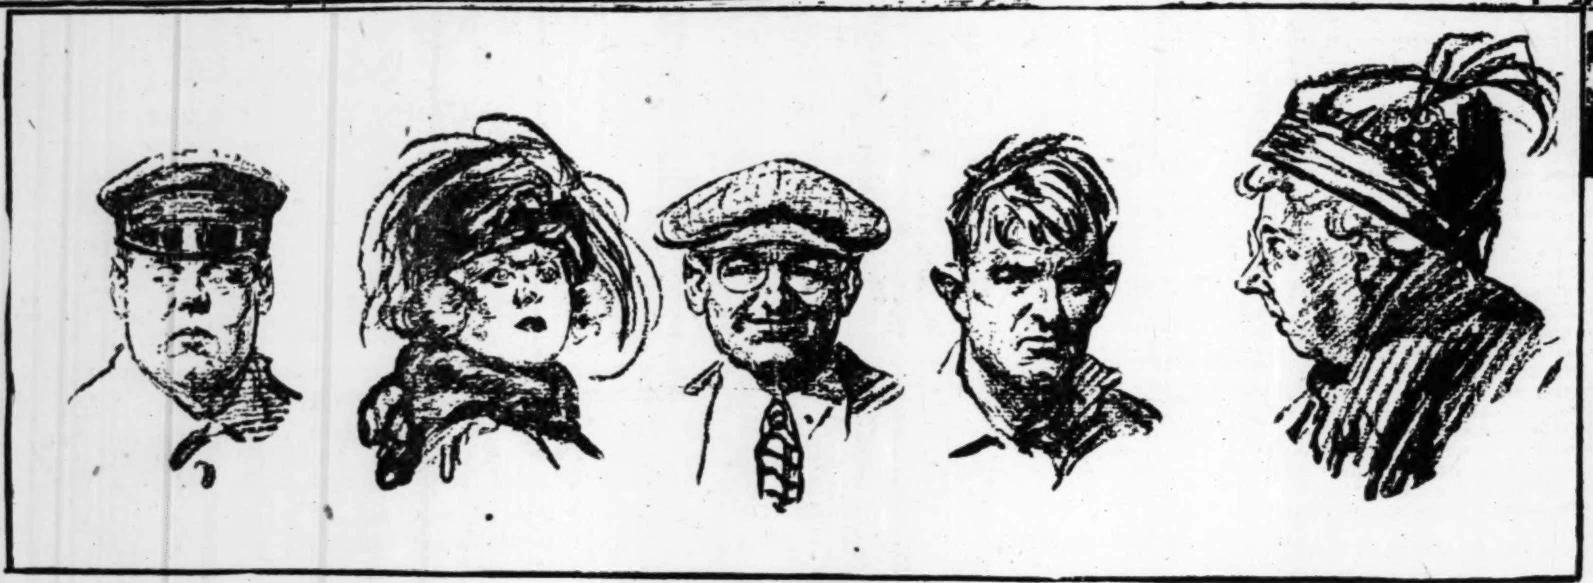
By W. E. HILL.



"You take the first turn to the left, then the next to the left, on past a cemetery, then turn to the left again," etc. The party in the car are trying to memorize it without success. Half a block away they will have got it all wrong.

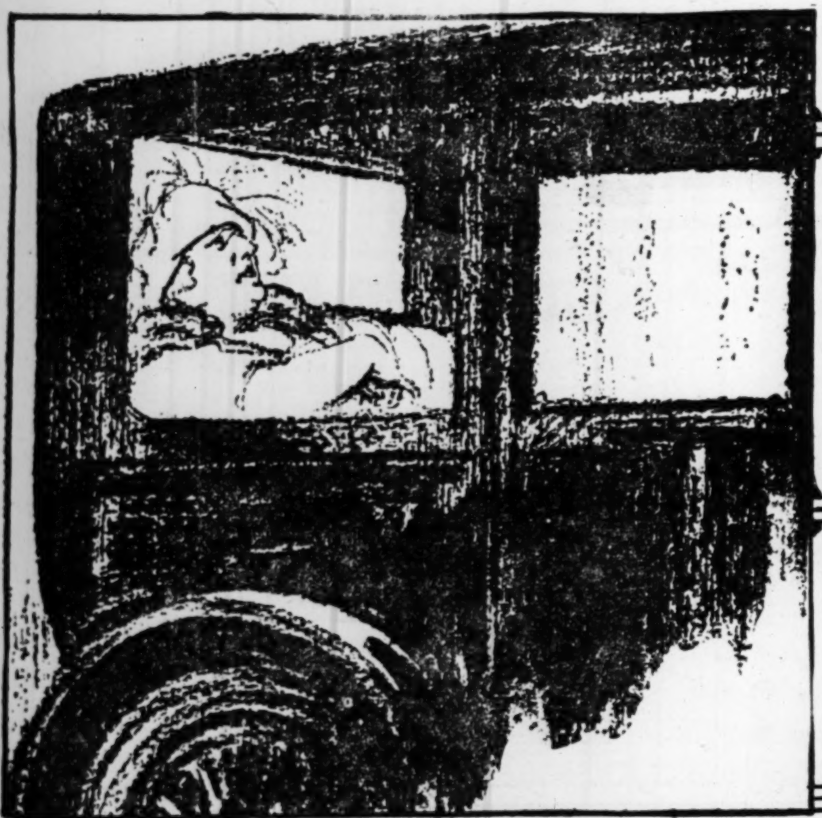


The Saturday afternoon Ford party out foraging for seed pods, cat-tails, maple leaves, mullen stalks and any odds and ends of beauty that will help brighten up the apartment during the long winter months. Mullen stalks, milkweed pods, and dried autumn leaves are considered awfully smart just now when stuck around in pottery vases.

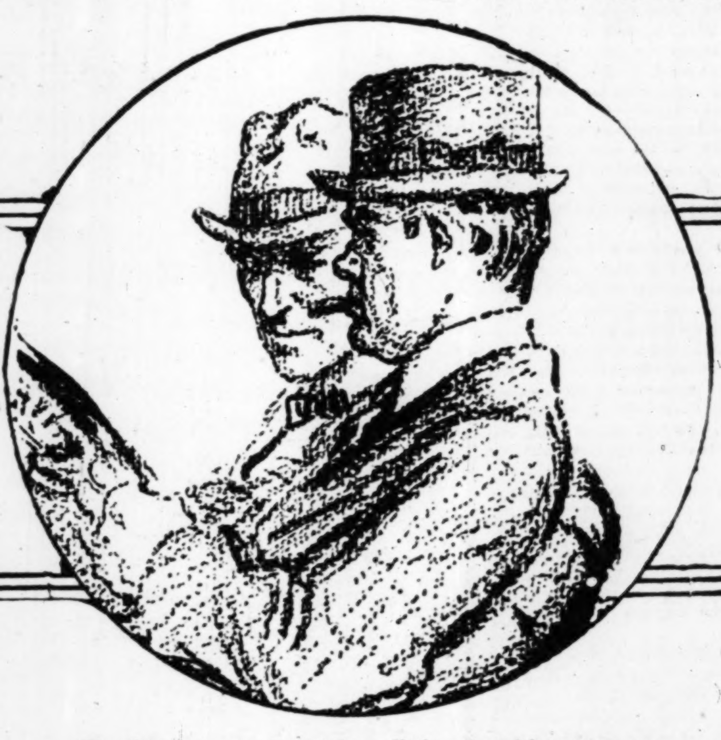


A quintet of Saturday motor faces. Reading from left to right (and back if you wish) we have the Rolls Royce chauffeur, looking with scathing glance at a passing flivver. Next, a beautiful lady who has turned around to glare at some one the car nearly ran over. Then comes Fred, the comic element, who says to the garage man: "Free air? I guess that's about all that's free here! Har! har!" Fourth in the row is the garage helper, who doesn't like the look of your brakes. "Gonna have trouble with them brakes some day!" (Wants to put on new ones.) Last is Aunt Hattie, who abhors anything that smacks of joy riding. Says she, "You can't tell me you were only going fifteen miles an hour. I know you were going twenty!"

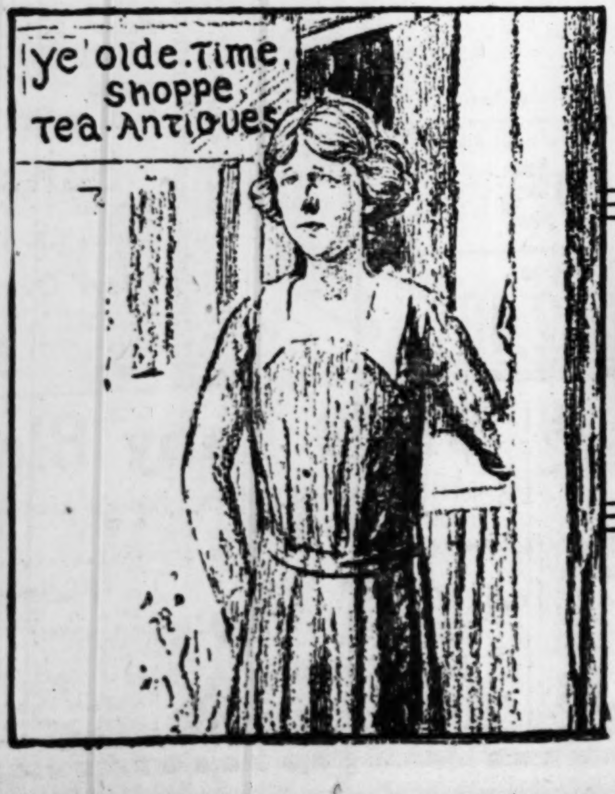
Jessie is waiting at the station to meet a week-end guest. Jessie calls her little runabout "Fordie." You should hear Jessie say "Git 'ap, lil' Fordie!" when she starts the self-starter. It's awfully cute.



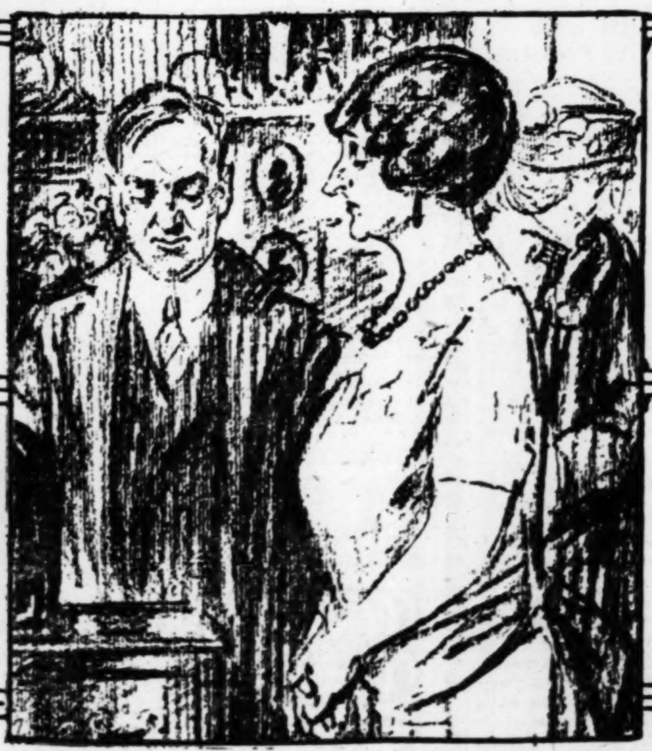
The lady who was always going to invite some one who hadn't a car to ride with her. That was long ago before she had the expensive car. Now she talks a great deal about not overcrowding on account of the springs.



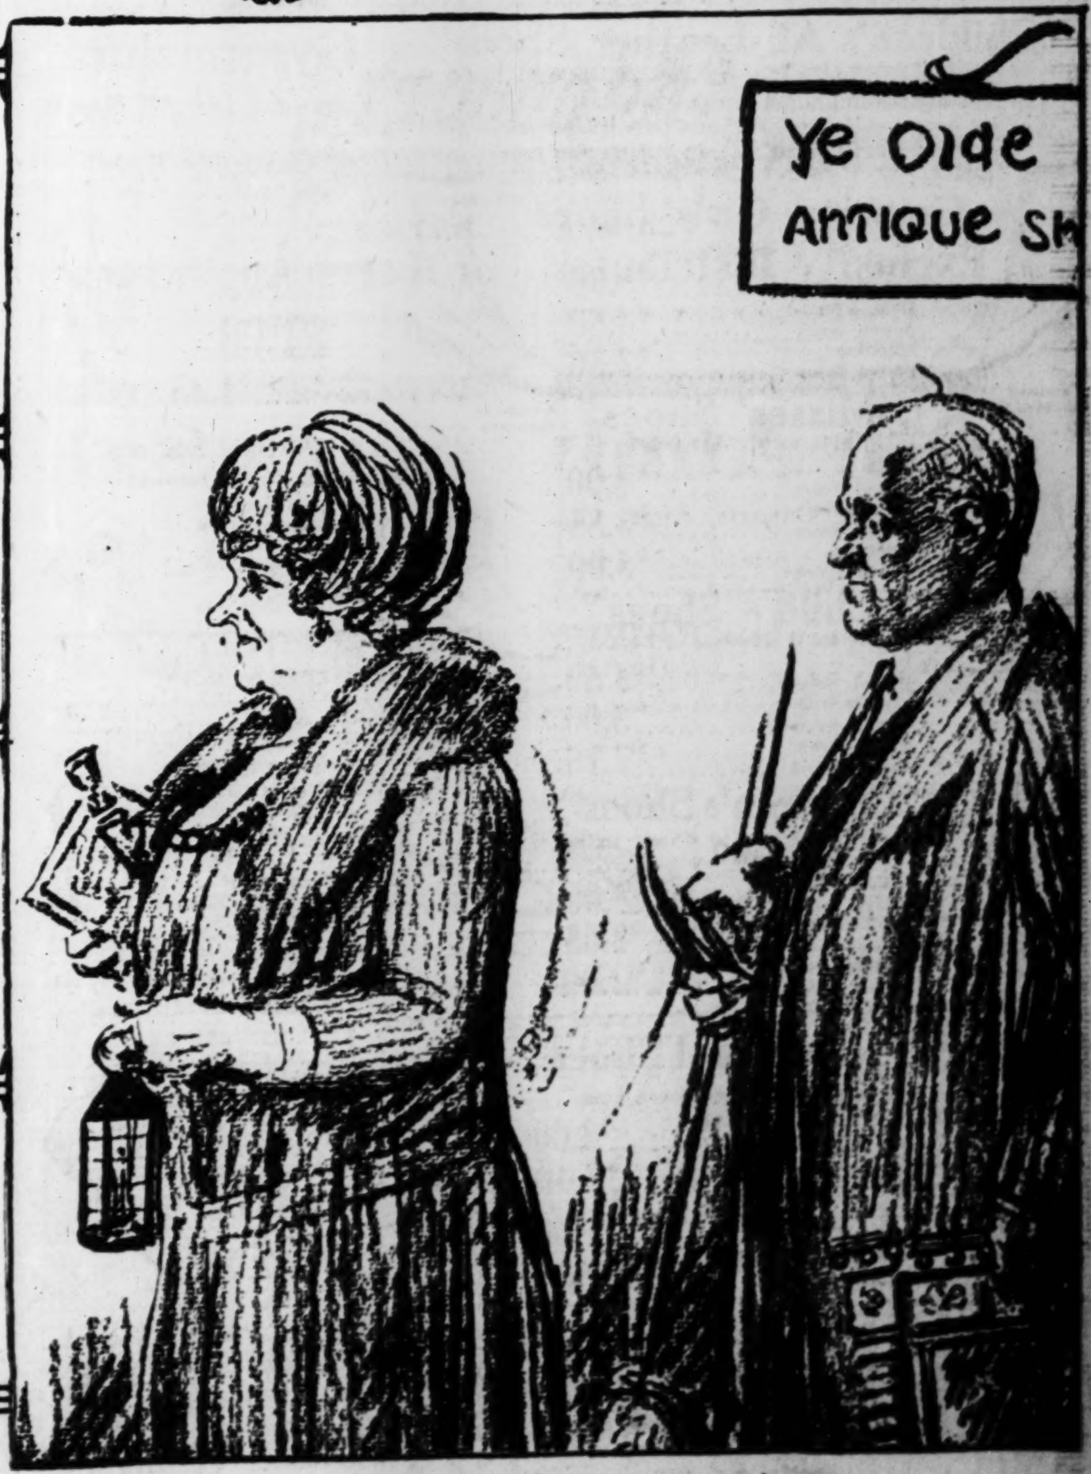
The demonstrator is out for a little spin with a prospective buyer. "Now, this car is the only car that will stand up on all kinds of roads. I'm not saying this because I want to sell you a car, understand; it's just that I don't want to see you get stuck with the wrong one," etc., etc.



Miss Moss, who operates most successfully "Ye Olde Time Shoppe" in the near suburbs Trade is not very brisk this afternoon however Miss Moss is anxious to see what kind of car the last visitors left in They priced everything and didn't even order tea Miss Moss is sure it must be a very cheap car



Mrs. Mae Wott, hostess of "The Purple Sloth" tea room specializing in tea and antiques for the city motorist, is yery grand. "Very rahr," she will murmur when you stop to look at anything. Mrs. Wott likes to give you the impression that she doesn't have to keep a tea room or sell antiques. She is just doing it for a lark, that's all. But oh, the prices she asks—and gets!



Every one told Mr. Morpheus that it wasn't the initial cost of the car; it was what came after. And now he understands, this being the fifth tea house with antique accessories that Mrs. Morpheus has visited during an afternoon run into the country.

Undertakers on Way to Convention.

About 230 delegates on their way to the convention of the National Association of Funeral Directrs, to be held in San Antonio will arrive here on a special train, via the Wabash, at 7:30 a. m. today. The delegation will be entertained during the day by the Mound City Undertakers and Liverymen's Association and will depart at 6:30 p. m.

1000 in W. U. Extension Classes.

The first of this year's extension division classes, evening and Saturday morning and afternoon, were held last week at Washington University. Count of the enrollment will be completed early this week, but it is known to exceed 1000, or upwards of 200 more than on the corresponding date last year.

Medicated "Mud" Is a Quick Beautifier

A Few Applications of Wonderful Plastic Compound Makes the Complexion Clear and Velvety.

One of the quickest and best beautifiers is the medicated "mud," known as De Breon plastique. It is not a mud, of course, but a fragrant plastic compound, which, when applied to face or hands, dries quickly into a beautifying mask, dissolving blemishes, removing the fine "lines of care" and preventing wrinkles. When the mask is removed, the skin is left firm, clear, delicately tinted, and as velvety as rose petals.

The De Breon plastique is easy and delightful to use, and the results are guaranteed to equal those obtained from high-priced plastic treatments obtained at beauty shops. In fact, the maker of the plastique is glad to place it on trial with anybody, the understanding being that if it is not entirely satisfactory it costs nothing. Simply send your name and address to Geo. H. Breon & Company, Dept. A, 1100 Coca-Cola Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., without money, and a large jar of De Breon plastique will be mailed to you. On delivery, deposit only $1 and postage with the postman. Try the plastique a week, and if not absolutely delighted, notify the Breon Company and your deposit will be refunded at once. This trial offer can be accepted without hesitation, as it is fully guaranteed.

NEW GAME WARDEN OUTLINES HIS PROGRAM

Frank Middleton Says Laws Will Be Strictly Enforced by His Department.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 8.—State Game and Fish Commissioner Frank Middleton of Unionville today outlined at the request of the Post-Dispatch his immediate program in administration of the department of which he recently took charge as an appointee of Gov. Hyde to succeed Tim Birmingham of St. James, Democrat, whose term had expired.

Middleton said he first would concern himself with the following:

Rigid enforcement of the Missouri law forbidding the hunting of aquatic game birds in motor boats or other power craft.

Termination of the practice now prevalent in the interior of the State of "dynamiting" smaller streams and lakes to obtain fish.

Would Permit Dove Shooting.

Obtaining from the Legislature an annual open season of, say a month, for the shooting of doves, which may not now be legally killed in the State.

Installing an effective system of salvaging fish trapped in temporary pools by receding overflow water from larger streams.

Requiring so-called "honorary" Deputy Game and Fish Commissioners to enforce the statutes for the protection of fish and game of the State.

Middleton said he expects to demand of his deputies close enforcement of all of the laws with which they are concerned.

"Deputies are supposed to be sportsmen as well as public officials," he said. "They should try to enforce the laws with impartiality and a sense of broadmindedness as to details. The laws are made by those who desire to perpetuate the resources of game and fish and they should be administered accordingly. There is no desire to split hairs over technicalities, but real benefits are desired. Practical results through the prosecution of law violators are more desired than the filing of petty cases merely to be doing something, but the laws must be enforced earnestly. Careful study of the laws' provisions is absolutely necessary to obtain the benefits of game and fish conservation."

Use of Boats Must Stop.

With regard to the hunting of waterfowl in motor boats and other power craft, Middleton said:

"I have determined that this practice must be broken up, and I am instructing my deputies to catch and prosecute the perpetrators. It is all very fine for the fellow fortunate enough to have a power boat to go along and slaughter ducks and geese by the score and more. But what of the real sportsman over there on the bank, trying his dead level best in a square manner to get a shot legitimately, while some fellow in a motor boat is blazing away. It is not right, it is unlawful, and unless it is stopped waterfowl will be exterminated."

Middleton said that his department has been informed that of all the offenses being practiced against the game and fish laws, dynamiting of the smaller streams and lakes and illegal seining are being practiced to greatest extent and that he has determined to enforce the prohibitions against them with especial vigor. Work in this line already has started, one of his deputies last week having captured and destroyed a quantity of seines of mesh smaller than two inches, the legal minimum in smaller streams, and evidence is being gathered which is expected to result in the prosecution of several groups which have systematically used explosives to obtain fish in quantities.

Letters are being written to Prosecuting Attorneys and to Sheriffs, Constables and their deputies, reminding them that they are charged with enforcement of these conservation statutes, and calling especial attention to the laws for the protection of fish.

Departure From Precedent.

Determination of the new Commissioner to require all "honorary" deputies to enforce the game and fish laws is a departure from precedent in Missouri.

The law authorizing the appointment of deputies creates no classifications such as "regular deputies" and "honorary deputies," which for many years have been the rule. It, however, does not limit the number of deputies which may be named. So a custom has grown up of appointing one or two deputies to a congressional district, who receive the statutory compensation of $4 a day and expenses while at work for the department, and of designating an almost unlimited number of others as "honorary deputies," who have done little to enforce the game and fish statutes. Deputy Commissioners have authority to carry a pistol and wear a badge.

Keepers of hunting and fishing preserves have been accorded that privilege, and will receive the same treatment by Middleton.

In the past, however, few restrictions have been placed on special commissions, and none on badges, the recipients of commissions being required to furnish their own, getting them where they willed and of various designs. As a result game and fish badges and with them revolvers have been found on men detected in committing crimes.

Middleton has designed a badge, to be worn by all deputies, and to be manufactured and issued only upon presentation of properly signed orders from his office. The badge is a six-pointed silver star with a raised center bearing the seal of the State in gilt. The words "Game and Fish" will appear just above the seal, and below will be "Deputy Commissioner." Each badge will have a number, registered in Middleton's office, and the St. Louis and Kansas City police will be given a list of the names, residence addresses and badge numbers as deputies are appointed.

In this manner Middleton hopes to prevent his badges from falling into improper hands.

Up to today Middleton had appointed 14 "regular" and 117 "honorary" deputies. Of the latter, 77 are in St. Louis. The list follows:

"Regulars"—Henry (Count) Hoffman, St. Louis; A. L. Phillips, Paris; Asa D. Lawrence, Jamesport; F. H. DeCou, Kansas City; Peter H. Hayes, Sedalia; F. L. Shepard, Hartsburg; T. P. Pigg, Ironton; John Glasscock, Caruthersville; Keith McCanse, Mount Vernon; Floyd C. Calloway, Monett; J. S. Freeland, Ho; William Bobb, Joplin; Louis Henry, Jefferson City; Arthur Flanagan, Linn.

"Honoraries," St. Louis—William B. Davis, Century Building; Dr. B

My Dear "Mr. Thomas"

"Last Saturday I was in your store and bought a Roast. I noticed the U. S. Govt. Stamp is on all your meat. I also notice that you handle high-class native corn-fed beef. The roast I bought from you was young, juicy, tender and strictly fresh. It was the finest piece of meat I ever ate in my life. When I read your ad and saw the price, I was skeptic—but when I came to your store and saw the fine quality, I was really astonished. No wonder you have such a busy market." PARIS COMEDY AND A COHAN PLAY ON VIEW

"Thank You" and "Like a King" Are Other Items of New York Openings.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Plays opening in New York theaters in the past week, besides "Main Street" and "The Love Letter" (reviewed in the amusement section of today's Post-Dispatch), were "The Fan," "The O'Brien Girl," "Thank You" and "Like a King."

It is possible to believe that in "L'Eventail," as Paris knew it, direct from the laboratory of Robert de Fiers and G. A. de Cailleut, there were sting and sparkle as of naughty champagne.

As the comedy was introduced at the Punch and Judy Theater, under the title of "The Fan," in an English adaptation by Pitts Duffield, the kick was considerably less than 2.75 per cent and there were manifestations only of a near-sparkle. The sleuth hounds of prohibitive law will have no occasion to take up the trail to West Forty-ninth street.

A French country seat, a shallowly-loving wife, a husband given to affectionate roving, a sentimental young girl who fears to lose the callow youth who has caught her untutored heart, and as an occasional caller the scalp-hunting, beautiful wife of a neighboring rich man. About this group lingers a certain Francois, driven to chronic grouchiness by a jilting of some years before.

To Giselle, who has jilted Francois, wife and maid turn for aid and comfort, and she, with only a native coquetry as her weapon, seeks to straighten everybody's way to happiness. Result, a sea of trouble to be calmed in the third act.

A touch-and-go piece leaning toward farcical lines is thus indicated. But the rendition was neither touchy nor go-ey. There was never an opportunity to forget that actors were reciting lines they had learned with care. To return to the champagne figure, the wine had the lack-flavor of drink that had stood too long in the glass.

Miss Hilda Spong, playing the role of Giselle, was an attractive figure. The audience cheered her heartily and applauded the play politely. Frank Sylvester played with much dignity the part of a keen and paternally helpful old professor from the Institute. Other principal members were Rosalie Mathieu, Edward H. Wever, Eva Leonard-Boyne, Harold Heaton, Beatrice Millar, Margaret Dumont, Horace James and Ian MacLaren.

"The O'Brien Girl."

There are reasons why "The O'Brien Girl," George M. Cohan's musical comedy at the Liberty Theater, should live in luxury on Broadway for a spell. One of these is not its score, by Lou Hirsch, although it contains one pretty song. Nor would the book and lyrics by Otto Harbach and Frank Mendel insure it in long life and opulence.

Wherever the electrifying hand of Mr. Cohan has pointed a finger, this musical play fairly tingles with dash and spirit. Its dance numbers are directed with a rapid-fire vigor, and, happily, its dancers are capable of responding to the producer's touch.

"Learn to Smile" is one lilting melody of "The O'Brien Girl," this enchanting tune being used as a sort of motif throughout the two acts. It is sung extremely well by Elizabeth Hines, one of the two most captivating young dancers of our musical comedy stage. Her only equal is Marilynn Miller.

"Thank You."

The small-town Christian spirit, which causes some of the righteous to look up to the underpaid village preacher one day a week and scowl down upon him the other six, came in for an amusing lambasting at the Longacre Theater in Tom Gushing's "Thank You," in which he had the skilled assistance of Winchell Smith.

Harry Davenport touches a sympathetic chord as the downtrodden shepherd who has systematically been getting the worst of it from his flock until the principles of "big business" are brought to his defense. Edith King, as the niece from Paris, has much to commend her, save an intermittent dialect. Frank Monroe blusters after the fashion of stage millionaires.

"Like a King."

"Like a King," at the Forty-ninth Street Theater, shows Nathaniel Arbenus Alden returned from service overseas all but penniless. He is run down by an automobile in Central Park and discovers in the chauffeur a former comrade. Nathaniel has announced to his people in Lower Falls, Mass., that he is returning wealthy, and he is ashamed to go back. The chauffeur, temporarily "on his own" through the absence of his bibulous millionaire employer in Boston on a carouse, offers to drive Nat home "like a King" in the luxurious car.

The ruse succeeds only too well. The simple folk in Lower Falls accept the prodigal and the auto at face value, and likewise his Wallingford schemes for a greater city, till the real owner of the car turns up and is persuaded, without a shred of evidence, that he sold it to Nat while drunk. Credit is re-established, our hero saved from jail and wealth promptly follows.

This very slender comedy gave James Gleason an opportunity not wholly embraced as Nathaniel, and introduced Ann Harding, with golden hair banded like a Sibyl about her head. Hale Norcross as the chauffeur and Dodson Mitchell as his employer, made the most of their material.

Exquisite New Trimmings

—Which Adorn Filmy Frocks for Brides and Debutantes

FALL brides and demure little debutantes are having a wonderful time choosing the materials for dance frocks, dinner gowns and bridesmaids' costumes. Wide flouncings of chantilly and Spanish laces are not only of cream and black, but often of rich color. Embroidered chenille flouncing offers inspiration to the girl who wants a bouffant frock, with downy dots of gay hue.

With the smart silver and lace flouncings, sequin and metal bands, and beaded and rhinestone trimmings are used with an almost regal effect. Cloth of gold and silver is quite frequently used as a lining for the trailing train, and so is radium cloth. As for the rainbow wedding, or the vivid or delicately tinseled evening dress, Georgettes, tulles, chiffons and silk nets are in order.

New Spanish Lace Scarfs, deeply fringed, are decidedly popular Evening Wraps.

For fine silken or muslin undergarments, the narrow handmade Chinese cluny laces and insertions lend a lovely finish.

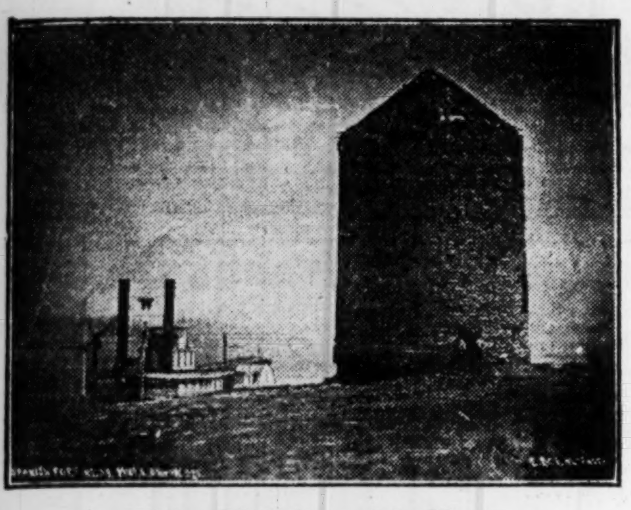
Olive and Locust From Ninth to Tenth

Now Every Woman Turns Her Attention to the Beautiful New Autumn Apparel



This Old Spanish Fort

—was originally Antoine Roi's Mill at the foot of Ashley St., on the bank of the Mississippi River. Because it was built in the shape of a round tower, of stone, similar to the old Spanish forts, it was thought that it was one. But there is no record for its use as a fortification. It was afterwards known as Roy's Tower and was the only wind mill, as Gregoire Sarpy and Auguste Chouteau owned water mills.

CLUB RAISING FUND FOR EMPLOYE'S WIDOW

Groom in Stables Died on Operating Table After Polo Pony Fell on Him.

Members of the St. Louis Country Club are contributing to a fund for the widow of Roy Dapron, a groom at the club stables, who died under anesthesia Aug. 25, while undergoing an operation for the removal of a bone splinter from his foot, caused by an accident in which a polo pony fell on him.

Dapron, who was 22 years old, and had worked at the club stables since a boy, was known to most of the members for his love of horses, which he manifested in the care and gentleness which he exercised toward them. A large number of polo ponies are kept there, and, in addition, some of the members keep their saddle-mounts there. These were the objects of his contsant attention.

A pony fell on him July 8 and crushed his foot. Later it was decided that a bone splinter must be removed. The operation was not a serious one. As he went under the ether, however, his heart action stopped.

But the most tragic feature was that he would soon have been a father. The circumtsances, therefore, were particularly calculated to cause sympathy for the young widow. J. Lionberger Davis, who is taking up the collection, said it was at first intended to collect about $200 to defray Mrs. Dapron's immediate expenses, but that there had been a surprisingly spontaneous response, and that he expected now that the amount would be considerably above that.

In a notice of the fund collection sent to members this sentence occurs: "In these days it is well to show some tangible recognition of the memory of one who loved his work and was loyal to his employer's interest." It is then related that Dapron urged that the operation be hastened so that he could get back to work, as he had "already cost the club too much money."

Medical Association Meeting.

The Mississippi Valley Medical Association, which will hold a convention here with headquarters at the Statler hotel for three days, beginning Thursday, will include in its program speeches by specialists upon subjects pertaining to their particular specialties and clinics in the St. Louis hospitals and universities.

SAYS GOLF ON THE MUNICIPAL LINKS IS DANGEROUS

TELLS HOW OBSERVING RULES HELPS GAME

Aeronaut Testifies He Has Permit to Use Aviation Field, but Cannot Charge Passengers for Trips.

Golf, as played on the municipal links at Forest Park, is "dangerous, disgusting and disgraceful," A. F. Bell of 5637 McPherson avenue, connected with the Lesser-Goldman Cotton Co., said in giving his deposition yesterday in the office of Taylor R. Young, an attorney in the Equitable Building, in the suit of Young and others to enjoin the city from permitting the use of Forest Park for purposes other than for which it was acquired.

Bell testified as a member of the Amateur Athletic Association (Triple A), which occupies 125 acres in the park. Young is trying to show that, while nonmembers are supposed to have unrestricted use of the Triple A links, members resent their presence and make it unpleasant for them. Bell testified that it was not that way at all. Nonmembers, he said, were welcome at all times and, although there was a rule against women playing between 2 and 6 p. m. and on Sundays and holidays, women were not molested if they played at the interdicted times, and he had never heard any remarks about them or directed at them.

No Objection to Nonmembers.

He declared that he did not resent nonmembers playing and had often played with them. The only restriction was that they were expected to play according to the rules and etiquette of golf. "It's a gentleman's game," he explained. "I have played it at clubs all over the world. I think I know the etiquette of golf."

He was asked if he had ever played on the municipal course. "I have played there sometimes," he said, "but I left the muny course because twice I came near being killed. I never saw anything so disgusting and so disgraceful. The players acted like a herd of sheep."

The difference, he explained, was that the rules and etiquette of golf were followed on the Triple A course and were not on the municipal course. He was asked if there were not rules for the municipal course. "I don't know," he said. "If there are any they should be changed."

Tells of Crowds at Triple A.

The use of the Triple A course by nonmembers was so extensive, he said, that there had been times when he had to play all afternoon without a caddy. Big league baseball players and theatrical persons came out and played there and nobody ever objected. He had even seen a visiting ball player using the shower and twice he had given up his locker, once for the use of a ball player and once for the use of a theatrical person.

The Triple A course was quite overrun when, in wet weather, the municipal course was closed. "You can always tell when the muny course was closed," he said. "Then there are more muny players than Triple A players on our course. And nothing is ever said to them except to ask them, when they tear up the turf, to replace it."

Bell Sued by Physician.

As Bell was leaving the office he was served with notice of a suit for $50,000, brought against him by Dr. D. T. Brand of 3755 Lindell boulevard, who alleges that Bell slandered him in the presence of friends at the Triple A clubhouse. Dr. Brand, although a member of Triple A, has been taking an interest in the case on Young's side, and was present yesterday at the taking of depositions, and suggested questions to be asked Bell.

Capt. John Berry, aeronaut, testified that he had a permit to use the aviation field in the park on condition that he carry no passengers for money. He had never carried passengers for money, but others had been operating in the park all summer.

Testimony of Aviator.

Charles R. Wassell of 5426 Lloyd avenue testified that he had been operating a plane from the Forest Park field since the middle of last November. He was not allowed to charge for taking people up, but sometimes they insisted and he took them up and they gave him a little something, usually about $10 for 10 minutes' flying. Sometimes it was more and sometimes it was less and some took advantage of the situation and gave him nothing. He could not remember what was the most he ever received in one day. Several times it was more than $100. The smallest contribution he had received was 15 cents. He added that it was out of the question to make money on that field, under the conditions. His plane cost him $3000.

Young will distribute today in public places a dodger quoting from the deposition of Robert Ross, manager of the Triple A, who testified that any person could play golf, tennis or handball on the Triple A grounds at any time or hour of the day, and asking the names and addresses of persons who have been ordered off of the grounds and the names and addresses of those who have paid $10 for flights from the Forest Park aviation field.

GRAIN GROWERS' FIRM MAY NOT SELL STOCK IN STATE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 8.—Gus O. Nations, acting supervisor of the State blue sky department, announced today that he had formally notified the Farmers' Finance Corporation that it would not be authorized to sell any of its $100,000,000 issue of preferred stock in Missouri.

This concern is a subsidiary of the United Grain Growers, Incorporated, an organization designed to enable grain growers to market their crops collectively.

Nations said a permit to sell stock had been denied partly because all of the voting power of the corporation is vested in 21 directors, who hold the 21 shares of common stock not as individuals, but as trustees for the United Grain Growers, the stock going with the offices and that none of the purchasers of the $100,000,000 of stock would have a voice in the concern.

LUMBERMEN NEVER CERTAIN THEY WERE WITHIN THE LAW

Minutes of Exchange Introduced at Hearing Show Members Were in Doubt About Legality of Acts.

FRIENDLY SUIT ONCE DISCUSSED

Attorneys at Times Called In to Address Exchange on Its Practices — State Case About Complete.

The minutes of the St. Louis Lumber Trade Exchange and of the Board of Directors and Arbitration Board of that organization, portions of which were introduced as evidence yesterday in the hearing on the quo warranto proceedings against the exchange by Attorney General Barrett, disclosed that members of the exchange never were wholly convinced that their practices were within the law.

The minute books were identified as official by George L. Walters, secretary-treasurer of the Mound City Lumber Co., member of the Arbitration Board, who testified, in confirmation of the minutes, that the exchange from time to time in recent years had called in attorneys to address them on the question of the legality of their practices, and at one time had gone so far as to consider the advisability of instituting a friendly suit for collection of notes against a member who resigned in order to determine finally if the exchange was operating within the law.

Merrell E. Otis, assistant to the Attorney General, conducted the questioning and pressed Walters for an admission that members of the exchange were never certain that they were not violating the law, but Walters' memory seemed hazy on this point, and all that he seemed sure of was that his own company believed the practices of the exchange were within the law. It was necessary frequently to refresh his memory from the minutes, and admissions were obtained from him that the minutes were quite correct in their record of the fact that lawyers had several times been invited to address the exchange on the legality of its practices.

Many Fines Remitted.

Walters also was questioned on the minutes of the Board of Arbitration, of which he was clerk. The minutes showed a record of 671 cases for infraction of an agreement to maintain uniform service charges. In about 300 of these cases fines were remitted. Walters was asked why the fines were remitted and he answered because of "unfair competition."

He explained that when a member of the exchange had to meet the price of a nonmember, lower than the minimum price permitted by the exchange, this was an infraction of the rules of the exchange, and he was fined. But when the offending member explained that the price was made to meet competition of nonmembers, the fine was remitted on the ground of unfair competition.

The minutes of the exchange showed that addresses on the legality of its practices had been made by L. C. Boyle, of Kansas City, an authority on trade exchanges; W. Frank Carter, counsel for the exchange, and Charles Cummings Collins, another St. Louis attorney.

Hearing Is Adjourned.

The time when the exchange considered a suggestion to have its practices adjudicated was when the Heim Lumber Co. withdrew because of the legality question. The minutes showed there was some discussion on the advisability of bringing a friendly suit against the Heim Company to force compliance to its obligations to the exchange, and this proposed suit was mentioned as a good opportunity to have the legality of the practices of the exchange defined once and for all. But no such suit was instituted.

The hearing was adjourned to 10 a. m. Thursday. The State has about completed its case, and the defense expects to take five days.

FEDERAL RESERVE SYSTEM MAINTAINS STRONG POSITION

Heavier Demands for Banking Accommodations at This Season of Year Fail to Alter Position—European Situation Still Confused.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—In its copyrighted financial weekly review the Evening Post says:

"While the past week has been devoid of movements reflecting pronounced improvement in fundamental conditions, the gains recorded in previous weeks have been well maintained, and all indications point to the passing of the depression from which business has suffered for a year and a half. There are very few lines of business in which greater activity has not been recently noted, and the exceptional cases which can be cited are not of sufficient importance to alter the general conclusion.

"The commodity markets, with the exception of some farm products, continue to register improvement both in trade and in prices. The increase in iron production, which began in August, continued during September at an average daily rate of 7 per cent above that in the previous month. Steel mills likewise have increased their output and a stronger demand is reported for other basic materials, such as lumber, hides and leather, rubber, wool, lead, copper and zinc.

Pre-War Level for Corn.

"The prices of staple farm products have not held so well as those of other basic materials. The grain market during the week had a general reactionary tendency, with corn and oats down to pre-war levels and wheat registering the lowest price for the year. Live stock prices are likewise unsatisfactory, with hogs selling at the lowest price since 1916. Weakness also developed in the cotton market when the Government estimate of crop condition proved to be somewhat in excess of the trade's expectations, but much of the loss early in the week was recovered in a subsequent rally. Th ecotton situation is anomalous. With an indicated yield that is the lowest since 1887, the cotton belt is showing signs of renewed business activity. It is st year's disaster of a big crop and ow prices that has prevented this year's crop failure from proving disastrous. The selling of both cotton and wheat has been proceeding at a atisfactory rate, with a consequent eduction in the volume of 'frozen redit' and a strengthening of bank osition in the agricultural districts.

"While the majority of the changes the course of business are to be garded as constructive, the unsatisfactory features have not wholly appeared. Labor disputes are reorted by the Department of Labor be more prevalent than at any me since the armistice, and the oblem of unemployment, in spite the slight increase in the number workers reported in selected instries, is still an important factor arding the progress of recovery.

"In spite of the heavier demands banking accommodations at this son, the Federal Reserve system maintained the strong position h it reached a week ago, when e ratio of reserves to note and posit liabilities touched the hight point' since the fall of 1917. ere was a slight gain in note cirlation during the week, but the ume has not been sufficient to icate any tendency towards a red of inflation. There have been ilar temporary advances in note es since the contraction began December, and this is also the on when additional funds are led to move the crops. One of the nificant developments has been improvement in the reserve posi of the weaker banks and the ction of interbank borrowings.

uropean Situation Confused.

he European situation continues sed. The more pronounced En exchange on Great Britain, ce, Holland and the Scandinavian ries has been one of the enging features of the week, but ess satisfactory conditions red by the latest statements of ree great central banks of Eu tend to offset these favorable cies. The Imperial Bank of ny reported an increase in cirn during the week of over 00,000 marks as well as a gain 00,000,000 marks in loans. The of England reported a decline reserve ratio, and the Bank of dded to its circulation and ed its advances to the state. the reports from the French itish banks do not indicate an a temporary check to the of financial recuperation, the n in Germany offers no im hope of betterment, unless r leading commercial nations concerted action to put an he economic chaos."

AMERICAN OIL SHARES FEATURE CURB TRADE

Dealings on Smaller Scale, but Market Firm—Bond Section Steady.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—The curb market was firm during the greater part of the two hour session today, with the American oil shares again the leaders. Dealings, however, were on a much smaller scale. The bulk of the trading was supplied by the professional element, which operated on both sides, taking small profits wherever possible. Practically all the talk was in connection with the advancing tendency in crude oil and this naturally attracted most attention to the oil shares.

Cities Service common was the leading feature, moving up sharply on outside buying and covering of old-time short accounts in small lots. The bankers' shares were fractionally higher. International Petroleum was firm and moved up a fraction. Other issues, including Standard Oil of Indiana, Skelly, Gilliland, Glen Rock and Simms Petroleum, while quiet, displayed a firmer tendency.

There was little doing in the coal shares. Durant Motors was a point lower at the start, but rallied quite sharply later. Moderate offerings of Swift International found the bids lacking and resulted in a lower range.

The usual small Saturday's fluctuations were noted in the mining list. However, the price range was narrow. National Tin held about steady, and the other recent active issues were at or near the previous close.

Bonds were less active but the tone of this market was steady.

Foreign Exchange and Domestic Money

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Interest was concentrated chiefly in the dealings in sterling exchange during the past week because of steady buying that started with the beginning of the week and increased in vigor and volume as higher levels were established. The movement of sterling was unusually extensive, demand ranging from $3.72½ on Monday to $3.78½ on Thursday.

Banking dealers who are important in directing movements in foreign exchange insisted that there was no incentive that could be regarded as the factor forcing this advance, and it was insisted by them that the upward movement was due chiefly to covering of shorts by a speculative element. It was asserted, however, by bankers identified with Far Eastern affairs that Japan has been a heavy buyer of sterling for the past two weeks, their estimate of the purchase being close to £5,000,000. Statements were also current that a Japanese loan of £10,000,000 is being negotiated, and in connection with these statements it was recalled that the recent advances in Chinese exchanges had been attributed to operations for account of Japan.

Movements in continental rates were generally regarded as being directly related to arrangements for German reparations payments, but there were indications that an advance in exchange on Holland to a new high record for the year was the result of sales of Royal Dutch in the stock market here for Holland account. German exchange was steady to firm after making the low record in the preceding week, and made a moderate advance on fairly large transactions. French fluctuated over a wide range, showing strength in the last half of the week. Rates on Sweden and Denmark rose to new high figures for the year, while exchange on Norway declined to a new low level for the year. Greek exchange was affected by military reverses, and also made a new low record for the year, drachmas being offered yesterday at 4.15 without finding firm bids.

Material improvement took place Saturday. Led by sterling, which advanced 2⅝ cents to a new high level for the week at $3.81, rates on the more important continental centers moved higher. The buying of sterling came through Canadian banking institutions and was reported to be for the account of the British Government. French francs were 7½ points higher at 7.31. Italian lire 3 points higher at 4.02, and the so-called neutral rates 5 to 17 points higher.

Following are Saturday's quotations in the foreign exchange market:

City Protects Investors

Toledo Ordinance Practically Guarantees Principal and Interest on Utility Issues

Short Time Bonds Yield 6%

The Toledo Traction, Light & Power Company 7% first lien bonds (due Dec. 1, 1922), which were recently offered by a group of investment bankers of which Mark C. Steinberg & Company, Mezzanine, Boatmen's Bank Bldg., are members, is unusually interesting to investors, as it furnishes an example of what the "get-together" spirit between a municipality and its utilities can accomplish.

The Toledo Traction, Light and Power Company, through subsidiaries, not only supplies the entire commercial electric light and power, gas and heat, without competition to the City of Toledo, but also supplies it with its street railway service.

An ordinance recently ratified by a vote of the people, with a majority of approximately 3 to 1, permits a change in fare every ten days if needed.

A committee composed of city and company representatives has full authority to change rates any time it sees fit to whatever rate is necessary to pay the interest charges on bonds, dividends on preferred stock and to provide funds for replacements, working capital and the sinking fund.

By a further provision, the City of Toledo agrees to pay to the company the par value and interest of all the first mortgage bonds of the Traction Company that may be outstanding at the expiration of the ordinance or any renewal thereof. Thus, in effect the city practically guarantees the bonds of the company. $4,200,000 of these city-protected bonds, in addition to the company's equity in the lighting and heating properties, is the collateral security behind the $2,500,000 issue now offered.

Details of these bonds and the plan of the city by which the municipality gradually pays for and acquires the street railways system may be had upon application. The greater part of the issue has been sold to investors, but Mark C. Steinberg & Company are offering a limited amount at 98¼ to yield 8.40%.

LONDON REPORTS TREASURY BOND SALES AS GOOD

Estimated £50,000,000 Worth Disposed of During September — Maintenance of the Bank Rate Causes No Comment.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—Arthur W. Kiddy, financial editor of the London Morning Post and editor of the Bankers' Magazine, in today's financial review says:

"The maintenance of the bank rate causes no comment, as it is regarded as inevitable that the financial necessities of the Government will produce ease in the money market and a lower rate would encourage inflationary tendency. Excellent treasury bond sales, estimated at £50,000,000 during September, have helped the position by permitting repayment of advances made by the Bank of England.

"As the situation is better than expected, some observers had hoped for a reduction in the bank rate this week. This view is superficial, however, and neglects to take into consideration the Government's liabilities of about £50,000,000 for dividend money on Dec. 1, and exchequer bond repayments in February, with the revenue outlook poor. Reclaims of excess profits duties paid and delay in making final payments are reducing receipts from this source.

Better Cotton Demand.

"Sales of surplus stores may improve if trade revives. The cotton trade reports a better domestic demand, but most lines still find sales small. The outcry continues against the retail trade policy of hand-to-mouth buying from manufacturers at heavy cuts, while maintaining excessive profit margins on sales.

"Various export credit schemes are being discussed unofficially as opposed to the Government's existing but practically dormant plan so far. Attempts to enlist big insurance interests in plans to minimize risks involved in the fluctuating exchanges have failed, because obviously no data exists for forecasting currency fluctuations and none in possible until Central European governments discontinue their policy of printing-press finance. Hence it is possible that the Ter-meulen principle will receive further indorsement as offering the greatest security with the least risk of further inflation. But the Ter-meulen plans require international co-operation and the experience of the attempt to apply the plan to Austria indicates that political difference cause great delay while the situation deteriorates.

Unemployment Problem Discussed.

"The internal and immediate unemployment problem here has begun with the Premier's conversations with labor leaders.

"The visit of Reginald McKenna, who is a passenger on the Olympic, has to do with purely banking and business affairs and has no political or national significance."

Wall Street News and Comment —SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Further rather active buying of oil stocks was the main point of interest in the market today. Outside of this group trading was very dull and prices, while firm, were little changed. Some short covering appeared in the tobaccos and two or three specialties of the type of Famous Players and Lee Rubber were bid up. But the steels, the equipments and a good part of the railway list were very neglected.

Yesterday's advance, the third in little more than a week, in crude oil prices was copied by oil operators all over the country. What was quite as significant, in view of the fact that Standard Oil took the lead in marking down prices during the time of acute depression, was an increase of a cent a gallon in gasoline quotations announced by the Standard Oil of Indiana. Except for Houston Oil, which ran up with considerable violence, the advances in the oil group were not particularly large. Steadiness was shown by most of this class of stocks, especially the low-priced and medium priced issues.

Recovery went further in the foreign exchanges, with the exception of German marks. Sterling got above $3.79, at which figure it was up 8 cents in the pound from a week ago. This movement appears to have direct relation to the heavy German buying which has been going on in all foreign currencies, but which has lately favored the pound rather than the dollar. Wheat prices, continuing their decline, touched a new low for the year.

The Bond Market.

Activity in the bond market today was fairly general, but in all groups except the Libertys prices remained practically unchanged. Liberty Bonds continued their advance. All issues got to new high levels. City of Berne 8s at 102 struck their top for the year. There was considerable trading at slight advances in the new Queensland and Rio de Janeiro issues, offered to the public yesterday. Danish municipals series A were bought at a fractional increase over their close of last night. The Mexican Government issues, which have fluctuated quite freely during the past week, were firm.

The demand for the various Canadian provincial issues has continued during the week and the bonds have been strong.

The railway group, too, was without feature. Illinois Central 5½s and Chesapeake & Ohio 4½s advanced a bit as against their close yetserday. Lehigh Valley 6s equaled their best price for the year when they got to par. Westinghouse Electric 7s were in demand up to their top of 103. Sinclair Oil 7½s were higher, following the general trend of the oil securities. Cuba Cane Sugar 7s completed a recovery of 5 points from their recent low. Hudson & Manhattan refunding 5s continued to work into new high ground. Midvale Steel 5s were a fraction higher, while United States Rubber were somewhat lower.

Wabash.

Wabash preferred came to the front today, rather taking the place that had been occupied yesterday by Missouri Pacific preferred. The reason in both instances is much the same, namely, a decided improvement in recent earnings. The change on the Wabash has, however, been still more marked than on Missouri Pacific. Up to the end of July the Wabash was not earning its fixed charges, but the August statement showed a remarkable gain. Gross earnings rose to $5,406,857 from $4,862,000 the month before and the net income increased from $238,000 to $708,900.

Dry Goods Market.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Cotton goods were quieter today, with prices firm in gray goods. Rising prices were made on many lines of domestic. Yarns were firm, combed yarns being especially strong. Knit goods were in fair demand. Linens were active and firmer. Burlaps were quiet. New lines of men's clothing for spring will be shown and priced by leading manufacturers next week. While price changes will not be important, much better values will be shown in the garments because of the higher quality cloths used, it is stated.

New York Sugar.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—The raw sugar market was quiet today and the only sales reported were a lot of 3200 bags of Porto Ricos to an outport refiner at 4.13 for centrifugal, or unchanged from the last previous sale. There were no sales reported by the committee, although it is said that a fair line of Cubas in port and to arrive will be taken by local refiners, to be paid for at the committee's official price, when used. The committee is still offering at 2⅝c for Cubas, cost and freight, equal to 4.23c for centrifugal.

Trading in raw sugar futures was light and principally in the form of evening up for over the week-end. The undertone was steady and closing prices were unchanged to 1 point net higher. December closed at 2.36c; March, 2.29c; May, 2.30c, and July, 2.47c.

The refined market was steady and unchanged at 5.50c for fine granulated.

Refined futures were dull and without transactions. Closing prices were unchanged to 5 points net higher, with December, 5.40c; March, 5.35c, and May, 5.40c.

New York Coffee Market.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—The market for coffee futures was very quiet this morning and correspondingly sensitive to small orders either way. After opening at a decline of 2 to 6 points under scattered liquidation, prices steadied up a point or two on covering, but the market otherwise was featureless, with March ranging between 7.93c and 7.94c. The close was 1 to 4 points net lower. Sales were estimated at about 4000 bags. October, 7.75c; December, 7.89c; January, 7.91c; March, 7.94c; May, 8c; July, 8.05c; September, 8.03c. SPRING WHEAT CROP IS PUT AT 196,776,000 BU.

Forecast Cut 13,200,000 Bushels by Government — 3,163,000,000 Bu. of Corn.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—Spring wheat production showed a reduction of almost 13,200,000 bushels and corn a reduction of 22,800,000 bushels compared with a month ago, the Department of Agriculture's October crop report today indicated. White potatoes prospects, however, an increase of 22,800,000 bushels, and tobacco an increase of 43,200,000 pounds.

The loss to the corn crop during September from storms and insects, the department announced in a statement, was greater than the benefits from generally ample moisture and lack of frosts.

Much corn was thrown down by the heavy September storms through the central states and is suffering serious damage from mold and rot. There was loss of 17,000,000 bushels each in Illinois and Missouri and 5,000,000 bushels in Iowa. The net loss for September of 22,800,000 bushels in the prospective crop is, however, less than 1 per cent and the crop promises to be among the best ever grown, considering quality and quantity, the department announced.

While the corn crop is only 69,000,000 bushels, or 2 per cent less than last year, oats is shorter by 448,000,000 bushels, or 30 per cent less than a year ago. The condition of oats is the lowest on record, the crop being extremely light. The increased potato prospects are due to ample moisture and absence of frosts during September.

Production Estimates.

This year's crop production, basing the estimates on conditions prevailing Oct. 1, follows:

- Spring wheat, 196,776,000 bushels.
- All wheat, 740,655,000 bushels.
- Corn, 3,163,063,000 bushels.
- Oats, 1,078,519,000 bushels.
- Barley, 163,399,000 bushels.
- Buckwheat, 14,263,000 bushels.
- White potatoes, 345,844,000 bushels.
- Sweet potatoes, 106,569,000 bushels.
- Flax, 8,878,000 bushels.
- Rice, 33,020,000 bushels.
- Tobacco, 991,564,000 pounds.
- Peaches, 33,195,000 bushels.
- Apples, 109,710,000 bushels.
- Sugar beets, 7,916,000 tons.
- Kafirs, 127,930,000 bushels.
- Peanuts, 31,898,000 bushels.
- Beans, 9,332,000 bushels.

Condition Figures Oct. 1.

The condition of the crops on Oct. 1, or at a time of harvest, was announced as follows: Corn, 84.8 per cent of a normal; buckwheat, 87.4; white potatoes, 66.5; sweet potatoes, 77; flaxseed, 66.8; rice, 84.6; tobacco, 75.6; sugar beets, 89.3.

The condition and forecast of production of corn by principal producing states are:

GRAIN FUTURES TOUCH NEW LOWS FOR 1921

Slack European Demand for American Wheat Big Factor in the Market.

All grain futures fell to new low record for the year during the past week. Chicago stressed the point that the heavy supplies on hand threatened to result in serious congestion of elevators.

Notwithstanding rallies at times owing to a decrease in the stock of wheat afloat on the ocean and because enlargement of the domestic visible supply total was less than in the previous week, the downward sweep of values was practically without any decided interruption. With European demand very slow for United States wheat, bears at Chicago were said to put special stress on the big stocks at Kansas City and on the possibility of shipments being made from there to Chicago. Sharp attention was therefore directed to reported scarcity of available storage room, especially there and in the South and Southwest.

General liquidation by holders took place, and no lasting progress was achieved by speculators who had hoped for a reaction in view of the severe fall in prices.

Disappointing husking advices tended to retard the decline in corn.

Provisions weakened with grain.

NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, Ill., Oct. 8.—Influenced by moderate receipts and a fair demand, livestock values ruled upward at this market the current week, hogs, sheep and lambs and most grades of cattle closing materially higher for the period. A strong demand prevailed for good cornfed steers and yearlings and the advance on these averaged 50c. Medium and common native steers showed no material improvement, though Western range offerings ruled up to the extent of 15c to 25c. A short load of yearling steers topped the week's trade at $11 per 100 lbs., followed by a full load at $10.80. High sale for matured steers was $9.50 and several other lots of fair to good finish commanded a range of $8.75 to $9.25. The bulk of all native steers moved from $6.60 to $9, while range offerings from Kansas, Colorado, Oklahoma and Texas sold from $4.50 to $6.65. Excepting the extreme low end, most butcher yearlings ruled higher, most sales showing 25c to 50c up, spots more. Though medium-grade butcher cows closed little better than steady with a week ago, the better grades, also the low end, canners and cutters show a gain of about 25c. Most butchers during the week sold from $3.50 to $5, some better kinds around $5.50. Canner and cutter cows occupied a range of $2.25 to $3.25 largely. The market for bulls ruled lower toward the end of the week, the loss amounting to 25c. Most sold during the week from $3.25 to $4.50. The volume of stocker and feeder business, though fair, was somewhat below that of the previous week. Steers sold mainly from $4 to $5 and $5.50. Offerings again included a good sprinkling of Panhandle stocker stuff. At the best time or during midweek veal calves commanded a top of $11.50. The market declined at the close, however, high sale Friday being $10.50. Heavy calves steady to strong for period.

Hog Market Active.

Hog market ruled active and higher during the week with the highest point reached on the close when the top went to $8.80, reflecting an advance of 45c over a week ago. The lowest point to which the market receded was $8.55, which was also well above last week's closing top of $8.55. Eastern order demand was somewhat improved and this with a good call from city butchers gave the market a good active tone at all times. Hogs weighing 200 pounds or better continue very scarce and buyers paid a slight premium for this kind. Bulk of the hogs of this class sold from $8.60@8.65 during the week, while hogs weighing under 190 pounds cleared largely from $8.45@8.60. Strong weights and heavies were too scarce to quote. Pig market closed 25@40c higher, bulk of sales, regardless of weight, going from $8.40@8.60. Rough hogs are 25@30c higher, good sows going from $6.50@6.75 and stags $5.50@5.75. Receipts for the period total 44,294, comparing with 48,094 last week.

Sheep Prices Higher.

With receipts showing a good increase for the week but still inadequate, and with a marked scarcity of quality, prices were forced upward in a small way. During the early part of the week lambs sold up to $9 to city butchers, or 75c higher than the close of the preceding week. These lambs were Westerns, the first of the season and were very good, although not strictly finished. The mates sold to packers at $8.50.

Quality was plain as a whole, which is shown in the fact that bulk of the lambs sold in a spread of $7.25@8, whereas choice lambs were at no time quotable below $8.50. Market closed 25c higher for the week, with best lambs from $8.25@8.50, fair to good $7.50@8, medium $6.50@7.50 and culls $4.50@5. Fat sheep show no changes for the week, best handyweights selling at $4 and heavies at $3.50, with canners from 50c to 75c per cwt., and choppers and bucks largely at $2. Receipts for the period total 9014, against 7434 the preceding week and 9735 the corresponding period of last year.

Horse and Mule Market.

Horse and mule receipts at more than 3000 head were the largest of the year. Of this number something like 2500 were consigned to commission firms and comprised the following: 800 native horses, 500 westerns and about 1200 mules. Buyers were here in large number and the trade in southern horses was active at steady prices on an average. Slight strength in the market the fore part of the week was counterbalanced by a slight weakening in the trade later in the period. There was also some eastern demand on the market and the moderate number of big horses here moved readily at steady to slightly improved rates. Some of the best draft horses are quotable up to $125@160, though medium grades, also most of the chunks, are selling through a spread of $50 to $100. Values for southern horses vary largely from $20 to $85. Values for range horses at present are low. Further decline in the market occurred this week, numerous sales averaging $5 to $10 per head lower. This was particularly true of halter-broken horses. Fat gentle mares weighing 850 to 1100 pounds, though easily moved, were sold at a loss of $5 to $7.50 per head. At the first sale this week (Tuesday) halter-broken horses averaged $29.09 each. The average was lower than usual, partly because of the presence of many small, thin stuff. Some of the better consignments averaged $40 and $50 per head.

Considering the volume of receipts (1200 head on commission), the mule market acted in quite satisfactory manner, especially early in the week. Trade eased off slightly on the close. Demand was best for cotton mules; also there was some outlet for sugar mules, preferably 16 to 16¾ hands high and 4 to 6 years old. There was some call for good miners. The heavy run was virtually cleared by the close of the week. In addition to commission offerings, there were hundreds of mules offered out of a score of dealers' barns.

NEW LOWS IN GRAIN AT CHICAGO BEFORE RALLY

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 8.—A late rally relieved an otherwise depressing short session of the Board of Trade today, the change coming after wheat, corn and oats had all recorded new lows for the season. The close was unchanged to ½c lower for wheat, ⅛c to 1c lower for corn and ¼c lower for oats. Lard finished unchanged to 7½c higher and ribs 2½c lower to 5c higher.

Wheat started weak and made its low mark early. An initial rally caused by anticipation of the Government report was short lived and the market sagged steadily until December touched $1.07⅝ and May $1.12½. Sentiment was mixed and the news generally bearing, export demand being reported slow and Canadian Northwest offerings liberal, with big receipts in prospect at Winnipeg next week.

The turn came unexpectedly, and shorts who sold freely on the way down were driven to cover. To the usual week-end evening up sales were added reports that India—ordinarily an exporting country—had bought two cargoes of Pacific Northwest wheat, with further trade in sight. There was also a report that Italy would be back in the market Monday.

Corn and oats moved in parallel lines under stop-loss selling, the fact that new No. 4 corn is deliverable under December contracts increasing the pressure on that option. Evening-up transactions helped a recovery from the inside figures.

Provisions were dull. Lard firmed up on the strength of the hog market, and ribs were a bit lower.

Honey and Beeswax.

BEESWAX—Prime at 23c per pound.

HONEY—Southern extracted and strained bright amber in cans, 6c to 6½c per lb.; dark, ½@1c less.

COTTON IRREGULAR IN CLOSING TRADE

Market Is Nervous—Some Trade Buying in Late Session, Then Liquidation.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Probably the greater part of the fairly active business reported in the cotton market here today represented the evening up of speculative accounts for over the week-end. Trade interests were buyers on an opening decline, but the market met hedge selling on the rally from 19.57c to 19.94c for December contracts, while orders otherwise seemed to be pretty well divided. December closed at 19.70c compared with 19.83c at the close of the previous day, with the general market irregular, net 25 points lower to 4 points higher. There was no business in October, but the nominal quotation for that month showed the maximum loss for the day.

The market opened easy at a decline of 17 to 44 points under scattering liquidation and some Southern hedge selling, while there was also considerable selling of December and January by brokers with Japanese connections. Reports of low temperatures in central and western belt sections with frost at Abilene, Tex., Memphis and Fort Smith, appeared to attract very little attention, but there was a good deal of covering at the early decline to 19.16c for January and trade buying was accompanied by reports that domestic spinners had been good buyers of spots in the South late yesterday. There was also bullish comment on the increased amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance which was supposed to foreshadow larger exports to Great Britain and the market showed considerable firmness during the middle of the morning with January selling up to 19.62c, while March advanced from 18.92c to 19.42c, or 11 to 20 points net higher.

There was more realizing at these figures, while hedge selling increased in the last half hour, and the close was about 20 to 24 points off from the best. Cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week amounted to 196,000 bales against 111,000 last year. Reports from the goods trade stated that print cloths were available at second hands yesterday at slight concessions from the top. Manchester reports continued demand from China and occasional sales to India.

Ditrichstein in "Toto," Mantell in a Classical Repertoire, This Week

Suave Star Appears as King of the Paris Boulevards—Billy B. Van and James J. Corbett in Vaudeville.

A ROLE of the "great lover" type, now associated permanently with the name of Leo Ditrichstein, will be played by him in "Toto," the Parisian comedy in which he comes to the Shubert-Jefferson Theater tonight. "Toto" was written by Maurice Hennequin and Felix Duquesnal, and the English adaptation is by Achmed Abdullah.

The original title was "Patachon," meaning one who paints the town red. Toto has a wife, who does not share his gay life in the capital, but lives in seclusion in rural France. Toto's return to his austere wife constitutes the occasion of the play.

The supporting company includes Frances Underwood, seen here in a recent season in "Civilian Clothes;" Nellie Burt, Orlando Daly, Lee Millar, Josephine Hamner and other members of the New York cast. "Toto" was played in the Bijou Theater, New York, for 11 weeks last spring, and was in Chicago through the summer.

Robert B. Mantell

THE Mantell engagement at the American Theater, opening tomorrow night with "Richelieu," will present again the repertoire in which Mantell was seen in the same house last season. All are Shakspearean dramas except "Richelieu," the work of Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton.

Tuesday night and Saturday afternoon Mantell will play the role of Shylock in "Merchant of Venice;" Wednesday afternoon he will be the melancholy Jacques in "As You Like It," this being the role which he played in the first production given in the St. Louis Municipal Theater, several seasons ago. Wednesday night and Saturday night he will play Brutus in "Julius Caesar;" Thursday night, "Hamlet," and Friday night, "Macbeth."

Miss Genevieve Hamper heads the supporting cast, her first night's role being that of Julia in "Richelieu," and her later roles including those of Portia, Ophelia and Lady Macbeth.

Later Fall Drama

JACINTO BENAVENTE'S intense Spanish play, "The Passion Flower," will be presented at the American the week beginning next Sunday night, Oct. 16, with Nance O'Neil in the role of the mother, Raimunda. The chief characters in the drama are the mother, her daughter, Acacia, just coming into womanhood, and the husband and stepfather, the murderously jealous Esteban. A psychic study of the narrow line dividing passionate hatred from passionate love underlies the vigorous action of the drama.

"Erminie," revived light opera success of 30 years ago, with De Wolf Hopper and Francis Wilson in the cast, is to be at the American Thanksgiving week.

"The Bird of Paradise," original and perennial Hawaiian drama, will be at the Jefferson next Sunday night, Oct. 16. Ann Reader, as the Princess Luana, and Herbert Charles will have the leading roles. Native singers, ukelelists and hula dancers accompany the production, as of yore.

For the week of Oct. 23, Guy Bates Post is to be at the Jefferson in "The Masquerader," in which he was here in previous seasons. Post plays a dual role, the play being taken from Katherine Cecil Thurston's novel.

Orpheum's Bill

BILLY B. VAN and James J. Corbett are to head the Orpheum Theater's vaudeville bill tomorrow, in their act entitled "The Eighteenth Amendment." Van is one of the most successful of comedians, and Corbett has won favor as a monologist, since his active days in the prize-ring ended.

Others on the Orpheum bill are Miss Juliet in the "one-girl review"; Vaughn Comfort, tenor; Harry Holman in a comedy, "Hard-Boiled Hampton"; Larry Comer, in songs; the Clinton Sisters, dancers, and Sibla, model.

At the Grand Opera House, a revue, the Magazine Girls, will be featured. Don C. Alfonso Zelaya, pianist and son of a former President of Nicaragua, is on the bill.

Today's bill at the Empress Theater is headed by "A Gay Little Home," in which song and dance illustrate a young man's effort at courtship. "Senator" Francis Murphy will indulge in oratory, and the three Dealys will give a song, dance and dress revue.

The Garrick will present the "All-Jazz Revue this afternoon, with Walter Brown as chief entertainer. "Sporting Widows," with Al K. Hall, is to be at the Gayety.

Drama Bits and Gossip of Stage

THEY are still tinkering with the ending of Zoe Akins' play, "Daddy's Gone a-Hunting." The first change was in the tone of the final "God knows!" which was made rapturous and prophetic, instead of despairing. Now the "God knows!" has disappeared altogether, and at the end the sheltering lover of Edith Fields comes back to her side, wistful and compassionate. One of the fitful, changing winds of life has blown her door shut. Perhaps—who knows?—perhaps another wind will blow another door open. "Perhaps," he says. "Perhaps," says she. And the curtain falls.

Miss Akins, explaining the new change, and defending it against those who deem it too near the conventional happy ending, says:

"Time would have written a happy ending for her, anyway. She was that kind. Time always writes some sort of happy ending for the courageous and honest-hearted. Her happiness, as Mr. Mulvaney would have said, is another story. However—since people wanted to be sure that her despair would pass—it's not really infamous to give them a hint of what time was planning for her. It's less dramatic to know she'll have an adoring husband and some more babies than to leave her bowed low and, for the moment, adrift, but it's more comfortable. And since it's true, I don't mind, I suppose."

The Loss of "Cyrano"

FORMER United States Judge Grosscup, who died a few days ago, was the author of the remarkable decision, handed down in his court in Chicago some 15 years ago, which stopped the presentation of Edmond Rostand's romantic drama, "Cyrano de Bergerac," in the United States. Some individual whose name is long since fogotten, and who had written a play which he called "The Merchant Prince of Cornville," filed a suit alleging that the French drama was an infringement on the copyright of "The Merchant Prince." To the amazement of the literary and dramatic world, Judge Grosscup upheld this plea, and the American stage lost a play of classicla worth and meld, which had been presented in this country by Coquelin and Sarah Bernhardt in French, and by Richard Mans-

WHAT THEY ARE DOING IN THE MOVIE STUDIOS

DAVID BELASCO'S farce comedy, "Is Matrimony a Failure?" is soon to be made into a Paramount picture with T. Roy Barnes in the lead and James Cruze as director. Mr. Barnes recently appeared in "Exit the Vamp," a Paramount picture written by Clara Beranger with Ethel Clayton as the star. "Is Matrimony a Failure?" was first produced by David Belasco on Broadway several years ago with Leo Ditrichstein in the leading role. Ditrichstein adapted the play from a big Continental success. In its American version the play had an extended run in New York and a successful tour on the road.

Work has been started on the comedy feature, "EK," with Will Rogers in the leading role. Lila Lee will play the feminine lead. Others will include Allan Hale, Emily Raitz, Clarence Burton and John Fox. The latter, a boy, will interpret the very unusual part of Ek, a vagrant soul looking for an earthly home.

James Kirkwood has sailed for Europe to play the title role in the Paramount production of "The Man From Home," to be produced in Europe by George Fitzmaurice. "The Man From Home" first appeared in book form several years ago, had a tremendous vogue and established Booth Tarkington as one of the most popular American writers. Later

New Tarkington Comedy, "The Wren," Will Open

"A Bill of Divorcement," an English Success, Among This Week's New Productions in New York.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.

NEW attractions of the coming week in the theaters are:

"The Wren," Gaiety Theater. A new comedy by Booth Tarkington, in which the diminutive Helen Hayes is to be the star. Its scenes are laid in a summer boarding house on the coast of Maine, and George Fawcett of the films will play the part of a sea captain. John Flood, Sam Reed, Marion Abbott and Pauline Armitage are in the cast.

"A Bill of Divorcement," George M. Cohan Theater. Allan Pollock will appear in the principal role, which he created in this play's successful run in London. The play is by Clemence Dane, whose stage works have not heretofore reached Broadway. Janet Beecher, Katherine Cornell and Charles Waldron will be seen in the cast.

"Ambush," Garrick Theater. Frank Reicher, Jane Wheatley, Florence Eldridge, Katherine Proctor and John Craig in the large cast. Written by Arthur Richman.

"Love Dreams," Times Square Theater. Ann Nichols' melody drama, presented last season in the West. Fourteen musical numbers are in the play, and Vera Michelena, Harry K. Morton, Orrin Johnson, Tom Powers and Edna Bates are in the large cast.

"Main Street"

WHEN Sinclair Lewis' "Main Street" passed its tenth edition, its adaptation into a play became as certain as death and taxes, no matter how ill suited its undramatic story was for use on the stage. Wednesday night the inevitable affair came off at the National Theater. Harvey O'Higgins and Harriet Ford, a handy pair with scissors and paste, made the dramatization, and "Main Street," much disfigured but well advertised, took its place in the serried ranks of hick comedy. There have been worse rural plays than this patched-up piece about Gopher Prairie and its home folk, also many that have been vastly more interesting.

It is too much to expect that all Carol Kennicott said to Dr. Will, and all that the Gopher Prairieites said to them and about them in a novel of more than 400 pages, could be crowded into a four-act play. But it is not too much to ask that at least the spirit of a story be preserved, even when the theater takes liberties with it for purely commercial purposes. It is on acocunt of such alteration of values—which has nothing to do with alterations of scenes and incidents—that there is reason to quarrel with "Main Street" as a play.

The adapters must have discovered that there was not one real dramatic throb in the narrative story from its beginning to its end. So they felt called upon to put some in. As a result of the tactics they have followed, Kennicott in the play is not nearly so fine a type of the Western country doctor as he is in the book. Carol was surely enough of a prig as Mr. Lewis drew her. Now she is even worse. No Sympathy attaches

Odd Facts About Picture Players and Films

MABEL NORMAND, who just finished a picture for Mack Sennett called "Molly-O," was said to receive a salary of $7500 a week for her work in that picture. She received this salary only during the comparatively brief period while the picture was being made.

Actors are made to appear to leap 60 feet or more from one roof to another across the street through a trick of the movie director. The buildings are first photographed. Then at the studio the actor is filmed jumping from one spot to another about eight feet away. The jump is made in front of a black curtain, and only the figure of the jumper appears on the film. In printing, one picture is superimposed on the other, the perspectives being matched exactly, and you have a man doing the impossible.

Many of the scenes of "The Lure of the Jade" were snapped in the United States Naval Station at San Diego, Cal.

Elliott Dexter's wife is the dainty little Marie Doro. Marion Davies is a real blonde; she has blue eyes and golden hair.

To make close-ups of persons in a speeding automobile, a platform is built in front of the radiator and on it the camera man grinds out his film. He works from the front seat when the actors are in the rear seat.

Viola Dana, Gloria Swanson and Olga Petrova are green-eyed sirens. The last named has red hair.

A "Klieg-eye" is a painful inflammation of the eye caused by the ultra violet rays of the Klieg light. It affects only certain colors of eyes.

Before entering the movies Larry Semon was a cartoonist for a New York newspaper.

Fog scenes are usually taken in the studio by photographing a scene through a piece of gauze stretched over the lens. Attempts have been made to take genuine fog scenes, but

"The Affairs of Anatol," "Thunderclap," "Footlights," "The Blot" on Film Bills

The Criterion Theater Opens for the Season With First Showing of Lois Weber Production.

ON LOCAL SCREENS

New Grand Central, West End Lyric and Capital—"The Affairs of Anatol."

Liberty—Mary Carr in "Thunderclap."

Missouri—Elsie Ferguson in "Footlights."

Criterion—Marie Walcamp in "The Blot."

"THE Affairs of Anatol," a Paramount feature production with an all-star cast and based on Arthur Schnitzler's Viennese play of the same name, is the week's feature at the New Grand Central, West End Lyric and Capitol theaters.

In the list of stars are Wallace Reid, Bebe Daniels, Gloria Swanson, Wanda Hawley, Elliott Dexter, Theodore Roberts, Raymond Hatton, Theodore Kosloff, Agnes Ayres, Monte Blue, Polly Moran and Julia Faye.

This picture has been acclaimed in the East as one of the season's screen hits. It has been said that it departs from the letter of the Schnitzler drama, but preserves its spirit very well, considering the differing viewpoints on life held by the pre-war Viennese and the post-war New Yorker.

The story turns on the adventure of Anatol who leaves his over-affectionate wife to find diversion in the society of others. He is conceited enough to think he is a judge of women, but in three instances his guesses are wrong. A woman with an angel face picks his pocket and a woman reputed to be "wicked" turns out a good Samaritan. His third wrong guess is that after his adventures it will be easy to return to his wife. This is accomplished only after many difficulties, some tragic and some amusing.

The feature on the Liberty bill is "Thunderclap," a racetrack melodrama which is said to provide many thrills. In the cast are Mary Carr, Violet Mersereau and Paul Willis. Mary Carr, who will be remembered for her work as star in "Over the Hill," again appears in a "mother" part. In this picture she has the role of a woman stricken with paralysis. Among the thrills are a horse race scene and one in which the hero is carried down rapids to the brink of a waterfall.

The Missouri's leading attraction is Elsie Ferguson in "Footlights," the story of a vaudeville entertainer who, through skillful exploitation, becomes a famous legitimate actress. In order to achieve this it is necessary for her to give up all of her friends and associates and lose her identity to the point where it is possible to introduce her to the playgoing public as a great Russian actress. This involves playing a double role.

The feature at the Criterion, which opens for the season, is "The Blot," a Lois Weber picture with Marie Walcamp, Margaret McWade, Claire Windsor, Philip Hubbard and Louis Calhern in the cast. This picture tells an interesting story of the financial struggles of a college professor in supporting his family on a small salary. A spendthrift collegian who falls in love with the professor's daughter sees the injustice of the college salary system and uses his influence to have it changed.

KENTUCKY WOMEN IN FIGHT FOR FULL POLITICAL RIGHTS

SEVERAL STATUTES FOUND TO BE VAGUE

Gov. Morrow Pledges His Support in Matter and Will Have Attorney-General Prepare Necessary Bills.

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Oct. 8.—Although women are granted the right to vote on all Federal questions by the suffrage amendment to the Constitution of the United States, there are a number of questions of Kentucky law that are vague regarding the rights of women in the State, according to suffrage leaders. An effort will be made at the 1922 session of the State Legislature to remove whatever restrictions remain and to clear up matters of State law that still remain vague.

It was to these questions that Gov. Edwin P. Morrow recently pledged his support in a letter to Mrs. Rebecca R. Judah of Louisville, in which he said: "After considering the question as to what yet must be done to complete the enfranchisement of women of Kentucky and remove them from certain disqualifications, I am happy to advise you that I will take pleasure in supporting the program to remove all these restrictions and so complete the real purpose of the Kentucky Legislature started two years ago. I will be glad to have Attorney-General Dawson assist me in an examination of the statutes and in the preparation of a bill or bills, as the case may be."

Restrictions Objected To.

The restrictions to which the women are at present objecting are vagueness of the law regarding jury service; the right to serve on the board of the State University, and the law preventing a married daughter serving as an executor of her father's estate.

Speaking of the matters sought to be corrected, Mrs. Herbert W. Mengel of Louisville said today:

"The removal of disqualifications against women from the statutes of Kentucky is the most natural step following the enfranchisement of women. This action will not mean quite as much to women of Kentucky as it will to the women of many other states, as Kentucky, thanks to the work of its pioneer suffragists, is fortunately among the states with the fewest disqualifications. But it is important that even the few discriminations that exist should be eliminated.

"I do not think that women are more eager for jury service than are men, but they certainly should feel it a duty to serve when called and the vagueness of the law on this subject should be cleared up.

"The women of Kentucky have long felt that women should be allowed to serve on the board of the State University.

"I have personally experienced the unsoundness of the law which prevents a married daughter from serving as executor of her father's estate.

Unsound in Principle.

"All discriminations are unsound in principle and the people of Kentucky should welcome the accomplishment of complete justice. The action of Gov. Morrow will greatly simplify the work of the women of Kentucky."

That the Legislature of 1920, through adoption of the nineteenth amendment, did not fully enfranchise women in the State was the declaration of Mrs. Judah. "The Kentucky Legislature of 1920 on the first day of its session ratified the Federal suffrage amendment," said Mrs. Judah. "Bebore its adjournment it granted the presidential suffrage to the women of Kentucky, this being done to assure Kentucky women the right to vote for the President of the United States should the Federal amendment not have received the necessary 36 state ratifications by November of that year to make it a law.

"Both bills had the hearty support of the majority of the members of both political parties.

"Many people think that the Nineteenth Amendment fully enfranchised the women of the country. Such is not the fact, but the passage of the bill which the Governor and Attorney-General will prepare for presentation to the 1922 Legislature will complete the enfranchisement of the women of Kentucky.

"It is confidently expected that the bill will receive not only merely the majority, but the unanimous support of the members of both political parties."

Backed by National Party.

The plans being made for Kentucky are in line with the campaign of the National Women's party for completion of enfranchisement throughout the country. The party has legal experts examining the Constitution and other records.

There has been some question regarding the right of women to hold certain offices, although there are a number of women candidates for various State and county offices. Passage of the proposed law would remove all doubt.

WHAT THEY ARE DOING IN THE MOVIE STUDIOS

William Hodge on the stage scored a nation-wide success with it.

Among those who have made real screen "hits" during the past year the name of William Christy Cabanne, a former St. Louisan, tops the list. Mr. Cabanne has turned out "The Stealers," "What's a Wife Worth?", "Live and Let Live," and has just completed "The Barricade," which he terms "a powerful preachment against the evils of false pride and prejudice."

Miss Cornelia Skinner, daughter of Otis Skinner, the actor, who made her first professional appearance with the noted star in the screen version of "Kismet" for R-C pictures, has scored one of the personal hits in "Blood and Sand," the stage play by Tom Cushing based upon the novel of the same title by Blasco Ibanez.

The fastest picture ever made with an ordinary movie camera was scored by the Rothacker Film Co. of Chicago. Engineers wanted to see what happened in metal tests when the steel finally gave way under the strain. The 8-to-1 ultra rapid photography, seen in the news weeklies, was not fast enough to record the action of the breaking metal. Before the desired result was obtained, the camera was finally geared up to 16 to 1, with the shutter racing at a peripheral speed of three and one-half miles a minute.

Lilian Rambeau, who plays the part of Mrs. Lindsay in the R.-C. production, "Mam'selle Jo," is the mother of Marjorie Rambeau, now starring in "Daddy's Gone-a-Hunting," at Plymouth Theater, New York.

Louise Fazenda is restless in New York because she is so far away from her Hollywood home and kitchen. Louise, who is working in "The Beauty Shop" for Cosmopolitan Productions, says cooking is her hobby, and she feels lost away from her accustomed gas stove.

Collecting match boxes from all over the world is one of Alma Rubens' means of enjoying herself away from the studio. She got the idea from one of Anatole France's books, and found it a perfectly fascinating pursuit. She says it is remarkable how many varieties of boxes are to be found.

The cast for William De Mille's production of Zona Gale's prize play, "Miss Lulu Bett," has taken on all-star proportions. It includes Lois Wilson, Milton Sills, Theodore Roberts, Helen Ferguson, Mabel Van Buren, May Giraci, Clarence Burton, Ethel Wales and Taylor Graves.

Arthur Hull has been added to the cast of "A Prince There Was," Thomas Meighan's latest Paramount picture. He will be the heavy.

Wallace Reid will next do "The Champion," under the direction of Chester Withey, who has just been specially engaged by Paramount. This picture was adapted for the screen by J. E. Nash from the three-act comedy by Thomas Louden and A. E. Thomas in which Grant Mitchell recently scored a stage success on Broadway. Reid has finished "Rent Free," which he has been making for Paramount at Hollywood under the direction of Howard Higgin. Lila Lee was Reid's leading woman in this comedy-drama scenarized by Elmer Rice from the story by Izola Forrester and Mann Page.

Work was started this week on two new productions at the Lasky studio, Hollywood. These are Cecil B. de Mille's productions, "Saturday Night," and the new Paramount picture starring Gloria Swanson, "The Husband's Trademark." The De Mille production is from an original story by Jeanie Macpherson, and the principal roles are being enacted by Leatrice Joy, Edith Roberts, Conrad Nagel, Jack Mower and Sylvia Ashton. The Swanson story is from an original story by Clara Beranger, adapted by Lorna Moon. Sam Wood is directing and Thompson Buchanan is supervising the production.

Will Rogers, Lila Lee and Walter Hiers have been engaged for the leading roles in a special picture which is being produced at the Paramount studio in Hollywood by James Cruze. The title of the production has not yet been selected, but according to advices from Hollywood, the picture is to be one of the most unusual made this season. Will Rogers in this picture will be seen in the role of professor. Others in the cast will be Emily Rait, Clarence Burton and John Fox.

DANDRUFFY HEADS BECOME HAIRLESS

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

DRAMA BITS AND GOSSIF OF STAGE

field in English. Subsequent plays of Rostand, particularly "Chantecler," bore the stamp of genius, and intensified the criticism of the Court's decision in the "Cyrano" case.

Why Foreign Singers?

FOR the American revival of "The Merry Widow," four foreign singers were engaged. The question has been asked why Americans were not chosen. In reply to this question, John McKee, stage director for Henry W. Savage, has presented statistics. He says that, since April 22 last, 1723 American singers were heard by him, 1171 of these having soprano voices.

The singers had good voices, he says, but they were without stage experience and were unwilling to take anything less than principal parts, or to accept the salaries attached to small parts. He found them especially deficient in the requirement of dancing, most of them having no knowledge of stage dancing, and many having been told, by their music teachers, that stage dancing would ruin their voices. This teaching is disputed by the stage director, who says that only the most strenuous acrobatic or ballet dancing would be likely to affect the voice to any degree.

Suppress the Program

LOUIS N. PARKER, author of "Disraeli," would like to suppress the theater program. Writing in the London Daily Telegraph of his ideals for the theater, he says:

"I wish I dared suppress all programs. I should do so in the case of a new play. Would it not be a strange new joy to be invited merely to see 'A New Play,' without knowing who was the author, who was to play in it, what it was about, whether it was comedy or tragedy, melodrama or farce? Think of the riveted attention the audience would have to exercise. In the case of some plays the audience might even leave the theater still not knowing whether they had seen a farce or a tragedy. And if the play had been a failure the author would have the choice of preserving his anonymity and so escaping the mental scarification he suffers under our prevailing barbarous customs."

Shakspeare's Fools

ROBERT B. MANTELL recently undertook to answer the question why the wit of Shakspeare's fools is such a mirthless matter to the reader and the playgoer of today. He pointed out that other characters in Shakspeare, such as Dogberry, Bottom and Launcelot Gobbo, were funnier than his fools, and offered this explanation:

"Shakspeare introduced his fools in order to provide lines for the popular actor, William Sly, who played the fool's part in his company. In doing this, the dramatist was thinking of the demands of his own time, and not of posterity. Many of the lines given to the fool are allusions, understood in that time, which are incomprehensible now; and other lines depend wholly on the manner of speaking.

"Sly, the fool in Shakspeare's troupe, seems to have learned his art from Richard Tarleton, court jester to Queen Elizabeth. Tarleton was the Yorick to whom tribute is paid in 'Hamlet,' and it was said that he could make the Queen laugh, even in her angry, blackest moods."

TARKINGTON COMEDY, "THE WREN," TO OPEN ENGLISH PLAY ON VIEW

to her in the play, and there is no reason why it should.

Alma Tell made Carol a very difficult and meddlesome person, though she was faithful enough to the drawing of the role. Mackey Morris as the rough-diamond physician gave a colorful and frank performance, though the more ingratiating qualities of the man's nature were not sufficiently brought out. Norval Keedwell's impersonation of Erick was too finely drawn, but the adapters are chiefly responsible for the distortion of the role. The other "types"—a dozen or more in number—were fairly picturesque and amusing. They were of the kind usually encountered in rural comedy.

"The Love Letter"

BEAUTY and delicacy are to be found in abundance in "The Love Letter" presented with exceptional richness and liberality at the Globe Theater. A really notable addition to the season's list of musical plays in every way is this Jacobi operetta, although it may be that after a period devoted to the abandon of the summer revues, some may find its second act—which artistically is by long odds its best—a trifle too sedate and slow-paced to suit their liking.

It is in the symmetry and even balance of all its component points that the new operetta compels admiration. Victor Jacobi has composed for it a score that is flaming and melodious and nicely varied in its 20 numbers. Not a song in the lot merely tinkles.

The cast, which includes John Charles Thomas, Carolyn Thomson and Marjorie Gateson, showed itself able to bring out the best musical qualities of the work. For the lighter numbers, with dance accompaniments, are the nimble and graceful Fred and Adele Astarne. There are also Will West and Radbourne Stewart to transmit the none too luscious humor stowed away in the dialogue. Its quality, alas! may be judged by the pernicious prevalence of the prohibition joke. There is an excellent ensemble, for the lesser characters in the story are many.

In the Molnar play, the story turned upon the dream of the heroine. In her fancies there appears before her the lover she has once dismissed. He comes before her at a Dream Ball as a great soldier, a renowned diplomat, a famous artist and a lackey, and as each he captivates her again. It is this scene in the operetta version that marks the highest level of William Lebaron's work. And here also came the opportunity to which John Charles Thomas rose with a vocal ability that won him acclaim.

ODD FACTS ABOUT PICTURE PLAYERS

the results have been far from satisfactory.

Mack Sennett appeared in many pictures in the early days of the Keystone Comedies, usually with Mabel Normand.

Stars and directors may have their special sports, but Thomas B. Walsh has one that is unique—kangaroo hunting. Thomas comes from Australia, where the kangaroo is a native.

Perhaps the biggest surprise in motion picture circles was sprung by May Allison recently when she admitted that she had been married twice in two years. Even her family knew nothing of it until her announcement. On the first of December, 1919, she married Col. William Stephenson in Santa Ana, Cal. She met the Colonel at a dinner given in her honor by naval officers. This marriage was annulled in February, 1920. On Thanksgiving day of last year May married Robert Ellis, a well-known film director, at Greenwich, Conn.

Tony Moreno and Charlie Chaplin are not citizens of the United States. Moreno was born in Madrid, Spain, in 1888, and has lived in this country since he was 14 years old. He speaks Spanish now only with an effort. Chaplin was born in Paris, France, of English parents, in 1889. He came to this country in his early twenties. Moreno is a subject of Spain and Chaplin is still an English citizen.

Pola Negri, famous German actress, is 28 years old and single. It is reported that she is engaged to a very wealthy German.

Saves You 50c to $10 on Materials Alone

1 THE first thing that the Deltor does is to give you an individual layout chart (yes, an individual chart—not just a general chart but one for your exact size and for each suitable width of material). You lay out your pattern the expert's way. You use ¼ to 1¼ yards less material—a saving of 50c to $10 on material for every frock.

2 THE Deltor saves you time. Everything the Parisian originator would do if he were making your very own frock, is clearly shown by simple pictures and words. Should your dress embody the irregular hem, the bizarre new sleeves, the Italian neck line, the Deltor shows you just how to achieve the correct effect.

3 AND finally you have every last little touch that makes for smartness—ideas for finish that could originate in but one place—Paris. You so instinctively follow the simple explanations that your finished frock must be successful, must be Paris.

SEE the newest Parisian fashions at the Butterick pattern counter. Select the styles that you like best—for the Deltor simplifies the making of the most intricate gowns, suggests the correct fabrics, and saves you 50c to $10 because it specifies less material than would be possible without the Deltor's layout chart.

"Cure Your Rupture Like I Cured Mine"

Old Sea Captain Cured His Own Rupture After Doctors Said "Operate or Death."

His Remedy and Book Sent Free.

Captain Collings sailed the seas for many years; then he sustained a bad double rupture that soon forced him to not only remain ashore, but kept him bedridden for years. He tried doctor after doctor and truss after truss. No results! Finally, he was assured that he must either submit to a dangerous and abhorrent operation or die. He did neither! He cured himself instead.

"Fellow Men and Women, You Don't Have to Be Cut Up, and You Don't Have to Be Tortured by Trusses."

Captain Collings made a study of himself, of his condition—and at last he was rewarded by the finding of the method that so quickly made him a well, strong, vigorous and happy man.

Anyone can use the same method; it's simple, easy, safe and inexpensive. Every ruptured person in the world should have the Captain Collings book, telling all about how he cured himself, and how anyone may follow the same treatment in their own home without any trouble. The book and medicine are FREE. They will be sent prepaid to any rupture sufferer who will fill out the below coupon. But send it right away—now—before you put down this paper.

NOVEL ATTEMPTS TO LAY BARE THE SECRET OF MARS

Scientists Propose Elaborate Plans to Reveal Planet's Life by Rocket, Radio and Camera.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Rocket, radio or camera—which will be first to lay bare the secret of Mars?

Of course, it isn't at all certain that any one of the three will prove a successful Sherlock Holmes of the skies scientists, lured on by an age-old curiosity concerning our neighboring planet, are pressing along all three paths.

The latest development to set the scientific world again agog over the old question of whether there is life on Mars was the announcement from Paris of B. McAfee, American scientist, and Prof. David Todd, American astronomer, that they purposed to snap-shoot the planet by using an abandoned mine shaft in Chile as the barrel for a telescope.

Only a short time before Sig. Marconi of wireless fame had put a kick of interest in the most fantastic of scientific inquiries by suggesting that a radio signal of 150,000 meters which he had picked up might have come from some Martian armed with a mammoth sending set.

Would Shoot a Rocket Up.

But it was left to Prof. Robert H. Goddard of Clark College in Worcester, Mass., to suggest making an investigation of the moon by means of a multiple charge, high efficiency rocket, capable of carrying cameras or other recording apparatus needed to explore the unknown regions of the upper air. As the claim was made that a rocket could be constructed of unlimited cruising power, it has been suggested that it might be shot up to Mars instead of the moon, which many scientists affirm is uninhabited. One or two daring individuals even have volunteered to be shot up in place of a camera.

The possibility that some folk might be wandering up and down the valleys of Mars has excited the curiosity of astronomers and laymen throughout all the ages, for Mars is the nearest planet to the earth and the easiest to observe.

Imaginative writers took their readers on trips to the moon and laid the scenes of their stories in the surroundings of Mars, Saturn and other planets, but there was little scientific knowledge to furnish a basis for such fiction.

Mars Melieved to Be Inhabited.

The perfecting of the high-powered telescope and the adaptation of photography to the uses af the astronomers quickened their interest in the possibility of life on another world. Mars, which was seen to have large areas of a bluish green and other areas of an ochre red, with patches of white at the poles, was believed by many astronomers to be capable of supporting life in some form.

Schiaparelli, an Italian astronomerr, announced in 1871 that he had found the surface of the planet scarred by many lines which were perfectly straight and seemed to have some system like vast engineering works. He called the lines canals and said he believed they had been constructed and were not simply cracks in the surface of the planet.

Prof. Percival Lowell erected an observatory in Flagstaff, Ariz., many years ago and commenced a systematic observation of Mars. More than 10 years ago he startled the world by expressing his belief that Mars was inhabited by intelligent organisms living in a civilization much farther advanced than ours.

The canals, he said, were really big ditches bringing water from the poles to irrigate the rest of the planet. The ochre red areas on the surface of Mars, he asserted, were deserts or fallow fields which became bluish green as the water flowed along the canals in the seasons.

Later, he said that he had watched the bluish green area, denoting land springing to life with the coming of the water, spread down the northern hemisphere along the borders of the canals to beyond the equator of the planet and then gradually turn reddish brown with the waning of the season. The water, he claimed, was from ice melting on the polar caps of the planet.

Other Scientists Differ.

Other scientists took the opposite point of view. Some said the canals were only cracks in the surface of the planet filled with sand, impregnated with salts of various kinds, which became dark or light to the observer according to its moisture content. The temperature on Mars, they said, was too cold to support life of any kind.

Lowell retorted that his observations showed that the average temperature of Mars is 48 degrees Fahrenheit. The regularity of the canals,

Dr. W. O. Coffee

Here Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 11th and 12th, in His Permanent Offices in the Odd Fellows' Bldg. Let Him Treat You Once Free.

Dr. W. O. Coffee, the noted specialist, will be in St. Louis in his permanent offices in the Odd Fellows' Bldg., 816 Olive st., Tuesday and Wednesday of each week from now on. He has leased these offices for a year for his own use. Room 409. Dr. Coffee is here to demonstrate his new nonsurgical method of treating ear, nose and throat diseases. He originated this treatment 27 years ago when he became quite deaf, suffered with head noises from catarrh, was pronounced incurable. He founded the treatment that restored his hearing perfectly, relieved the head noises and completely cured the catarrh, and he has treated over 40,000 cases of catarrh and ear trouble since that time; has written and published several pamphlets on his special method. He says at least 50 per cent of the cases of deafness and head noises and ulcers of the ears and especially those that are caused from chronic catarrhal conditions can be benefited or completely relieved; many cases, especially of head noises, get quick relief. He says where the hearing is quite bad in one ear and just getting started in the other that grows better and worse with each cold can usually be benefited or greatly relieved. He says catarrh is a constitutional condition, has to be treated through the system as well as the nose and head, and every case is curable. He says it often causes rheumatism, neuritis, headaches, stomach and nerve trouble, makes you take cold easily. He says most cases of enlarged tonsils and enlarged tubinated bones can be relieved without an operation. He has a special method of removing adenoids and polypus tumors that he does in a few minutes without chloroform. Let him explain his new method of treatment. He invites everyone wearing glasses that are not suited or needing glasses properly fitted or advice about wearing glasses for weak eyes to see him; eyes tested free now. J. C. Patterson, Elmer, Mo., 85 years old suffered with catarrh, deafness and head noises, was completely relieved by Dr. Coffee's treatment. Alexander Glenn was 70 years old, suffered 35 years with catarrh, also deaf three years, sufered with terrible head noises; completely relieved. It may be just what you need to help you. Dr. Coffee is absolutely reliable, financially and professionally, has treated over 1000 cases in and around St. Louis. Examination free. He will be in his permanent offices in the Odd Fellows' Building every Tuesday and Wednesday, two days a week. His son, W. E. Coffee, who does the fitting glasses and testing eyes, will be in the office every day. Dr. Coffee is treating 50 patients a day here and very successfully. He will examine and treat any new case of ear, nose and throat disease one time free, to show how his treatment acts, during October. Room 409. Take elevator to fourth floor. Hours from 9 to 5 or phone for engagement. Phone Olive 8413.

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts at first sign of Bladder irritation or Backache.

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach; or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

their even spacing, the accuracy with which they made a great circle such as navigators employ on a curved surface thousands of miles in extent; the manner in which some of the canals were paralleled at certain points and the regularity of the spots at the intersections of canals all testified, he asserted, to the artificial nature of the canals and justified a belief that they were made by sentient organisms of high intelligence.

More than 500 canals and oases, as Lowell claimed the spots to be, have been mapped out and their names are so well known that Harvard observatory announced last April that snow had been observed falling at Isidis in the district of Syrtis Major, Mars. It was held by some that the canals had been developed to signal the earth, which must appear to the Martians as of immense size, being nine times bigger than Mars.

Try to Wireless Mars.

With the development of wireless telegraphy several attempts have been able to get into communication with Mars with high-powered apparatus. Sig. Marconi gave encouragement to that field of research recently when he announced that in the course of experimenting he had picked up a signal with a wave length of 150,000 meters, about six times as long as any commercial apparatus in use today. Marconi said the letter V had been repeated several times in international code. He suggested that possibly the inhabitants of Mars were trying to get into communication with the earth.

Two engineers of Omaha devoted two weeks recently to listening for signals from Mars. They kept their apparatues tuned to catch such a message as Marconi described, but they heard nothing.

Controversy has run high over the bold proposal of Messrs. B. McAfee and Todd. A mine shaft in the Chilean Andes, which will point directly at Mars in 1924, will provide the barrel of their telescope, they announced, and a big pan of mercury revolving at high speed at the bottom will provide the mirror. The two Americans calculate that the surface of Mars will be magnified at least 25,000,000 times, bringing it within a few miles of their cameras.

The Mine-Shaft Telescope.

The mine shaft will be widened to 50 feet in diameter and sheathed. The pool of mercury at the bottom will be revolved at such high speed that it will assume a concave shape and become a mirror. The depth of the fortunately placed shaft is so great that there will be sufficient luminosity, the two scientists said, to enable them to take snapshots instead of time exposures.

The Goddard proposal for aerial investigation also includes use of cameras. To summarize his principle, the determining factor of the eficienecy of a rocket in the velocity of the ejection of gases due to the explosion of propelling material. By increasing this velocity, through increasing the proportion of the propelling material to weight of projectile and through a greatly improved nozzle-shaped passage for the escape of gases, Prof. Goddard claims to have raised the efficiency of the rocket by nearly 64 per cent.

Many investigators are convinced that life exists on Mars and expect to prove it with the novel telescope. What they will find on their photographic plates is the object of speculation by scientific men the world over.

Lowell has said that Mars is level and uninteresting with no mountains and only a few dried-up beds of shallow seas to diversify its topography. More than one-half of it is desert land and the rest is only green when the canals are bringing water from the polar ice caps. Dust storms which blot out hundreds of square miles of the planet's surface from the view of scientific observers sweep over its equatorial section.

DANDERINE GROWS LONG, THICK HAIR

35-cent Bottle Stops Hair Falling Out—Ends Dandruff

Ten minutes after using Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp. Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them, helping the hair to grow long, strong and luxuriant. One application of Danderine makes thin, lifeless, colorless hair look youthfully bright, lustrous and just twice as abundant.

SULPHUR IS BEST TO CLEAR UP UGLY, BROKEN-OUT SKIN

Any breaking out or skin irritation on face, neck or body is overcome quickest by applying Mentho-Sulphur, says a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ-destroying properties, nothing has ever been found to take the place of this sulpher preparation that instantly brings ease from the itching, burning and irritation.

Mentho-Sulphur heals eczema right up, leaving the skin clear and smooth. It seldom fails to relieve the torment or disfigurement. A little jar of Mentho-Sulphur may be obtained at any drug store. It is used liko cold cream.

Read What A Tone-Test Is

The artist stands next to the New Edison.

The artist plays or sings. In the midst of the selection, he suddenly stops. The New Edison takes up his performance, and continues it alone.

Over 5,000 such comparison-tests have been given in the United States and Canada. More than fifty famous vocalists and instrumentalists have made them. More than four million music-lovers have heard them.

And, no one has ever been able to tell the difference between the RE-CREATED music and the original music.

Consider the famous Edison Tone-Test! It has piled triumph upon triumph for the New Edison and made it the most talked of subject in music circles. But the real value of the Edison Tone-Test is its practical service to you.

It proves beyond question that—the New Edison, and the New Edison alone, can bring to your home great music, exactly as it is sung or played by great artists.

Quicker Route Into Oil Field of MacKenzie River Basin Found by Surveyor

Government Investigator Says Month Can Be Saved by Trip Through Portage From Fort St. John to Nelson River.

BY CHESTER A. BLOOM,
Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

FORT SIMPSON, N. W. T., Saturday, Aug. 13.—Declaring that the route into the Mackenzie River basin above Great Slave Lake via the portage from Fort St. John to the Nelson River is perfectly feasible, and in fact, easy to make, A. M. Naraway, controller of topographical surveys for the Department of the Interior, Dominion Government, arrived at this post today, having made the entire trip since July 14. Much of this time was spent in surveying different routes and Mr. Naraway says if he had come straight through he would have made it in much less time.

The great advantage of this route is in saving time early in the spring. The Liard River, which is the terminus of the route, goes out, that is, the ice breaks up and runs out, some six weeks before the ice goes out of Great Slave Lake. The Liard, which empties into the Mackenzie at Fort Simpson, about 352 miles above Fort Norman, is free of ice even about two weeks before the lower Mackenzie goes out—in fact, it is the going out of the ice in the Liard that causes the break up in the lower Mackenzie. In any event, parties coming in by this route, says Mr. Naraway, would be at least a month ahead of those coming via the Great Slave Lake route.

Met With Misfortune.

One party tried to get into Fort Norman this spring by this route, but met misfortune when they got on a wrong creek. This was the party headed by J. E. Haight of Edmonton and including Fred Hasler, James Freman and Tom Kirkpatrick. They left Edmonton March 27, Fort St. John on April 4 and did not get over into the Nelson River basin, which leads into the Liard, until May 4, arriving at Norman on June 12.

The route in question begins at Spirit River, crosses over to Pouce Coupe, strikes straight north to the Peace river through well settled up territory with fair roads until the valley of the Peace is struck, and then follows up the Peace River to Fort St. John in the Peace River block in B C. This is, of course, a winter route, for freighting by means of teams and sleighs, the idea being to get freight overland by this method down to the Nelson River basin before the spring break up.

14 Days on Portage.

Mr. Naraway left Spirit River on July 14, and spent just 14 days going across the portage to the Nelson River, four days of which were spent looking over different routes. From Fort St. John the trail runs north, curving slightly west till it hits Nig Cleek, a tributary of the North Pine River. The present trail crosses Nig Creek at this point and continues on straight north to the North Pine river, but an easier way, says Mr. Naraway, can be found by following up Nig Creek for some 10 miles and then cutting over north to the North Pine River. The trail then follows up the North Pine River to a series of high hills comprising the height of land in this area, and crosses over these hills. From the hills a view can be had of a vast expanse of country, to the Rocky Mountains on the west.

The Controller of Surveys says, however, that it is not necessary to have the trail run over the hills, which are hogback ridges, but that an easier grade can be found down between them, a kind of pass leading down into the basin of the Sikanni Chief River, which is a tributary of the Nelson River. Once on the Sikanni Chief, water transportation by means of scows becomes feasible for the rest of the way. From the pass through the hills down to the Sikanni Chief River there are three possible routes, he says.

Most Westerly Route.

One, the most westerly, strikes north till it hits the Sikanni Chief River just below a big canyon. The second or more central one runs due north and strikes the Sikanni some 15 or 20 miles east of the canyon, and the third or easterly one strikes the Sikanni Chief River about equidistant between the central one and the mouth of Conroy Creek.

It was here that the Haight party got into difficulties, choosing to strike over to Conroy Creek and follow that creek down to the Sikanni Chief River. Conroy Creek is very shallow over most of its entire length, wtih numerous wide riffles and sandbars and the Haight party had a heart-breaking time building scows and having to abandon them on riffles and sandbars. Naraway examined this part of the route and said it is entirely impossible for water transportation.

Uu to the time of striking the Sikanni Chief River Naraway says that the route described is entirely feasible for a sleigh road for teams. At the present time, pack horses can be

Real Fruit Flavors in Glass Bottles

Jiffy-Jell is the real fruit dessert. It is the only dessert with the real fruit flavors in liquid form, in glass.

We crush the fruit, condense the juice and seal it in a bottle. A vial of this real fruit essence comes in every package.

The flavor is abundant. We use, for instance, half a pineapple to make the flavor for one Jiffy-Jell dessert.

So Jiffy-Jell is rich in fruit, as fresh and fragrant as though just picked. Simply add boiling water, then the fruit juice from the bottle, and let cool.

BLACKHEADS GO QUICK BY THIS SIMPLE METHOD

Blackheads—big ones or little ones—soft ones or hard ones—on any part of the body, go quick by a simple method that just dissolves them. To do this get about two ounces of calonite powder from your druggist—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet sponge—rub over the blackheads briskly for a few seconds—and wash off. You'll wonder where the blackheads have gone. The calonite powder and the hot water have just dissolved them. Pinching and squeezing blackheads only open the pores of the skin and leave them open and unsightly—and unless the blackheads are big and soft they will not come out, while the simple application of calonite powder and water dissolve them right out, leaving the skin soft and the pores in their natural condition. You can get calonite powder at any drug store and if you are troubled with these unsightly blemishes you should certainly try this simple method.

QUICKER ROUTE INTO MACKENZIE RIVER COUNTRY IS FOUND

used. Indeed, he brought his own supplies over to the Sikanni Chief River by pack horse. The timber is not heavy and there is only the ordinary brush to swamp out for a roadway when the country is covered with snow.

Navigable River.

The Sikanni Chief River itself is a good stream, averaging 150 yards in width, said Naraway, and with a minimum depth of four feet, which be ascertained by taking numerous soundings. Indeed, he found the water in this river above Fontas River, which is supposed to be the present head of navigation, even better than below it and this, it must be remembered, was at a time of year when the rivers and streams are reaching their lowest mark. From the junction of the Fontas River with the Sikanni Chief River, is formed the Nelson River, which in turn flows into the Liard, forming the water route into the lower Mackenzie River, which avoids the perils and delays of the Great Slave Lake passage.

Naraway said emphatically that in his opinion it should not take more than seven days to bring pack horses across the present trail over this route from Fort St. John to the Nelson River, and he figures the distance of the portage at about 150 miles in round numbers. He came down the Sikanni Chief, Nelson and Liard rivers in a canvas folding canoe, and was four days coming down the Nelson in this manner to the Liard.

Naraway is now busy preparing his notes and maps on the trip and they will be available for use by next fall from the Department of the Interior.

Awaiting only the arrival of crown block timbers and crown pulleys for the lofty derrick towering above the northwest corner of Bear Island, drillers for this company have all in readiness for the drilling of the Imperial Oil's second well in the Mackenzie River Arctic oil fields. This necessary machinery is expected to arrive in a day or two aboard the Hudson Bay Company gasoline vessel "H. B. No. 3," Capt. Haight, out of Fort Smith. The vessel was reported passing Fort Simpson down river last Sunday morning and should be here by Wednesday.

Superintendent E. W. Harris of the drilling camps is meanwhile pushing construction work vigorously at two other camps and it is expected that at least two or possibly three wells will be drilling in a short time. The Bear Island derrick, like the other new ones, is a standard rig, 82 feet high, standing out like a lighthouse on the end of this island less than 100 miles under the Arctic Circle. Engine room and boiler house for the derrick are complete, machinery all installed, and the drills ready for stringing on the huge cables. These outfits are capable of drilling more than 4000 feet deep and will thoroughly test all the oil possibilities of this region.

Granite Struck at 1300 Feet.

The Alberta Arctic Transportation Co. steamer, "Distributor," arriving on her third trip of the season, brought a report from Hay River that the drillers at the Imperial Oil Co. location at Windy Point on Great Slave Lake have drilled the well to bedrock and gotten a dry hole. According to this information, which is only gossip and not official, the drillers went down 1300 feet and finally struck the granite. Such a contingency, however, is not nuexpected, as this location was never a favorite with the company's present geological staff. It is possible that this rig may be moved; if the foregoing report is true, to a location at Pine Point on Great Slave Lake, where the geological indications are said to be much more favorable.

At any rate, Superintendent Harris and his men are losing no time in pushing the campaign for a thorough testing of the district between Fort Norman post and the locaton of Discovery well, 53 miles below. Work has commenced on the second new derrick at C Camp location, which is situated on the west bank of the Mackenzie River, across from Bear Island and almost due opposite the Discovery well on the opposite bank of the river. At the rate the rig builders are going, this derrick should be completed also within a week.

Winter Quarters Ready.

Bunkhouses, a cook and dining hall have been constructed also at the Bluefish creek camp location, which is just 10 miles south of Fort Norman post on the east bank of the Mackenzie River, the same side of the river as Discovery well, which is 53 miles below Fort Norman. The Northern Trading Co. gas boat "The Pioneer" landed a boiler, derrick timbers and other machinery, together with a crew of rig builders, at this location last Saturday evening, and no time will be lost in getting this outfit into operation. As the company's plans include keeping a force of men at these various locations all winter, it will not be necessary for them to cease operations in time to get the last boat for the outside, which will be about mid-September. Hence, there is every prospect that all three of these wells will be put down to the oil horizon before winter sets in.

Discovery Well Cleaned Out.

The Discovery well has not been drilled any deeper as yet. The drillers went down to the original depth of 783 feet, going through some 25 feet of dirt and carvings which had accumulated in the bottom of the well since it was capped off last winter. Oil is being drawn out of the well by means of the baler and it flows occasionally into the 4500-gallon tanks with which it is connected.

The Northern Trading Co. vessel, "Pioneer," is equipped with oil-burning engines which use this crude oil direct from the well, and she had her tanks filled with it when she sailed Saturday afternoon for the South. For the reason that it is desired to use the oil that the well is now producing for fuel and transportation purposes, it is unlikely that anything will be done in the way of drilling it deeper this season, as that would entail temporary shutting off of the supply now available.

One feature of the well's production is that the gasoline distilled from this oil was used last Saturday in a long flight made by one of the company's all-metal airplanes, the "Vic" machine. The machine made a nonstop flight from the Bear Island camp to Fort Simpson, about 350 miles, following the river course, in precisely three hours and a half, or at the rate of 100 miles an hour, the engine working perfectly on the gas produced from the well.

BOOTH-TUCKER TELLS OF INDIA'S PROBLEMS

Salvation Army Officer Says British Government Is Only Hope of Downtrodden There.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—"God permits England to continue to rule India because British government there is the only hope of the underdog," Commissioner Booth-Tucker, former head of Salvation Army work in India, at the Hotel Algonquin, declares. Commissioner Booth-Tucker and his wife are on a two months' tour of the United States, having arrived from England on the Adriatic.

"I hold no brief for the Government there by reason of any prejudice in its favor, for I was cast in prison by British authorities for holding open-air religious meetings when I first reached India with four companions 40 years ago in Salvation Army work. I stayed in prison a month. We obtained the right to hold such meetings as a result of the fight my companions and I put up.

"If it were not for fear of the British Government and the power it exerts for internal peace, it is my honest opinion that hundreds of thousands of Hindus would be massacred by the fighting Mohammedans in the present state of unrest in India. The Hindus are not fighters."

More Than 1,000,000 Criminals.

Before entering the Salvation Army Commissioner Booth-Tucker was assistant Government commissioner in the Punjab for five years and is familiar with the work of the Government from that experience. Mrs. Booth-Tucker's father was Governor of Bombay for 40 years.

For nine years after he had begun the work in India Commissioner Booth-Tucker was in charge of Salvation Army work in this country, with headquarters in New York. Mrs. Booth-Tucker is on her first visit to this country.

Says Gandhi Will Fail.

Gandhi will ultimately fail in his self-appointed mission to drive the British out of India, in the Commissioner's opinion, but he may accomplish a certain amount of good in the process.

"I am sure the British Government would be highly pleased to see the drug and liquor traffic broken up in India," he said in commenting on press reports that Gandhi had instituted a system of picketing saloons and opium dens as a means of depriving the British Government of revenue. Mrs. Booth-Tucker said the liquor and drug evils in India were less than in any country she had visited, "excepting, of course, the United States," she added.

Gandhi's policy of passive resistance, civil disobedience or noncooperation, as it has been variously designated, is not as thoroughly successful as is generally believed, according to the Commissioner.

"By your fruit ye shall know this," he said. "The fruits of Gandhiism so far have been largely riots. Although he counsels his followers against violence, he is unable to control them, and any collapse of the British Government in India now would mean immense loss of life among the natives from strife among themselves.

"India is in reality another Europe, with many races, religions and social strata, with national hatreds and aspirations, and only the restraining force of British authority prevents the utmost oppression of the lower castes by the higher.

"The cast system has been overly anathemized. It is nothing but a highly organized and perfected system of trade unionism based on hereditary principles. It is the inalienable right of any child to belong to the trade union to which his father and mother belonged. It is the moral duty of every parent to teach his own trade and thus equip him to make a living. That is the Hindu idea of education. Through intermarriage with members of their own caste, Indian workmen keep the secrets of their trades."

The Salvation Army has seen much of Ghandi since his rise to popularity, because the work of the army lies among the same people to whom Gandhi is making his appeal, the 65,000,000 people of lowest caste. The Indian leader is a Hindu in religion, was formerly a barrister, and is a member of one of the higher castes—"a clever man," Commissioner Booth-Tucker described him.

Unrest in India is confined to the cities, he said. Out of the total population of 320,000,000, only 30,000,000 live in the cities, and it is among these that Gandhiism has spread. The rural Hindus are contented and are the most completely self-governing people in the British Empire under the laissez-faire policy the Government has adopted there.

Commissioner Booth-Tucker described the rural form of government as the perfect soviet. A village is organized as a combination of caste communities. At the head of the entire village is a Mayor and a committee of five. The workers in each trade live to themselves, and each community has its own Mayor and committee of five. In many districts, of which India has 200 under the British administration, there will be only one British official, and often none, as the work has been turned over to native magistrates wherever possible.

Among other trades in India, the Commissioner said, is that of crime. More than 1,000,000 persons are criminals by profession, descended from long generations of criminal forebears. The Salvation Army has attempted to convert these people to lives of industry and now has a colony of 1800 which lives as an agricultural community. They are difficult to convert, however, the Commissioner said. They often say, when appealed to by the army:

"Look! How can I work? My fingers are delicate for stealing. I cannot plow."

There are now 5,000,000 Christians in India, although many of them are secret about their religion, he said. They are forced to secrecy to avoid the boycott which would follow if their conversion became known to their fellows.

ALKALI IN SHAMPOOS BAD FOR WASHING HAIR

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get Mulsified at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.

The Best Cough Syrup is Home-made

Here's an easy way to save $2, and yet have the best cough remedy you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? Thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will soon earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. Or, if desired, use clarified molasses, honey or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you a full pint of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

"Gets-It" Ends All Corns

Just As Good For Calluses. Money Back If It Fails.

Thirty seconds after you touch the corn with this liquid corn remover the jabbing, stabbing pain of it stops, for all time.

Simple as A, B, C.

No corn, hard or soft, is too old or too deeply rooted to resist "Gets-It." Immediately it dries and shrivels, the edges loosen from the true flesh and soon you can peel it right off with your fingers as painlessly as you trim your nails.

Don't coddle corn pests. Don't nurse and pamper them. Don't cut and trim them. REMOVE them with "GETS-IT." Costs a trifle at any drug store. Mfd. by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago.

It Is Here Today

See It—Ride in It

Think of a light, economical, moderate-priced car that does these things.

That is so fleet and smooth in its response to your will you are never conscious that it is a piece of machinery.

That is so easily operated you can guide it for hours through crowded city traffic or send it across country for a whole day's run without the usual fatigue to driver or passenger.

That is so reliable that attention with an oil can virtually constitutes its sole service requirement.

Such was the aim and such is the achievement—

the New and Improved ESSEX

Get a New and Joyous Thrill in Motoring

Old Essex drivers sense the difference as soon as they take the wheel.

Its speed and acceleration and endurance are known to them. Others may not be so familiar with these Essex qualities. Their surprise and delight will be all the greater.

But old owners who know the Essex will be charmed at the smoother way the New Improved Essex does the things that gives them pride in their cars.

More Economy Than Ever

From the first Essex appealed to men because it does what costlier and larger cars do and at small car cost in fuel, oil and tires.

The New Improved Essex adds gasoline mileage. Oil economy is greater, although old Essex cars averaged around 300 miles to the quart. Its tires often gave 10,000 to 15,000 miles of service. Now cord tires are standard equipment and greatly increase tire mileage.

Old Essex owners hardly understand how reliability could be increased. Many—hundreds in fact—report upwards of 30,000 and 40,000 miles of service, with incredibly small repair bills as judged by the usual requirements of motor car operation.

But the new improved Essex lengthens the period of that service. Simple and inexpensive ways to replace parts as they wear are provided. Thus the tight, squeak-free and rattle-free qualities and lively performance of the Essex when new, may be retained throughout the life of the car. And how long an Essex may be relied upon to serve, needs more years for proof than opportunity has yet provided.

A Better Car for Less Money

All the advantages of the original Essex are retained. The pride of ownership is greater. You can turn it in narrow streets. It finds room in small parking spaces. It is small and light and yet commodious, safe and comfortable.

The New Improved Essex expresses the new day meaning of refinement—of reduced weight—freedom from unnecessary bulk, and the finest mark of motoring luxury.

When Essex is considered, size and price do not mark the standard of car quality or value.

We want you to know that—a ride will prove it.

True Comfort Awaits You

Here, in the good-looking Cantilever Shoe, a delightful comfort awaits every woman's foot.

The cantilever arch is flexible not stiff as in ordinary shoes. This flexibility of the shank has great values:

The foot arch is gently and comfortably supported whether walk or stand, thereby re-ing fatigue.

The muscles and ligaments, ich nature has placed in the t to hold up the small bones t form the arch, are permitted movement. Exercise engthens them and prevents or rects weak or fallen arches.

Cantilever Shoes come in the lking heels, medium toe and p, which are in such good today. There are lower s and wider toes for those prefer them. Popular leath- kidskin or calf, either brown black, add to the desirability these shoes.

t above all is the wonderful ntilever comfort, which makes lking so much easier, takes the fatigue out of work, es patience in standing, and ch protects your general lth by keeping the feet in condition.

FINE INDIAN SUBJECTS IN MUSEUM EXHIBIT

Collection Includes St. Louisan's Composition, "The Ceremony of the Rabbit Hunt."

The annual exhibition of American paintings, which is on view at the City Art Museum, includes a comprehensive showing by the leading figure painters of the country. Among the numerous figure subjects contained in the collection, none strike a more original or distinctly American note than those contributed by artists who work in the primeval, old-world atmosphere of Taos, New Mexico. Paintings by O. E. Berninghaus, Ernest L. Blumenschein, E. Irving Couse and Walter Ufer represent in the present exhibition the work of this group of painters which has elected to preserve in art the aspects, manners and customs of the American Indian.

O. E. Berninghaus, well-known St. Louisan, who paints at Taos during the summer, shows a composition full of spirited action, called "The Ceremony of the Rabbit Hunt." It represents one of the vivid, colorful Indian ceremonials of the chase which are being forgotten in the march of progress. A band of mounted Indians, galloping over the mesa, is encircling the quarry, which finds scant shelter in the meager sage brush. The subjejct is one which has allowed Berninghaus to display to full advantage his knowledge of the anatomy of horses.

Spiritual Note in Painting.

The painting by Walter Ufer is equally impressive in its fidelity to nature, but this realism does not deprive it of a deep spiritual significance, the key to which is furnished by the title, "Hunger." The picture shows the heads and shoulders of three Indian converts as they bow in attitudes of humility before a grotesque crucifix which hangs upon a rough, bare, adobe wall. The obvious inference is that the supplicants are praying for relief from famine, but beyond this superficial meaning the artist has indicated in the crudely fashioned religious symbols and the abject faith which they have inspired a feeling of spiritual poverty and hunger which is the real theme of the picture.

The contribution of Ernest L. Blumenschein, a vividly colorful composition, entitled "October," lacks both the stark, bald realism and the spiritual significance of Ufer's canvas. It seeks, instead, to justify by a boldly contrasting color scheme and a decorative, imaginative treatment. The solitary figure of an Indian girl occupies the foreground, her dark blue robe in sharp relief against the brilliant yellow, orange and green tones of the foliage background. The artist has not concerned himself with the actualities of the scene before him, but has created, by charming color harmonies and contrasts and imaginative drawing, a fariylike land of unreality peopled by a race of aborigines. The lone figure in the foreground is emphasized with a richness and depth of color that recalls certain of the compositions of the Spaniard Zuloaga.

The canvas by E. Irving Couse, entitled "Mysteries of the Stream," presents the Indian in a philosophic role. The painting depicts an Indian man and boy gazing in rapt contemplation at the surface of a small mountain stream as though mystified by the phenomenon of the sparkling water. The landscape background of rocks and mountainside is rendered in vibrant, but subdued tones of pinks and greens.

Other Notable Figure Subjects.

Aside from these contributions by the Taos colony, there are many other notable figure subjects in this year's collection. Childe Hassam shows a canvas of heroic proportions called "April," which, though possessing the rich, vibrant color characteristic of his work, has been criticised as lacking in drawing. Jerome Myers, whose group compositions have an individual air, is represented this year by "The Open Air Service," a picture of a religious meeting in a public park. In its vivid and relentless characterization, verging upon caricature, and its insistence upon small by-play, it calls to mind the work of Hogarth. "Field Marshal Earl Haig," by John C. Johansen, though from its title ostensibly a portrait of the English General, is in reality a study of the interior of a stately London house, the high ceilings and huge gray panels of which dwarf the small figure.

An interior by Lilian W. Hale, entitled "Nancy and the Map of Europe," is marked by soft, tapestry like tones, variegated by the subdued colors of a large map which occupies most of the background. George Luks shows a figure composition in characteristic vein, called "The New Year's Shooter." Like all Luks' work it exhibits breadth of treatment, combined with a superficial carelessness of execution which rather accents than impairs the vigorous characterization. Studies of figures by Edward Dufner, David Ericson, Robert Henri, Leopold Seyffert and Lillian Genth, show an interesting variety of treatments.

The collection is scheduled to remain on view at the Museum until Oct. 25.

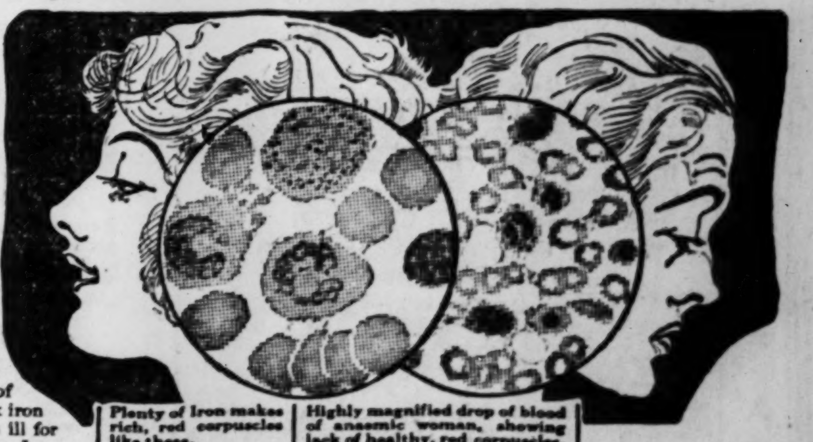
What Kind of Blood Have You?

Thin, Pale and Watery—Keeping You Weak, Nervous and Run-Down—or Rich, Red, Healthy Blood With Plenty of Iron in It to Give You Strength, Energy, Power and Endurance

Physicians Say Iron Is Red Blood Food



Plenty of Iron makes rich, red corpuscles like these. | Highly magnified drop of blood of anaemic woman, showing lack of healthy, red corpuscles.

How Nuxated Iron—Master Strength-Builder of The Blood—Helps Give Renewed Strength and Energy to Men and Puts Roses Into The Cheeks of Women.

If you tire easily, if you look pale, haggard and worn, if you feel generally weak, nervous and run-down it would probably astonish you to look at a drop of your own blood under a powerful microscope and compare it with a drop of pure, healthy blood—rich in iron. Actual blood tests show that a tremendously large number of people who are weak and ill lack iron in their blood and that they are ill for no other reason than lack of iron. Iron deficiency paralyses healthy, energetic action, pulls down the whole organism and weakens the entire system.

There are thousands whose bodies are ageing and breaking down at a time when they should be enjoying that perfect bodily health which cries defiance to disease simply because they are not awake to the condition of their blood. By allowing it to remain thin, pale and watery they are not giving the natural life forces of the body a chance to do their work. Yet others go through life apparently possessing, year after year, the elasticity, the strength and the energy of earlier days. Through their bodies courses the energy and power that comes from plenty of red blood—filled with strength-giving iron. Iron is red blood food and organic iron—Nuxated Iron helps to build up the red blood corpuscles and give increased power and endurance.

For want of iron you may practically be an old woman at from 30 to 35, weak, downhearted and "all fagged out." You may be in such a highly nervous irritable state that you "go all to pieces" on the slightest provocation, while at 50 or 60 with good health and plenty of iron in your blood, you may still be young in feeling and so attractive and full of life as to defy detection of your real age.

It's not always the youngest woman that is most sought after—there is an indescribably alluring fascination in the rosy cheek, the inviting lips and sparkling eyes of a woman whose blood is filled with iron. You may be afflicted with iron starvation of the blood and not know it, just as thousands of other women are.

It is said that about one person in three in America today suffers more or less from malnutrition—lack of nourishment, which is caused not by lack of food, but in many cases, by lack of sufficient iron in the blood to enable you to get the strength and nourishment out of your food. Indoor life, over-eating and modern methods of cookery are sapping the iron from the blood of hundreds of thousands of women.

To make up for the great loss of iron caused by the life men and women of today are compelled to lead they should eat more such iron-containing vegetables and fruits as spinach and baked apples and take organic iron like Nuxated Iron from time to time to help enrich their blood and revitalize their wornout, exhausted nerves.

Nuxated Iron represents organic iron in such a highly condensed form that one dose of it is estimated to be approximately equivalent (in organic iron content) to eating half a quart of spinach, one quart of green vegetables or half a dozen apples. It's like taking extract of beef instead of eating pounds of meat.

Over 4,000,000 people annually are using Nuxated Iron. It will not injure the teeth nor disturb the stomach. It often increases the bodily and mental vigor, strength and endurance of weak, nervous, "run-down" folks in two weeks' time. Your money will be refunded by the manufacturers if you do not obtain satisfactory results. Beware of substitutes. Nuxated Iron comes in tablets only—never in liquid form. Always look for the word "Nuxated" on every package and the letters N. I. on every tablet. Sold by all druggists.

NUXATED IRON ENRICHES THE BLOOD—GIVES YOU NEW STRENGTH AND ENERGY

SAILOR, "BROKE," FINDS HE IS HEIR TO $7,600,000

DUNKIRK, France.—Lancolle Puech, for 20 years a sailor, recently was discharged at Ghent and came to Dunkirk in order to ship again. He had been two weeks ashore and having spent his money like the proverbial sailor, was "broke" when he called at the shipping agents.

"We have been looking for you for four years," said the clerk, after scanning the sailor's papers. Puech looked uneasy as he followed a gendarme to the office of a notary public.

"Your uncle, Sicard, who left for Argentina, 30 years ago, died in 1917. He leaves you 38,000,000 francs," the notary told Puech. (In normal times this would be $7,600,000.)

Puech says he is going to buy a ship of his own.

VICE INQUIRY IN BIRMINGHAM

Eighty Witnesses Summoned for Grand Jury Investigation.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—Nearly 80 witnesses have been summoned before the Jefferson County grand jury for its vice investigation, beginning Oct. 12.

Charges have been made by candidates in the municipal election campaign, members of the League of Women Voters and others. Twenty-five or more additional witnesses are to be summoned, according to County Solicitor Joseph R. Tate, who declares that the investigation will be complete.

Urges Planting of Strawberries.

CARLISLE, Ark.—A movement to plant at least 500 acres in strawberries in Lonoke County by next spring has been instituted by C. T. Button, County Agent. Button, in urging the planting of strawberries, stated that the 1921 strawberry crop in White County sold for more money than the rice and cotton crop of Lonoke County combined. He cited the case of Wade High of Cabot, who made a net profit of $423.80 on one acre of strawberries last year.

"California Syrup of Figs"

Delicious Laxative for Child's Liver and Bowels

Hurry mother! A teaspoonful of "California" Syrup of Figs today may prevent a sick child tomorrow. If your child is constipated, bilious, feverish, fretful, has cold, colic, or if stomach is sour, tongue coated, breath bad, remember a good "physic-laxative" is often all that is necessary.

Children love the "fruity" taste of genuine "California" Syrup of Figs which has directions for babies and children printed on the bottle. Say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup. Beware!

Five Children Have Appendicitis

Entire Family is Stricken With Appendicitis

James Mullen, a Minnesota farmer, according to reports published in a local newspaper, has had five members of his family operated upon for appendicitis within the past year. His wife's father died of appendicitis.

A Treacherous Disease.

Appendicitis attacks at any moment even persons seemingly in good health. Usually, however, it is preceded by so-called stomach trouble, constipation or similar disturbances. Often when there is a warning feeling of uneasiness in the abdomen, appendicitis can be guarded against in exactly the same manner in which one guards against the spread of throat infection, because that is just what appendicitis is—an infection in the intestines spreading to the appendix. When one has sore throat, one can often prevent further trouble and the development of influenza or grippe, by using an antiseptic wash or gargle to fight the germs and a laxative to carry off the poisons from the body. Just exactly the same procedure is necessary to fight the intestinal germs and guard against appendicitis. But instead of an antiseptic wash for the throat, an INTESTINAL antiseptic is necessary.

Intestinal Antiseptic.

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows:

It tends to eliminate or destroy harmful germs and colon bacilli in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It is the most complete system cleanser ever offered to the public, acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removing foul matter which poisoned the system for months and which nothing else can dislodge. It brings out all gasses, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adlerika draws from the alimentary canal—matter you never thought was in your system. Try it right after a natural movement and notice how much more foul matter it brings out which was poisoning you. In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation, sour stomach, gas on the stomach and sick headache, one spoonful Adlerika ALWAYS brings relief. A longer treatment, however, is necessary in cases of obstinate constipation and long standing stomach trouble, preferably under direction of your physician.

Reports From Physicians.

"I congratulate you on the good effect I had from Adlerika since I prescribed it." (Signed) Dr. L. Langlois.

"I have found nothing in my 50 years' practice to excel Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. James Weaver.

"I use Adlerika in all bowel cases. Some require only one dose." (Signed) Dr. F. M. Prettyman.

"After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the AWFUL IMPURITIES eliminated from my system." (Signed) J. E. Puckett.

Adlerika is a constant surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines, on account of its rapid, pleasant and COMPLETE action. It is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

Sold in St. Louis by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Johnson Bros. Drug Co. and other leading druggists.

Had Close Shave

"My wife and children thought I was dying when, after an attack of acute pains in my stomach, I became unconscious. It was right after our Sunday dinner. They say I looked like dead and guess I had a pretty close shave. I had been having more or less stomach trouble and bloating with gas for past two years and could get no permanent help. Talking with a friend about my attack, he advised me to try Mayr's Wonderful Remedy. I have not had any gas or stomach trouble since taking it eighteen months ago." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. President Commends School Week.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—A letter of gratification that Arkansas is putting on a "Public School week" has been received from President Harding by James J. Harrison, manager of the Arkansas Educational Association, here. "Every evidence of increasing interest in public education is full reassurance as to our nation's outlook in dealing with the multiplied and complex problems of these difficult times," President Harding said. "Indeed, I am increasingly convinced that there is no assurance of success save in a wider, larger understanding of our obligations."

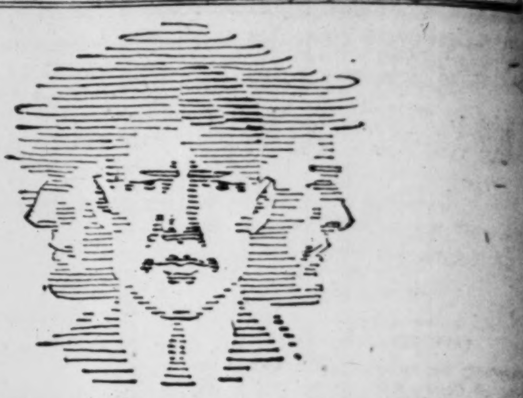
Lift Right Off with Fingers

Doesn't hurt a bit! Drop a little "Freezone" on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then shortly you lift it right off with fingers. Truly!

Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of "Freezone" for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between toes, and calluses, without soreness or irritation.



You're Bilious, Headachy, Constipated!

Clean your liver and bowels!

Sick headache, biliousness, coated tongue, or sour, gassy stomach—always trace this to torpid liver and constipation. Poisonous matter clogged in the bowels, instead of being cast out of the system is reabsorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, dizzy, sickening headache. A Cascaret to-night for your liver and bowels will straighten you out by morning.

Total	$8,265.56

Contributions to the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund in the last week amounted to only $19.39, bringing the fund to the total of $8255.56, which is still considerably short of the amount necessary to meet the expenses of the current season and allows no surplus to meet the extra obligations of the St. Louis Pure Milk Commission.

Twelve members of the B'Nai El Camp Fire Girls earned $11.41 in various ways and sent that amount to the Milk and Ice Fund through their guardian, Miss Florence Munchweiler, 5798 Kingsbury.

A show at 1404 Clara avenue netted $3.45 for the babies. Margaret Flatley and Helen Burns managed the benefit and they were assisted by the following children: Mary Frances Goodrich, Mary Lovata, Pauline Fine, Selma and Violet Rifkine and Doris Stoker.

Margaret Kinealy sent $3 to the Milk and Ice Fund several weeks ago, saying that it constituted partial returns from a benefit for the babies. No further word has been heard from her and the $3, therefore, is acknowledged.

Marian Mardorf and her sister conducted a lemonade stand at 2136 South Grand avenue last week and earned $1 for the fund. Mary Porterfield and Jocelyn Taylor managed a lemonade stand in the 5300 block of Maple avenue and cleared 53 cents by one hour's work.

Doctor at 82 Finds Mothers Prefer His Formula to New-Fangled Salts And Coal Tar Remedies for Babies

Judgment of 1892 vindicated by world's approval of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a simple vegetable compound for constipation—So safe thousands give it to babes in arms—Now has largest sale in the world.

From a recent portrait of DR. W. B. CALDWELL
Born Shelbyville, Mo., 1839

WHEN a man is in the 83rd year of his age, as I am, there are certain things he has learned that only time can teach him. The basis of treating sickness has not changed since I left Medical College in 1875, nor since I placed on the market the laxative prescription I had used in my practice, known to druggists and the public since 1892, as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Then the treatment of constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions that result from constipation was entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of my Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a combination of Egyptian Senna and other mild laxative herbs with pepsin.

Recently new medicines have been brought out for constipation that contain calomel, which is mercury, salts of various kinds, minerals, and coal tar. These are all drastic purges, many of them dangerous, and the medical profession is warning the public against them. Certain coal tar products will depress the heart; certain salts give rise to intestinal poisoning, impaction and rupture of the intestines. If grown people want to use them no one can deny them the privilege, but they should never be given to children.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you, and the better for the general health of all. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with pills and powders and strong drugs, even if disguised in candy? My remedy, too, costs less than most others, only about a cent a dose. A bottle such as you can find in any drug store, will last a family several months, and all can use it. It is good for the babe in arms because pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. In the proper dose, given in the directions, it is equally effective at all ages. Elderly people will find it especially ideal.

The formula of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is on the cover of every bottle, and the ingredients have the endorsement of the U. S. Pharmacopoeia.

$10,000 Worth of Syrup Pepsin Free

In remembrance of my 83rd birthday I have set aside the sum of Ten Thousand Dollars to be given away in half-ounce bottles of my Syrup Pepsin. Only one Free Trial bottle to a family. All are constipated now and then, and here is an opportunity for you and others to try Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin FREE OF CHARGE. Ask for your free bottle today, simply sending name and address to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 514 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. Do not postpone this.

NEW LAW EXPECTED TO REDUCE AUTO THEFTS

Requires Transfer of Certificate of Ownership When Car Is Sold After Nov. 2.

The new automobile law, passed by the special session of the Legislature, will be a decided step in stamping out the sale and handling of stolen automobiles and will be a means of preventing stealing cars, says Secretary of State Becker, who is making plans for putting the new law into effect Nov. 2.

Under the new law, each motor car owner has the benefit and protection of the State Motor Vehicle Department, through which certificates of ownership are required to be issued as an initial protection, says Secretary Becker. The registration of ownership is done for a fee of $1. Upon registration, the certificate of ownership is issued and must be referred to in all transfers of the motor car. It is estimated that $350,000 will be derived from these fees, to be turned into the State road fund.

Every automobile owner in Missouri will be required to register his car, according to Secretary Becker, giving full description of the car, its record, and its number and engine number. The law provides that after such registration, no transfer shall be made in the State without the owner or possessor showing and proving ownership rightfully, and assignment must be made along with the transfer of the certificate of ownership. A record of all transfers also will be kept by the State Motor Vehicle Department.

The sale of a motor car in the State after the new law becomes operative beginning Nov. 2, without the transfer of the registered certificate of ownership will be illegal, says Secretary Becker, and such a sale becomes an act of fraud.

Inspectors of the State Department are to be placed in various parts of the State, and the inspectors will work under the direction of Commissioner Oscar Steininger of the department. The new law authorizes the appointment of three such inspectors, but Secretary Becker already has received applications from 200 persons seeking appointment to these positions.

Secretary Becker is sending out certificates for registration of ownership. He also is sending out information to owners urging them to register their cars as soon as the law is operative. Copies of the law are being sent to many persons asking for them.

GEN. WOOD ENDS LONG ACTIVE ARMY CAREER

Retires After 36 Years to Become Governor-General of Philippine Islands.

By the Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—Major-General Leonard Wood, who retired yesterday from active service in the army to accept appointment as Governor-General of the Philippine Islands, thus terminated more than 36 years of distinguished military life. His retirement was caused by insistence of administration officials that he accept the new post and the refusal of Congress to permit him to do so while continuing his active army status.

Gen. Wood began his army career as a contract surgeon in June, 1885, immediately entering service with troops in the Apache campaign in Arizona and Northern Mexico. As commander of an infantry detachment in that campaign, he was commended "for gallant and hazardous service, courage and energy," and later was awarded the congressional Medal of Honor, the highest compliment the nation has to give, for distinguished conduct in the Apache fighting.

Served in Cuba.

When the Indians were pacified and their leader, Geronimo, taken, the surgeon dropped his fighting weapons temporarily and again turned to the practice of medicine and surgery at army headquarters in Arizona. He continued in army medical service until 1898, but when the Spanish-American War was declared in that year, he re-entered combat ranks, organized and commanded the First United States Volunteer Cavalry (Rough Riders), and later was transferred to command the Second Brigade, Cavalry Division, in the Cuban campaign, in which capacity he entered the fight at Las Guasimas and San Juan, Santiago.

When the Spanish forces surrendered, the General was appointed Military Governor of Santiago, commander of the Department of Santiago and Civil Governor of that Province and Military Governor of the Island of Cuba. He turned the government of the island over to Thomas E. Palma, first President of the Republic of Cuba, in 1902 and returned to the United States.

About a year later he was ordered to proceed to the Philippines as commander of the Department of Mindanao.

He also acted as civil Governor of the Moro Province and in other administrative work until 1908. The experienced and understanding of the natives thus gained, and later as a member of the special commission sent by the President to investigate conditions in the Philippines, undoubtedly were responsible for his selection for the new post.

Record in World War.

His record in the World War began with his assignment to select for the War Department the sites of the great majority of the training camps for National Guard and National Army troops in the Southeastern Department, which he then commanded.

Later he was assigned to Camp Funston, Kan., to organize the Eighty-ninth Division. With other divisional officers, he went on a preparatory inspection trip to France while the American army was in the making and was injured there by the bursting of a French gun.

On his return to the United States, Gen. Wood completed the training of the Eighty-ninth for battle, but got no chance to serve with it abroad, as he was relieved on the eve of embarkation, precipitating a controversy that raged in the press for months, even during Gen. Wood's campaign for the Republican nomination for the presidency.

An achievement for which Gen. Wood has been greatly praised, was the development of the "Plattsburg idea" of civilian training camps evolved as a measure of preparedness before the United States entered the World War. When the pressure of war demanded quick mobilization and training of men by the millions, the "Plattsburg idea" was expanded into the many divisional training camps of war times.

Weeks' Tribute to Wood.

Major-General Wood was declared to have done more to remedy America's unpreparedness prior to the nation's entrance into the world war than any other individual in a letter written yesterday by Secretary Weeks to the General.

Weeks said the "wise foresight" displayed by Gen. Wood in organizing the citizens' military training camps before the United States entered the war had furnished thousands of young officers for that struggle.

"I do not consider," Secretary Weeks wrote, "that it is too much to say that your efforts contributed more to remedy our unpreparedness for war than those of any other individual, and for this your country will give you credit long after the circumstances which denied you the privilege of commanding in battle the troops you trained are forgotten.

"Your retirement is well deserved, after this long term of eminent usefulness. Your career belongs to the American inspiration to high aims and energetic accomplishment. In behalf of the military service, I wish you all success and happiness."

"I want to express my own and the country's satisfaction," President Harding said, "in knowing you are to assume civil authority in the Philippines, and that retirement from your brilliant career in the army does not end your service to your country and its Government. Most cordial wishes."

Mayor Becomes Postmaster.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo.—Mayor H. H. Haas of this city resigned his office as Mayor to become Postmaster. He was recently appointed by President Harding. A successor to Mayor Haas has not been selected, but the City Commission is expected to make a selection in the near future.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Color, Gloss and Attractiveness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

HOMES FOR 50 CHILDREN ARE SOUGHT BY BOARD OF GUARDIANS

Those Placed With Suitable Families May Be Adopted Later If Desired.

Homes for 50 children are wanted by Miss Emma Puschner, agent of the Board of Children's Guardians, 237 Municipal Courts Building. Among these are a number of girls, 8, 9 and 10 years old; also several pairs of sisters and brothers. The children may be seen by applying to Miss Puschner. All applications will be investigated, and the children will be placed on trial. If, after a lapse of sufficient time it is found that the children are satisfactorily placed, they may be legally adopted. It is hoped to place all the children in homes before Christmas.

The Board of Children's Guardians is maintained by the city for the welfare of deserted and unfortunate children. The board at present is caring for 922 children, of whom 336 are being supported with their mothers who are widows and who are able to keep their children with them only because of the aid given by the board. One hundred and ninety-six children are in boarding homes, and 390 are in free foster homes.

CHURCH TEACHERS' INSTITUTE

The Rev. Robert Scott Chalmers, M. A., rector of St. Mark's Church, Toledo, O., will conduct an institute for church school teachers next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday at Christ Church Cathedral, under the auspices of the Diocesan Board of Religious Education, of which the Rev. Henry Watson Mizner is chairman. The institute will open at 5 o'clock the three afternoons with a special conference for parents and teachers, and supper will be served at 6:15 at Schuyler Memorial House, followed by sessions of the institute in the evening.

Dr. Chalmers conducts a church school every day in the week in his parish. The public schools of Toledo dismiss different grades of children every afternoon in the week, and they go to Dr. Chalmers' school and schools of other churches for religious instruction. Reservations for the St. Louis institute may be made with the Rev. Mr. Mizner, 520 Rutger street.

Hunts Boy, Missing Four Years.

Mrs. I. W. Duncan, 300 Main street, Russellville, Ark., has asked Post-Dispatch readers to aid her in finding her brother, Glen H. Fitzgerald, who left his home in Pittsburg, Kan., in January, 1917, and has not been heard of since he was rejected for army service at Jefferson Barracks. At the time of his disappearance the boy was 14 years old, 5 feet 8 inches tall and wore a blue serge suit. He has black hair and eyes. Mrs. Duncan says the boy's older brother recently was killed and his mother is especially desirous of his return. She offers a reward for information leading to his return.

Your Home May Now Be Heated with Fully Moistened Air

A gallon a day—per room—the minimum

It has long been known that properly moistened air in a heated room greatly increases comfort and health. Dry air not only endangers health, but requires more fuel to give the same feeling of warmth. A temperature of 68° is more comfortable in a room heated with fully humidified air than 75° in dry air.

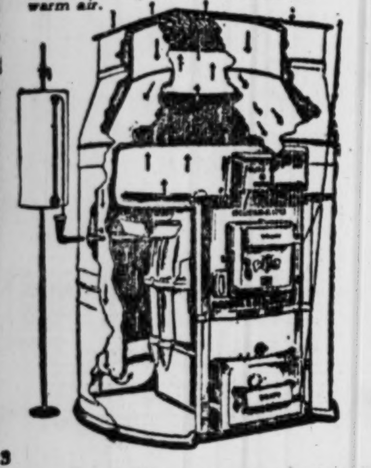
Bridge & Beach

AIR HEATER AND HUMIDIFIER

(PIPE AND PIPELESS)

Double fluted, corrugated fire chamber gives 25% greater heating surface than any other furnace of the same size. The corrugated walls, if stretched out like ordinary furnaces, would have 25% greater circumference.

Humidifier consists of 12-gallon vacuum controlled tank and double vapor-pans with 400 square inches evaporating surface. Open valve and let tank fill each morning. Simple as "ABC". Supplies an abundance of fully humidified, warm air.



is equipped with a vacuum controlled Humidifier which supplies much or little moisture as conditions may require. A gallon a day per room should be the minimum. Ordinary furnaces evaporate less than two gallons of water a day for the whole house—with desert dryness as a result.

The Bridge & Beach Air Heater and Humidifier—made in both pipe and pipeless styles—easily and quickly installed in any home—old or new—represents a new standard of perfection in the field of modern heating systems for the home—a fitting achievement for the manufacturers who have held a position of chief importance in the stove and range industry of this country for 84 years.

Before investing in a heating plant of any kind it will pay you to investigate the Bridge & Beach Air Heater and Humidifier. Let us send you information that will help you in your heating problem. Write for booklet today and ask for the name and address of our nearest authorized dealer.

VETERANS' CLAIMS NOW HANDLED IN ST. LOUIS

District Office of Bureau, at 6801 Delmar, Also Will Receive Insurance Premiums.

Veterans of the World War may now handle all matters pertaining to compensation and insurance, including the payment of premiums, through the United States Veterans' Bureau, 6801 Delmar boulevard, which has had the care of matters pertaining to vocational training for some time. The following statement relative to compensation and insurance has been issued by M. E. Head, acting manager of the ninth district, with offices at the Delmar boulevard address:

"In the future all claims for compensation should be sent to the district office instead of the Washington office. All new claims will be adjudicated at the St. Louis office and checks covering payments on such new claims which show a disability traceable to service of 10 per cent or more will be issued from that office. Requests for readjustments of old claims or reinstatement of discontinued compensation will be forwarded by the district office to the Washington office until such time as the records now in Washington have been forwarded to the districts. Regardless of the nature of the claim, time will be saved by communicating with the district office.

"An insurance cashier is now stationed in the district office for the purpose of receiving premiums on Government insurance. Ex-service men of the states of Missouri, Iowa, Kansas and Nebraska who desire to forward such premiums through this office should direct them to Insur-Cashier, U. S. Veterans' Bureau, 6801 Delmar boulevard, St. Louis. Upon receipt of such premiums tentative receipts will be issued and funds transmitted immediately to the Treasury Department.

"The district office is also prepared to furnish information with reference to reinstatement of lapsed insurance and conversion of policies to any one of the plans now authorized by law."

No Costlier Car Is Better Built Than This

Hupmobile

It is plain that the Hupmobile Sedan takes rank with closed cars which cost a great deal more to buy.

In every important structural feature it is as finely and sturdily built as a closed car can possibly be made.

This fact, with its low price, makes it stand out clearly as one of the richest values in the motor car market today.

To this downright dollar value must be added the investment value, which results from the economy, and the enduring qualities, for which the Hupmobile is noted.

DECORATIONS FOR FALL AUTO SHOW COMPLETED

Fall Exposition to Open Saturday, and Consists of Cars, Trucks and Accessories.

The interior decorations in the Chevrolet building, Union and Natural Bridge avenues, for the fall showing of automobiles under the auspices of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers and Dealers' Association were completed yesterday. Carpenters will begin the erection of booths tomorrow morning. The installation of accessory exhibits will begin Tuesday. The placing of passenger cars, trucks and renewed cars in the spaces assigned to them will begin Thursday.

The show will open at noon next Saturday, and will remain open daily (except Sunday) from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m. until the following Saturday. Gov. Hyde of Missouri, Mayor Kiel and H. W. Spalding, chairman of the Show Committee, will make addresses at the opening exercise.

Thirty-five cases, of 100 pounds each, of autumn leaves fireproofed and thousands of yards of bunting were used in the decorations. The building is fireproof, and is equipped with a complete sprinkler system. All decorations and settings will be fireproofed, assuring safety to patrons of the show.

Space to Park Autos Provided.

For the convenience of the public, Chairman H. W. Spalding and Manager R. E. Lee have arranged for cars of dealers and exhibits to be parked inside of the grounds, leaving the entire space in the streets outside of the building available for the parking of automobiles of those attending the show. Space will be provided for parking 2000 automobiles in the streets in front of the building and adjacent to it.

Manager Lee announced yesterday that every foot of available space for exhibits in all departments of the show has been taken. One of the last applicants for space to be accommodated was the Durant Motors Co., headed by W. C. Durant, former president of the General Motors Co. This will be the first time the new Durant car has been displayed at any automobile show.

For the accommodation of patrons of the show and out-of-town visitors, a Bureau of Information will be established near the main entrance. A restaurant will be open day and evening in a central building separate from the exhibits. Fully equipped rest rooms and comfort rooms will be provided.

Band concerts will be given every afternoon and evening by two bands under the direction of Walter Weber, who has been named leader for St. Louis auto shows for several years. The heads of nearly all companies manufacturing automobiles will attend the shows, and lectures on automotive subjects will be given in various booths.

Renewed Cars to Be Displayed.

By a special agreement, the inspected and certified renewed cars of the various makes will be displayed by the original company manufacturing them, through their St. Louis factory representatives. By this method, the original maker will stand behind each renewed car shown.

The display of accessories will be the largest ever shown in St. Louis. More than 100 different necessities and conveniences for automobiles will be exhibited, including the newest camping equipment, trailers, camp stoves, parking lamps, rear signal devices complying with the new automobile law, storage batteries, tire cushions, spark plugs, piston rings, etc.

Three special days have been arranged. Oct. 18 will be Executives day, when the heads of industry and commerce in St. Louis are invited to attend and meet the executives of automobile manufacturing companies from throughout the country. Oct. 19 will be Automobile day, on which exhibitors of accessories will make special efforts to show the newest and most modern adjuncts to motor cars. Oct. 20 will be Organization day, when the members of the various business organizations in St. Louis will be invited to attend.

With more than twice the space ever available at former automobile shows here, and the low price of admission of 25 cents, including war tax, it is expected that the largest crowds that ever visited an automobile event in St. Louis will be recorded.

TO RETURN BY MOTOR.

Col. C. L. Lundy, Western representative of the Dorris Motor Car Co., who arrived in St. Louis several days ago by motor from California, after a very successful and interesting trip, will start on his return journey within the next few days.

Col. Lundy, together with Mrs. Lundy, made the trip by way of Washington and Oregon, visiting both Glacier and Yellowstone National Parks en route to St. Louis.

A year ago Col. Lundy made the round trip from the coast to St. Louis in the same car, which now registers 53,000 miles.

SALES RECORD BROKEN.

F. H. Renger, general sales manager of the Moon Motor Car Co., announces that September sales of Moon cars are greater than any previous September in the history of the company. They are 36 per cent greater than sales of September of last year.

"Chauffeur" a Fireman in French.

The word "chauffeur" means firemen or stoker in French, and because the early cars were steamers and required two men to operate them, the French termed the operators the "mechanician" and the "chauffeur"—the "mechanic and the fireman."

COLLINS PURCHASES PEERLESS MOTOR CO.

Richard Collins, former vice president of the General Motors Corporation and former president of the Cadillac Motor Car Co., has purchased the Peerless Motor & Truck Co. of Cleveland, according to an announcement made several days ago.

The report states that the purchase amounted to $4,500,000 and that Collins acted solely for himself in engineering the deal.

The Peerless car is distributed in St. Louis by the Hutchinson Motor Car Co.

How Many Objects Starting With "S" Can You Find in Picture?

The above picture contains a number of objects beginning with the letter "S." Take a good look at the picture and you will find all kinds of things whose names begin with the letter "S." Nothing is hidden. You don't even need to turn the picture upside down. Make a list of all the objects you can see and write them down. The answer having the largest and nearest correct list of words will be awarded first prize; second best, second prize, etc.

The object of this picture puzzle is to introduce and get more people acquainted with Minnesota Fountain Pens. Thousands of them are now giving satisfactory service every day. We want you to buy one of our pens, and in order to make the purchase of one of these easy writing pens doubly attractive we are making this special offer:

Everybody Join In Costs Nothing to Try

This picture puzzle game is really not a puzzle at all, for all the objects and parts of objects can be seen. All you need to do is to look sharply at the picture. Your ability to find "S" Words determines the prize you win. Everybody can join in. It costs nothing to try, and if the Judges decide that you have the nearest correct list you will win $20.00. However, if you would like to win more than $20.00 here is

How to Win the $1,000.00

If the Judges decide that your answer to this puzzle picture is the best, and you have purchased one of our $5.00 Minnesota Fountain Pens during this contest, you will win $1,000.00. This offer is genuine, and there are no strings attached to it. An order for a $5.00 Minnesota Pen is all that is required to make your answer to the picture puzzle eligible for the $1,000.00 prize.

If you do not care to invest $5.00 in a fountain pen, the purchase of one of our $3.00 Minnesota Fountain Pens will qualify your list of words for the $300.00 prize. Get busy now, and see how many "S" Words you can find.

Pick out objects like Saddle, Satchel, Skiis, etc.

Observe These Rules

1. Any person residing outside of St. Paul who is not an employee, or relative of any employee of the Minnesota Pen Co., may submit an answer. It costs nothing to try.

2. All answers must be mailed by Nov. 12, 1921.

3. Answers should be written on one side of the paper only, and words numbered 1, 2, 3, etc. Write your full name and address on each page in the upper right hand corner. If you desire to write anything else, use a separate sheet.

4. Only words found in the English dictionary will be counted. Do not use compound, hyphenated or obsolete words. Use either the singular or plural, but where the plural is used the singular cannot be counted, and vice versa.

5. Words of the same spelling can be used only once, even though used to designate different objects. The same object can be named only once. However, any part of the object may also be named.

6. The answer having the largest and nearest correct list of names of visible objects shown in the picture that begin with the letter "S" will be awarded first prize, etc. Neatness, style, or handwriting have no bearing upon deciding the winners.

7. Candidates may co-operate in answering the puzzle, but only one prize will be awarded to any one household; nor will prizes be awarded to more than one of any group outside of the family where two or more have been working together.

8. In the event of ties, the full amount of the prize will be paid each tying contestant.

9. Three well-known business men having no connection with the Minnesota Pen Co. will judge the answers submitted and award the prizes, and participants agree to accept the decision of the judges as final and conclusive. The following men have agreed to act as judges of this unique competition:

F. A. Nienhauser, Vice President National Exchange Bank, St. Paul.
Otto B. DeHaan, Advertising Manager Farmers Dispatch, St. Paul.
J. H. Snider, Manager F. C. Harbaugh Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

10. All answers will receive the same consideration regardless of whether or not an order for a Minnesota Fountain Pen has been sent in.

11. The announcement of the prize winners and the correct list of words will be printed at the close of the contest and a copy mailed to each person purchasing a Minnesota Fountain Pen.

MOTOR GARDNER CAR

It's Value that Counts

Value is the only consideration that should justify the price asked for any automobile. The new Gardner car for 1922 has been designed for a greater purpose than to merely compete in price with the mass of cheap cars now on the market.

It is built to meet a nation-wide demand for a better car mechanically inside—a better looking car outside—a quality car at a popular price—a car which safely secures the owner's investment with a real 100% value product.

INCREASED PENALTIES PROVIDED IN NEW LAW

Legislators Hope That Greater Maximum Penalty Will Stop Auto Violations Now Common.

Penalties for violation of the various sections in the new motor law, effective Nov. 1, have been increased considerably over those provided for in the present law.

It was the hope of the legislators that in providing for a greater maximum penalty or giving the course more leeway for the placement of penalties for violation of these laws, that many of the violations which are now common would be stopped, according to Don Russell, attorney for the Automobile Club of St. Louis.

In the old law the maximum penalty placed upon a person operating or driving an automobile without the owner's consent was imprisonment in the State penitentiary not exceeding five years or by a fine not exceeding $500 or by confinement in the county jail not exceeding one year or by both such fine or imprisonment. The new law provides, however, that any person who shall be convicted of feloniously stealing, taking or carrying away or attempting to feloniously steal, take or carry away any motor vehicle or any part, tire or equipment of a motor vehicle of a value of $30 or more shall be guilty of a felony and shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding 25 years, or by confinement in the county jail not exceeding one year, or by a fine not exceeding $1000, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

This section also provides that any person who shall be convicted of stealing or carrying away of any equipment of a motor vehicle under the value of $30 shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year or by a fine not exceeding $100, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Unlawful to Deface Motor.

It is provided that no person shall destroy, remove, cover, alter or deface or cause to be destroyed, removed, covered, altered or defaced, the manufacturer's number, the motor number of any other distingushing mark on any motor vehicle or any tire which is the property of another. For violation of this section, the party so convicted shall be imprisoned in the State penitentiary for no more than five years or in the county jail for not more than one year or by a fine of $100, or by both such fine and imprisonment. This is a little more lenient than the punishment provided for in the old law, in which $500 maximum fine is imposed, in comparison with $100 in the new law.

Any person who shall tamper with a vehicle or trailer without the permission of the owner shall be deemed guilty of a felony and upon conviction shall be punished by imprisonment in the State penitentiary for not more than five years or in the county jail for not more than one year or by a fine not exceeding $100, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

The same penalty is provided for any person operating or driving a vehicle on the highway, who, knowing that an injury has been caused to a person or that damage has ben done to property shall leave the place of said injury or damage or accident without first stopping and giving his name, residence and city, including street address, to the injured party or officer or to the nearest police station if no officer is present, or for any person driving in an intoxicated condition or under the influence of drugs.

Any person so convicted for violation of any of the other provisions of the new law shall be punished by a fine not less than $5 or more than $500 or imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding two years or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Violators Must Be Reported.

Clerks of all courts of record and clerks of all courts in cities having more than 75,000 population, having a jurisdiction of offenses for the violation of this law, shall report in writing to the Commissioner the name and address of such person, the registration number, if known, and the penalty so imposed and all Justices of the Peace, clerks of police and city courts and other courts having a jurisdiction of offenses for the violation of this law or of the ordinances of municipalities may, and on request of the Commissioner shall, report in writing the names and addresses of persons convicted of the violation of this law or ordinances, together with the name, address and registration number, if known, and the penalty so imposed.

The commissioner thereupon shall make a record thereof in a book to be kept for that purpose and when any person who has registered as a motor vehicle owner, dealer, chauffeur or registered operator is convicted three times within a period of one year for the violation of this law or of city ordinances, then the commissioner may revoke such certificate of registration and shall give written notice of such revocation to the holder of the certificate and to the Sheriff and Prosecuting Attorney of the county and if he lives in a city having a metropolitan police department, to the Chief of Police thereof. The person whose certificate of registration has been revoked shall immeditaely surrender his certificate to the commissioner and no certificate of ownership or registration shall be issued any person within one year following such revocation unless a hearing in good cause is shown, wherefor the commissioner should issue another certificate.

Delaware Kills Most Motorists.

More motorists were killed in Delaware last year in proportion to the number of automobiles registered than in any other State.

NEW HUDSON-ESSEX MODELS ON DISPLAY

Important Improvements Have Been Made "Under the Hood" and on Other Parts of Cars.

The new Essex and Hudson Super-six models announced recently by the Hudson and Essex Motor Co., are now on display in the showrooms of the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co., local distributers.

Important improvements have been made "under the hood" and on other parts of both cars, which is claimed to assure them of greater economy, reliability and smoother performance.

According to R. C. Frampton, president of the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co., the Essex has a redesigned intake manifold which insures the admission of a much more perfect mixture to the combustion chamber than heretofore. This, together with a changed spark plug arrangement minimizes carbon deposit, and the fouling of spark plugs through poor fuel or mixture.

The body and wheels of the new Essex open models are finished in a deep shade of blue and all chassis parts are black. A custom-built top fitted with gypsy curtains and rear light glass give added appearance. Radiator shutter assembly, motor meter, neutral lock and cord tires are standard equipment.

Hudson Also Improved.

There are also many important changes and refinements in the new Hudson super-six, stated Frampton, that have a tendency to make the car easier to drive.

In carrying out these changes, the entire front compartment has been re-designed and the details of the control mechanism have been so improved as to provide easier steering, easier starting, pedals which take less effort to operate and a gear shift with a long lever, handily placed.

The super-six engine which has been in use since 1916 has been continued without any fundamental alterations. Important changes, however, have been effected in connection with carburetion, incorporating a new air heating arrangement and a construction change in the intake manifold. There is also a different spark plug arrangement.

The lubricating points on the chassis are taken care of by a new type oiler which needs only weekly attention. The oiler contains a reservoir and wick feed.

There are seven body types ranging from the two open cars of four and seven-passenger capacity to the most formal—the limousine. Of these only the limousine is a strictly of the chauffeur driven type. All of the others will find a place with the owner-driven—the different types and sizes depending on the owner's needs.

How Buick Accessibility Saves Owners Time and Money

Buick cars are built so they can be operated with a minimum of expense. If a part needs attention it is easily accessible. For instance, adjusting or putting a new fan belt on a Buick is a job that is handled by the owner in a few minutes. Buick invites comparison.

FORM LAWS WILL CURB TRUCK HAZARDS

Motor truck transportation can be de far more safe by the adoption uniform scientific traffic laws in the states and by stricter enforce- nt of the statutes, in the opinion D. C. Fenner, chairman of the Mo- Vehicle Conference Committee manager of the Public Works rtment of the International Mo- Co., speaking before the New land Conference of State High- Commissioners and Motor Ve- Registrars. The Motor Vehicle ference Committee represents automobile owner, manufacturer, ler, parts and tire associtaions of motor vehicle industry. The Con- ence of Commissioners was held connection with the annual con- s of the National Safety Council.

Mr. Fenner stated that careful an- sis of accidents in which motor cks have figured has revealed the t that the disasters have usually sen from excessive size, weight or ed of the vehicles; from overload- g or from inadequate or defective ipment. Still other causes were kless or incompetent operators, roper enforcement of the laws conflicting traffic regulations as ween states or the municipalities thin the states.

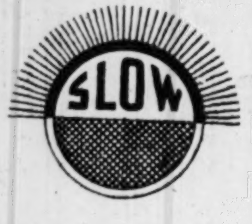
After citing instances to illustrate e manner in which these ses of accident have oper- ed disastrously, he recommend- d to the highway commis- ners and motor vehicle registrars t they lend their support to the vement which has been begun to ng about the general enactment d enforcement of uniform motor icles laws throughout the entire ted States. In this connection he lained theos provisons of the pro- ed uniform vehicle law which e a vital bearing on those factors, d showed how the adoption of the asures recommended would make r safety.

He concluded by emphasizing to blic officials that motor transpor- tion is an increasingly important edium of commerce, what its de- lopment is today only in its infan- , and that the wisest course for eryone to pursue is to develop und and equitable regulations for dering this new type of transpor- tion safe and not measures for fling its legitimate and vitally nec- ary growth.

Get the Facts.

In case your car is involved in a "smash-up" get these facts down on paper just as soon after the accident as possible: Name, sex and address of injured persons, other driver and witnesses; license number of other cars; exact location; date and time of day; weather and street conditions; circumstances and blame; and make pencil sketch showing details. Stay on the ground and talk only to your attorney. This is the advice of the National Safety Council.

EITHER PEDAL



The brilliant green SLOW shows when EITHER brake pedal or clutch pedal is pushed down, indicating that you are slowing down but not going to stop.

SLOW
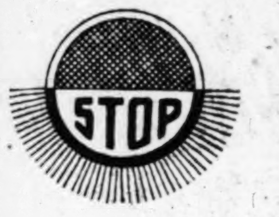
OHIO 41190 19

BOTH PEDALS



The billiant red STOP is shown only when all operations necessary to stop the car have been completed, that is—the clutch pedal pushed down disengaging the clutch and the foot brake pedal pushed down, applying the brakes.

THE TEL-RITE SIGNAL

IS THE TRUE INDICATOR OF WHAT THE CAR AHEAD IS GOING TO DO.

The ordinary stop signal is misleading in that it shows STOP when only slowing down as well as stopping. After awhile the driver behind you pays little attention to the STOP and when occasion requires you to come to a quick stop he will think you are only slowing down and will crash into you. THEN—

The TEL-RITE with its positive automatic control cannot give the man behind you the wrong signal. When you tell him to stop with a Tel-Rite, he knows that you are going to stop.

Remember what happened to the boy who cried "Wolf" and equip your car with a Tel-Rite.

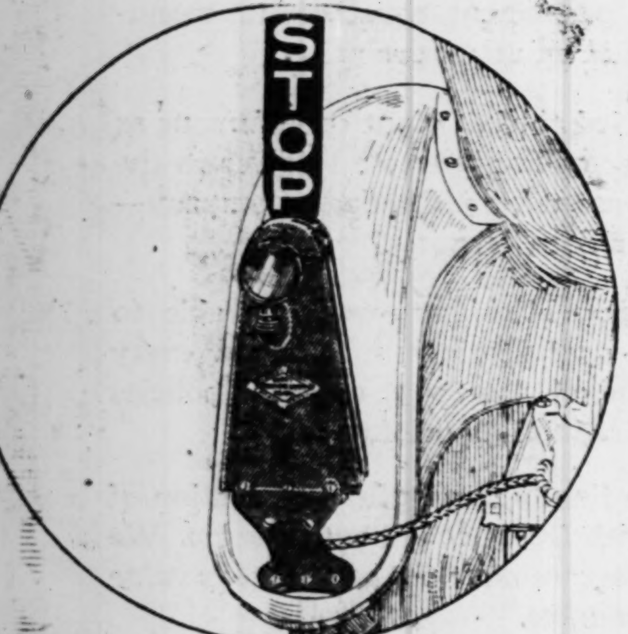
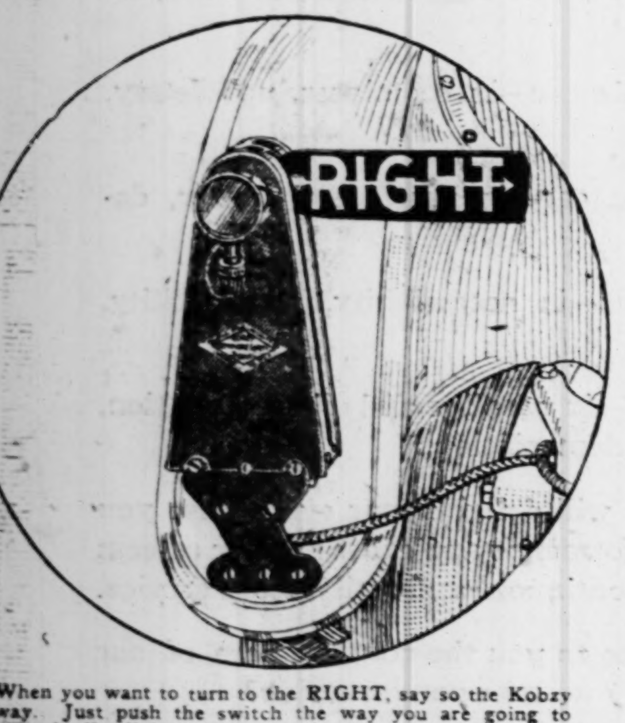
You Can Prevent This

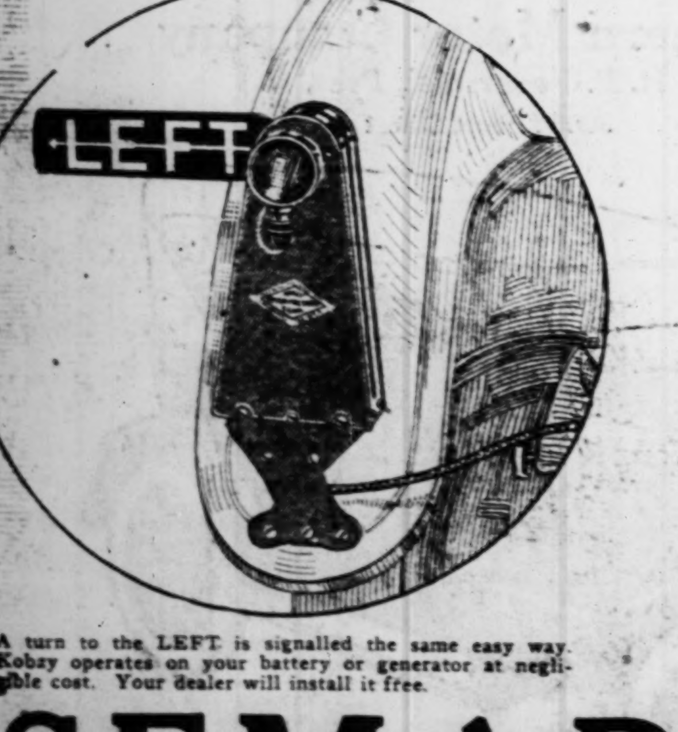
The only way to effectively prevent accidents is to give clear, unmistakable signals indicating whether you intend to STOP, or turn to the RIGHT or LEFT. Insure your safety with the new improved Kobzy Semaphore Auto Signal



Just a touch of the little switch within easy reach and STOP snaps up, automatically—white letters on a red arm. The quick, sweeping motion of the arm buttonholes the attention of the driver behind you.



When you want to turn to the RIGHT, say so the Kobzy way. Just push the switch the way you are going to turn. A pilot light assures you that the message is lighted and is being seen at night.



A turn to the LEFT is signalled the same easy way. Kobzy operates on your battery or generator at negligible cost. Your dealer will install it free.

When you hold out your left hand, what does it mean to the driver following you? Nothing specific. Yet you are eager to signal him of your intentions—it is to your interest that he should know. But with only one signal for three different things, how can you be sure he will guess correctly?

Danger Lurks in the Wrong Guess

During rush hours, every driver is impatient to reach his destination. Hurried drivers take chances—it's human nature. You signal with your hand—the man behind thinks you are going to stop— he tries to pass on your left—you start to turn left—and smash! He made a wrong guess. What happens depends on luck.

Signals That Leave No Doubt

The new improved Kobzy Semaphore Auto Signal notifies the driver behind exactly what you intend to do. The splendid semaphore safety signals on the railroads have taught the public to respect them—to know and understand their uses. On your car, they command the same respect and attention. Their message is clear—positive—unmistakable.

Many Signals—Only One Kobzy

Just as you want the best car for the price you pay, you will want the best signal system. You could have bought a cheap car—you can buy a cheap signal—but there's only one semaphore system that effectually solves the signal problem. The Kobzy quickly becomes a driving aid that you will never want to be without. Instinctively you register your decisions to STOP, or turn to the LEFT or RIGHT with the handy lever on your steering post. Electrically, the message—whatever it is—is signalled from the rear—a friendly warning to following cars. It makes you a more careful driver as well.

Your Duty to Traffic

With hundreds of cars behind you in crowded traffic, what you do affects hundreds of others. At street intersections — tell the man behind what you are going to do. Let him know he can prepare to pass if you are turning to the right. Don't delay others—you dislike being held back unnecessarily. Install and let Kobzy take the kinks out of congested traffic.

Approved by Underwriters' Laboratories

With 10,000 Kobzys now in use and many thousands of them since 1919, every conceivable test has been successfully encountered. It's practical, reliable and durable. The Underwriters' Laboratories, in approving and listing it as standard, say, "The presence of this device on an automobile materially reduces its collision hazard." The Safety Institute of America recommends it. Motor clubs, State officials, police chiefs and traffic officers and all users are enthusiastic in their approval. One insurance company writes, "If only 50% of motorists installed a Kobzy, the number of collisions would be reduced 75%."

Insure your safety with a Kobzy. If it's not satisfactory after 30 days, your money will be refunded.

The St. John's Hospital has purchased the northeast corner of King's highway and Audubon avenue, the site having a frontage of feet on King's highway and 150 feet on Audubon. The price paid for the ground was $55,000, according to the George J. Wanstrath Real Estate Co., which handled the transaction.

The purchase was made to provide a site for a maternity building for the St. John's Hospital, the buildings of which occupy three-quarters of this block facing Euclid, Audubon and Parkview place. The cost of the proposed structure is estimated at $200,000, exclusive of cost of the site.

Construction is to be started as soon as the money is available. The main building of St. John's Hospital was erected eight years ago, at a cost of $400,000, not including the ground, but probably would entail an investment of twice that much if built now. The convent for the sisters, recently completed, cost [illegible],000, exclusive of the ground.

Details of Transaction.

The George J. Wanstrath company represented the Hospital Association in the purchase several years ago of the adjoining ground on Audubon avenue. Mother Michael acted for the Hospital Association in the recent transaction.

The Jewish Hospital Association recently purchased a large lot at the [illegible] corner of King's highway and Parkview place and additional ground on King's highway extending from Parkview place to Forest Park boulevard for a new and larger hospital group, construction of which will be begun as soon as the favorable economic conditions will.

The real estate market is not [illegible] itself, but is notably strong in spots, the past week having been marked by several substantial operations. These in several instances embrace large improvement plans.

The Proetz-Schnell Real Estate Co. is in conference with parties who have under consideration the [illegible] corner of Delmar boulevard and Hanley road, having a frontage of 207 feet, as a site for a hotel structure.

The site, which is one of the most [illegible] in University City and in St. Louis County for a building of this character, was recently purchased by clients of the Proetz-Schnell company. A building of large proportions is contemplated, but as yet the project is in embryo, though under serious consideration on the part of interests with ample resources.

Downtown Corner in Deal.

The F. H. & C. B. Gerhard Real Estate Co. is concluding negotiations for the northwest corner of Seventh and Pine streets, owned by [illegible] Van Raalte. The consideration mentioned is $110,000. The identity of the purchaser is withheld. The site has 21 feet 6 inches on Pine and 90 feet on Seventh, is occupied by a three-story building under lease for five years at a substantial rental. As part payment, Van Raalte is taking the northwest corner of West Pine boulevard and Euclid avenue, having 210 feet on West Pine and 214 feet on Euclid. It is occupied by the handsome home of the late Mrs. Baker, who was a sister of Ellis Wainwright. The estate, however, is not acquiring the Pine street corner, which is involved in a triangular operation.

The Hemmelmann-Spackler Real Estate Co. has placed under contract several substantial sales supplementing a notable number of minor transactions. The concern reports a broader demand for investment property, with money in larger supply. This concern is making loans in connection with purchases for residential and investment purposes. These in several instances of the serial note type.

BUILDING CONTRACTS SHOW UNUSUAL SEASONAL INCREASE

Total for September Greatest of Any September on Record, According to Figures of F. W. Dodge Co.

Building contracts awarded during September in the 27 Northeastern states, according to the F. W. Dodge Co., amounted to $246,186,600. This is not only the largest monthly total that has been reached this year, but it is also the largest September figure on record.

The September total shows an increase of 11½ per cent over the August figures; whereas, during the 10-year period previous to 1921, the average September figure is 14½ per cent less than the average August figure.

Although the greatest increase in September was evident in the New York district, substantial increases are noted in the entire Middle Western territory, comprising the Pittsburg and Chicago districts. New England, the Northwestern states and the Middle Atlantic states showed the usual seasonal decline in September.

Residential building still leads among the various classes of construction, amounting to $95,303,000 in September. This figure represents 39 per cent of the total September construction.

Of even greater significance at the present time is the increase in volume of business buildings. The September figure was $41,259,000, the largest monthly total on this class since June, 1920. Business buildings represented 17 per cent of the September total. Construction was started on a number of long-deferred projects of this kind.

Public works and utilities amounted to $35,414,000 in September, or 14 per cent of the total; educational buildings amounted to $26,459,000, or 11 per cent of the total.

New York State Contracts.

Contracts awarded during September in New York State and Northern New Jersey amounted to $85,900,000. This is the largest total for this district for any single month on record. The previous maximum figure was $80,300,000, which was reached in the month of August, 1919. The September, 1921, total was 41 per cent greater than the figure for the preceding month.

Residential buildings amounted to $47,590,000, or 55 per cent of the total. This is the largest figure for residential building in this district for any month on record. This total covers 1384 projects, 1291 of which amount to less than $100,000 each, 90 amount to from $100,000 to $1,000,000 each, and three amount to more than $1,000,000 each. These figures demonstrate the effectiveness of the Tax Exemption Act.

Business buildings amounted to $17,590,000, or 20 per cent of the total, this being the largest total for this class recorded in any month of this year in the New York district.

The September total figure brings the total for the first nine months of this year up to $446,608,000, which is 48 per cent greater than the average for the first nine months of the preceding five years.

Contemplated new work was reported in this district during September to the amount of $73,255,000.

September contracts in the Middle Atlantic states (comprising Southern New Jersey, Eastern Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, the District of Columbia, Virginia, North and South Carolina) amouned to $34,119,000, a decrease of 10 per cent from the August figure. This is just the average seasonal decline for this district.

September contracts in Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Kentucky and Tennessee amounted to $40,885,000, an increase of 24 per cent over the August figure. In previous years September has, on the average, shown a decrease of 11 per cent from August.

The Central West.

September contracts in the Central West (comprising Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Wisconsin, Missouri and portions of Eastern Kansas and Nebraska) amounted to $62,241,000. This is an increase of 3 per cent over August, whereas during a period of 10 years the average September figure has shown a decrease of 22 per cent from the average August figure.

The September total included the following items: $16,777,000, or 27 per cent, for residential buildings; $13,130,000, or 21 per cent, for public works and utilities; $7,898,000, or 13 per cent, for business buildings; and $6,885,000, or 11 per cent, for educational buildings.

From Jan. 1 to Oct. 1, 1921, the total amount of contracts awarded in this district has amounted to $506,659,000, an increase of 2½ per cent over the average for the first nine months of the preceding five years.

During September contemplated new work was reported for this district to the amount of $106,485,000. This is 30 per cent more than the amount of contemplated work reported in August.

Contracts awarded during September in Minnesota and North and South Dakota amounted to $7,015,000. Although this figure is 16 per cent less than the total for August, it is 5 per cent greater than the total for September, 1920.

BANK TO OCCUPY NEW ADDITION WEDNESDAY

More Than 6000 More Feet of Floor Space Taken Over by Commerce Institution.

The new addition to the National Bank of Commerce at Broadway and Pine street will be occupied by the bank Wednesday. The formal opening date will be announced later.

More than 6000 square feet is added to the first floor banking space of the institution. The new quarters, formerly occupied by the Mortgage Trust Co., will care for the bond and trust departments.

The trust section will be given room to expand the services of this department, which was the first one organized in the United States under the national banking laws. The bond department, one of the youngest additions to the banking service, will be given facilities for considerable enlargement. These two are being removed from the Commerce Trust Building addition, which will now be given over largely to savings. In four years' time this section has grown to 43,000 accounts, and needs additional space for expansion.

With the savings will be the foreign, passbook, city, statement, new business and advertising departments, many of these moving from upstairs space in the same building.

"By increasing our space virtually one-third, we are not only providing for a now overcrowded condition in our bank, but showing our faith in an ever-growing St. Louis by creating a first-floor banking area that is one of the largest in the city," said W. L. Hemingway, vice president.

"We now have under one roof, stretching from Olive to Pine over Broadway, first floor space, under one board of directors, seven different banking services, including the complete facilities of modern banking; in fact, we might be called a department store of banking."

The National Bank of Commerce launched in 1857 as the Building and Savings Association on Pine street near Second. In 1875 it became the Bank of Commerce, at the northwest corner of Fourth and Olive streets. In 1885 the bank moved to the old Jaccard building, northeast corner of Broadway and Olive, two years later becoming a national bank.

After consolidating with the Continental National in 1902, the bank occupied its present quarters at the southeast corner of Broadway and Olive. A savings, trust and bond department was added in 1918 when the additional quarters south, formerly occupied by the Post-Dispatch were taken over.

PHILIPPINE INDEPENDENCE ISSUE MAY BE LAID ASIDE FOUR YEARS

By the Associated Press.

MANILA, P. I., Oct. 8.—That the question of Philippine independence will be laid on the table for at least four years was indicated in a speech tonight by Acting Governor-General Charles E. Yeater, at a popular dinner tendered him on the eve of his departure by American, Filipino and foreign residents of Manila.

Yeater said President Harding did not feel he could carry out or postpone execution of the recommendation of President Wilson that the Philippines to be granted independence until a complete investigation had been made, and that as a result he had sent the Wood-Forbes mission to make inquiry into conditions.

Investigation by the Wood-Forbes mission was part of the effort of American people to fulfill the promise of independence made in the Jones law, Yeater said. He added: "The Wood-Forbes report is filled with calm, fair, honest and judicious statements. It evades nothing. I agree with what it says. It is a document which all thoughtful Filipinos and Americans will approve."

C. Ball.

The ground comprises 30 acres of beautiful park and garden all highly cultivated. The building is a three-story fireproof structure built about seven years ago as a convent property, but the growth of the community demanded a larger building, and the Brothers of Mary decided to sell the property and are now erecting a larger convent north of Kirkwood.

There are large barns, chicken houses and a swimming pool on the grounds. The property will be used as a convent by the Polish Franciscan School Sisters of St. Louis, and will be occupied by them sometime during the spring.

FIRM ESTABLISHED HERE 16 YEARS AGO

Concern Never Able to Turn Out All the Clothing It Could Sell, President Says.

The Curlee Clothing Co. has acquired a lease through the Martin-Briett Real Estate Co. of the seven-story and basement building at the northeast corner of Locust and Twenty-first streets, which is to be occupied exclusively in the manufacture of Curlee clothes.

The building has a frontage on Locust street of 100 feet, and on Twenty-first street of 150 feet, embracing approximately 120,000 square feet of floor space. The entire building will be rearranged to conform with the factory plans of the Curlee Co.

The lease is of noteworthy significance in that it provides for the further expansion of the Curlee Clothing Co., which operates a number of factories on a large scale in St. Louis, thus emphasizing the growth of the clothing industry in this city.

Established Sixteen Years Ago.

The Curlee Co., which launched its first factory in St. Louis 16 years ago, has been characterized by an unprecedented growth, it now being one of the largest manufacturers and distributors of men's and young men's popular priced clothes in America, its wares being sold from coast to coast. Its annual sales run into the millions.

The new factory will add between 800 to 900 workers to the already large force employed in St. Louis by this company. The Curlee Clothing Co. occupies the entire building at 1001-3-5 and 7 Washington avenue for its general offices and wholesale department, while it maintains salesrooms in New York City and Chicago. A traveling force of more than 40 salesmen represents the company in all parts of the United States.

The officers of the company are S. H. Curlee, president; J. R. Curlee, vice president; S. L. Nelson, vice president, and F. L. Avant, treasurer.

S. H. Curlee, president of the company said: "The leasing of this building, when added to our present manufacturing capacity will give us an opportunity to meet the steadily growing demand for Curlee clothes.

Market Better Known.

"Having all of our factories in St. Louis under the supervision of a staff of men who thoroughly understand the requirements of this company, we are enabled to turn out a uniform product, one which answers every requirement of the trade. Strange as it may seem we have never been able to manufacture all of the clothing we can sell. The St. Louis market is becoming better known to buyers of merchandise in all sections of the country. It now recognizes no territorial limitations. We are growing with the market, and, in our judgment, it is only a question of time when further factory extension will be necessary. We believe in St. Louis and its future."

The property is owned by the Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co., and Martin-Breitt Real Estate Company represented all parties.

Additional Names of Men From Draft Districts of Missouri Who Are Listed as Deserters

The names in the following list are those of men who were drafted for military service from Missouri counties but who failed to serve, according to the records of the War Department, as compiled to date. At the present time they are reported and classified as "deserters from the military service of the United States."

The War Department has found in lists previously published the names of some men classed as "deserters" who had served honorably with the colors.

The War Department announcement says:

"Actual expenses not to exceed $50, to include reimbursement for the amount actually expended, but not to include allowance for services, will be paid to any civil officer or other citizen for the apprehension and delivery to military control of any one of them. If any one of them is apprehended, he should be delivered at, and reimbursement for the actual expenses incurred by the arresting officer should be claimed at the nearest army post, camp or station."

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

As we have no information bureau, it is impossible to answer queries by mail or telephone. Query for Sunday must be mailed a week beforehand

J. C. N.—There are classes in commercial art in the public night high schools.

VERY OLD READER.—We are not familiar with practices of English banks regarding the identification of holders of checks.

E. G.—We know of no music schools in St. Louis specializing in sacred music, although all of the schools teach it.

WILLIAM R.—Maps of the United States and portions of the United States may be secured through the Geological Survey, Interior Department, Washington, D. C.

MRS. M. E.—Apply to Mrs. Genevieve F. Wyatt, Grand Secretary of the Order of the Eastern Star, 3828 Arsenal street, St. Louis, regarding membership in that organization.

FRIEND OF ANIMALS.—The following is a powder which may rid the dog of the fleas: 1 ounce sulphur; ¼ ounce carbolic acid; 1 ounce crude naphthol; 1 pound powdered chalk. Mix and rub well into the dog's hair. There are also many excellent powders and soaps on the market for this purpose, and persistence is necessary in order to eradicate the pests.

MT. OLIVE.—1. The following is a method of curing bacon: For every 300 pounds of pork use 14 pounds of common salt, and 1 pound each of brown sugar and saltpeter. Rub into the meat and let it lie for 3 weeks, rubbing and turning it occasionally. Then wipe dry, rub again with dry fine salt, wrap in a thick cloth, canvas or paper, and hang it in a cool, dry place. In curing hams, allow for 100 pounds of fine pork, 7 pounds of coarse salt, 5 pounds of brown sugar, 2 ounces of saltpeter, ½ ounce of soda and 4 gallons of water. Boil this all together and skim the pickle when it is cold. Pour the pickle over the meat, which should first be rubbed all over with red pepper and allow the ham to remain in the liquid for 8 weeks. Before smoking, hang the hams up to dry for 2 or 3 days. Hickory wood may be used for smoking, or the prepared smoke which may be secured on the market may be used. 2. The tide levels on the Pacific side of the Panama Canal are much higher than those on the Atlantic side of the canal.

LEGAL INFORMATION

(Prepared by a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

MARIA W.—See the Legal Aid Bureau and they may be able to help you get the money you loaned.

A SUBSCRIBER.—Under the circumstances you could not compel your neighbor to build a division fence.

JUNE.—You could report the woman in the case and could take legal measures against your husband, under the circumstances described.

F. J. F.—We would advise you to write to the Veterans' Bureau, Washington, D. C., for information. It would be necessary for us to see your policy and papers before we could answer.

GLADYS G.—Upon her husband's death, the widow can either claim dower, which is one-third of the real estate for her lifetime only, or she can claim a child's share and get absolute title to that share.

G. R. H.—The owner has a right to the possession on Oct. 8. If you do not move he can sue for unlawful detainer and get a hearing in five days, and you will be liable for double rent for every day you hold over.

NEDDIE K.—It is unlawful to buy or sell aigrette feathers, but it is not unlawful for you to wear them in your case, since they were given to you by your grandmother. You can wear them but you cannot sell them.

L. W.—There is no limit to the amount of insurance on a child if it is taken in a regular life insurance company. An industrial company cannot issue a policy in excess of $500. These are the weekly payment policies.

QUIZ.—A marriage cannot be annulled without legal cause. The probable cost of a divorce would be about $30 and lawyer's fee. Divorce proceedings can be begun now even though it is a marriage of less than a year. The proceedings should be instituted here, but the parties must have lived here one year before they can sue.

BILLY N.—1. You can sue for a divorce if your wife refuses to quit going with the man. 2. Your wife could compel you to support her while your divorce suit was pending. 3. If you could satisfy the court that you could take better care of the children than she can, you could obtain their custody. 4. The furniture belongs to that one of you who paid for it. 5. You cannot be held responsible to the law in any way for the sale of the furniture without your wife's consent, if the furniture belongs to you. 6. You could bring suit against the man for alienation of your wife's affections.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS.

(Answers prepared by a physician of authority. Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given. Questions that cannot be publicly discussed, if showing evidences of sincerity, will be answered when accompanied by stamped envelope.)

ANXIOUS.—A woman near confinement infected as you describe, would likely give birth to an infected child. We do not think any correction could be made at such late stage.

ANXIOUS.—You should be very sure you really have evidences of the disease mentioned. Too many cases are diagnosed wrongfully, sometimes unfortunately intentionally. Be examined and have your wife and child examined by a competent trusthworthy physician. Have a Wasserman test made.

PEGGY H. H.—From your description we are in doubt that you have acne. The description rather fits the skin lesion known as milium. Write again giving a better description. Acne is the ordinary pimple, generally not very small, whose base is more or less inflammatory. Milium lesions are quite small, just beneath the epidermis, and noninflammatory.

MRS. M. M.—Try a very restricted diet, the first 48 hours milk only, even a long period of a strictly milk diet would be better, for the acid stomach you describe. If you have been taking much bicarbonate of soda, as is usual, stop it. Eat whole wheat bread, bran cereal or bran bread. Correct any constipation and take 5 grains of salol, three times a day in capsules.

ANXIOUS.—Round worms and pin worms are developed from the eggs swallowed in food. Take powders containing one or two grains each of santonin and calomel. Take one each night until the bowels move freely. This remedy may color the urine yellow and produce yellow vision. In children the doses should be ¼ to ½ grains each. In the case of pin worms use the above treatment and in addition retained enemas of salt water, or lime water are necessary, about 4 ounces to the enema at bedtime. Cleanliness is necessary.

In loving memory of our darling, Edna Mae Allen, who departed this life Oct. 10, 1917:

Days of sadness still come o'er us,
Tears in silence often flow;
Fond memory keeps you ever near us,
Though you died four years ago.
MOTHER AND GRANDPARENTS.

In memory of Theodore Fimmer, October 12, 1918.

Dear brother, how we miss you
Since that day you left us all.
You are sadly missed by others,
But I miss you most of all.
Sadly missed by his brother

IN MEMORIAM

There will be an anniversary mass at St. Vincent's Church Monday morning at 8 o'clock for Ed A. Reinersmann.

In loving memory of our loving daughter Coriena West, who entered into eternal life Oct. 10, 1920, who has gone among the angels to stay:

Oh! how sweet to breathe thy name.
In life I loved you dearly;
In death I do the same.
Sadly missed by PARENTS AND SISTER.

In memory of my son, Arthur Bender, who departed this life, one year ago, October 9, 1920:

Today recalls sad memories,
Of a loved one gone to rest;
And those who think of him today,
Are the ones who loved him best.
Sadly missed by MOTHER AND SON.

In loving memory of our dear father, Phill Keim, who departed this life one year ago, Oct. 10, 1920:

There is no ray of sunshine our pathway to cheer,
But sorrow would vanish if our dear father were here;
Each hope to us blooming, but blooms to decay,
Each joy that we treasure soon withers away.
Sadly missed by CHILDREN.

In memory of our dear husband and father, Peter Rode, who departed this life Oct. 6, 1920:

He bid no one a last farewell,
He said good-by to none;
His loving heart had ceased to beat
Before we knew he was gone.
His cheery smile and kindly ways
Are pleasant to recall.
He had a kind word for each one,
And died beloved by all.
Sadly missed by his WIFE AND SON.

In loving memory of Elmer Fauter, who entered eternal life Oct. 8, 1920, in his eighteenth year:

In the bloom of youth you suffered so long and hard, but with the greatest patience and faith in Jesus you suffered, and in silence you bore til' God called you home to suffer no more.

Sadly mourned by your heartbroken MOTHER, GRANDMOTHER, AUNT, UNCLE AND COUSIN.

In memory of my dear husband, Jasper Huskey, who departed this life one year ago, Oct. 6, 1920.

Do not ask me if I miss him.
Oh, there is such a vacant place.
Often I think I hear his footstep
Or see his smiling face.
He has gone among the angels,
Safe from every grief and care.
We shall meet again in heaven,
And nevermore be parted there.
WIFE. (c)

In loving memory of our loved one, Harry L. Budde, who departed suddenly five years ago, Oct. 5, 1916.

He bid none a last farewell,
He said goodby to none;
His loving heart had ceased to beat
Before we knew he was gone.
His cheery smile and kindly ways,
Are pleasant to recall:
He had a kind word for each one,
And died beloved by all.
Sadly missed by his MOTHER, SON AND SISTER.

In loving memory of our dear husband and son, Frank O. Reese, who departed this life one year ago, Oct. 13, 1920.

Silently shadows of evening
Gather round our lonely door.
Silently they bring before us
The dear face we see no more.
So often do we go to his grave,
Lingering there and trying to be brave.
But oh, 'tis hard to bear.
To go away and leave him there.
Sadly missed by his loving REGINE V. REESE, WIFE. MOLLIE M. REESE, MOTHER.

In memory of my beloved wife, dear mother and grandmother, Mrs. Ed Schoen, who departed this life one year ago, Oct. 11, 1920.

Gone, dear mother, gone forever;
How we miss your loving face;
But you left us to remember
None can ever fill your place.
When evening shadows are falling
And we are sitting all alone,
To our hearts there comes a longing:
If mother could only come home.
Beloved wife, true and kind;
No friend like you on earth I'll find.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND, DAUGHTER AND GRANDCHILDREN.

In loving memory of our dear daughter and wife, Ida M. Kraft, who departed this life one year ago, Oct. 10, 1920:

One long year has passed, the saddest of all our life,
Since God called our dear, sweet daughter and wife.
Our hearts will never cease to ache,
Till in heaven we see thy dear, sweet face again.
Peaceful be thy sleep, dearest darling;
It is sweet to breath thy name.
We will meet thee, darling, some day over in that heavenly land,
Where there can be no more sad partings,
When we clasp thy loving, tender hand.
Sadly missed by
MOTHER AND HUSBAND.

THE "tune" in opportunity is music to our ears. We are "passing" it to you. "Oh, boy!" Deposit your "bank roll" here. A little money goes a "long way here." You'll certainly get that "good-by and good-night" signal if you get "down and out;" just keep up that "appearance." Get yourself a "new start;" there is no time in "life" that you get so "down and out" that you can't get into the "land of beginning again!" "that's Abrams' place" of clothes buying, and save. We have in "store" for you high-class suits; you can afford to wear two or three suits a season for the price of the customary one by purchasing our uncalled-for garments from our cleaning department; garments from tailor-made and from the best manufacturers, $10 to $20. Can you wear 34, 36, 38, 40, 46 to 50 sizes? Also English and plain models. Vests, 50c. Pants, $2 to $3.95. Coats, $5 to $10. Palm Beach suits, $5 to $7.50. Uncalled for Stetson hats, 95c to $1.50. STEINBECK ISSUES STATEMENT ON LOYALT

Says Sons Volunteered in World War and Father Fought for the Union.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 8.—[illegible]ust H. Steinbeck, of Union, secretary of the State Tax Commission, who paid a fine of $200 in the Federal court in St. Louis in 1918 in connection with a disloyalty charge and against whose appointment several posts of the American Legion have protested, today issued a statement as follows:

"My grandfather was naturalized in Franklin County, Missouri, more than 85 years ago, and my father was born there.

"When the Civil War broke out my father enlisted as a volunteer on the side of the Union in the Fi[illegible] Regiment, Missouri volunteer infantry, served three and one-half years and was discharged with honor as a commissioned officer. Although a soldier on the side of the Union he never harbored any bitterness toward those who fought against him. I shall never forget when I was but a small boy, he purchased a likeness of Gen. Grant and a likeness of Gen. Lee and hung these on opposite walls in the best room in the home on the farm.

"I have a wife and three sons, the youngest of whom is in his [illegible]teenth year. The grandfather of the mother of these sons volunteered as a soldier on the side of the Union. He left at home a wife and [illegible] small children to do for themselves as best they could.

"I have two sons who volunteered for the World War. I desire to emphasize volunteered, not because I think less of a drafted soldier, but to correct a statement that has been published that my sons were drafted. The older of these sons volunteered in April, 1917, and appeared for examination on May 5, 1917.

"In the World War I gave liberally of my means toward the Red Cross and similar war activities. The columns of the Republican Headlight were always open in favor of war activities and its various phases, and no charge was ever made for pay of it. I am today the publicity chairman for Franklin County, Missouri, for the Red Cross.

"I stand ready now to compare my loyalty and the loyalty of my family to our common country in the times of her distresses with the loyalty to that same country of my accusers."

PROTEST BY 40 ST. LOUIS FIRMS AGAINST INCREASE IN POSTAGE

Congressmen Notified by Chamber of Commerce of Attitude on Proposed Advance.

St. Louis Congressmen and Missouri Senators yesterday were notified of protest made recently by 40 St. Louis business firms against the proposed increase in first-class postage from 2 to 3 cents per ounce. A letter sent by P. V. [illegible], general secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, follows:

"About 40 firms doing business in St. Louis and members of the Chamber of Commerce have petitioned our board of directors to protest against a proposed increase in first-class postage from 2 cents to 3 cents per ounce on the ground that the decrease in mail matter by advertisers would prevent the Government from reaping any benefit from it and at the same time it will work a hardship on the business firms and advertisers, who are now carrying on their campaigns.

"This question was carefully considered by the Postal Committee of the chamber, and on the recommendation of that committee the board instructed me to advise you that in its opinion first class postage should not be increased. As a matter of fact, there has been much sentiment for years among business men that first class postage should be decreased and not increased."

A DIANA OF TODAY

The hunting season is now on, and the American girl, having mastered such masculine sports as football and hockey, is invading the hunting grounds in larger numbers than ever before. Miss Dorothy Deal, whose photograph appears above, is a California sportswoman. The expert will observe that she has been properly taught how to carry a shotgun.

“REAL AMERICAN” TYPE OF MA -- AND WOMAN IS FORMING --

Dr. Hrdlicka of the U. S. National Museum, after experiments extending over eight years, discovers that a distinct racial specimen of this country is not yet developed but that it is now in process of formation—In a few centuries the characteristic individual may be evolved -o- -o- -o-

WHAT should the “typical American” look like?

If a young man, should he resemble the conceptions of Gibson, Christy or James Montgomery Flagg—or that composite of all three that exists only in collar and underwear advertisements?

Should he be of the rugged sort depicted by Jack London or of that rather indefinite pattern known to writers of college stories as “clean-limbed”?

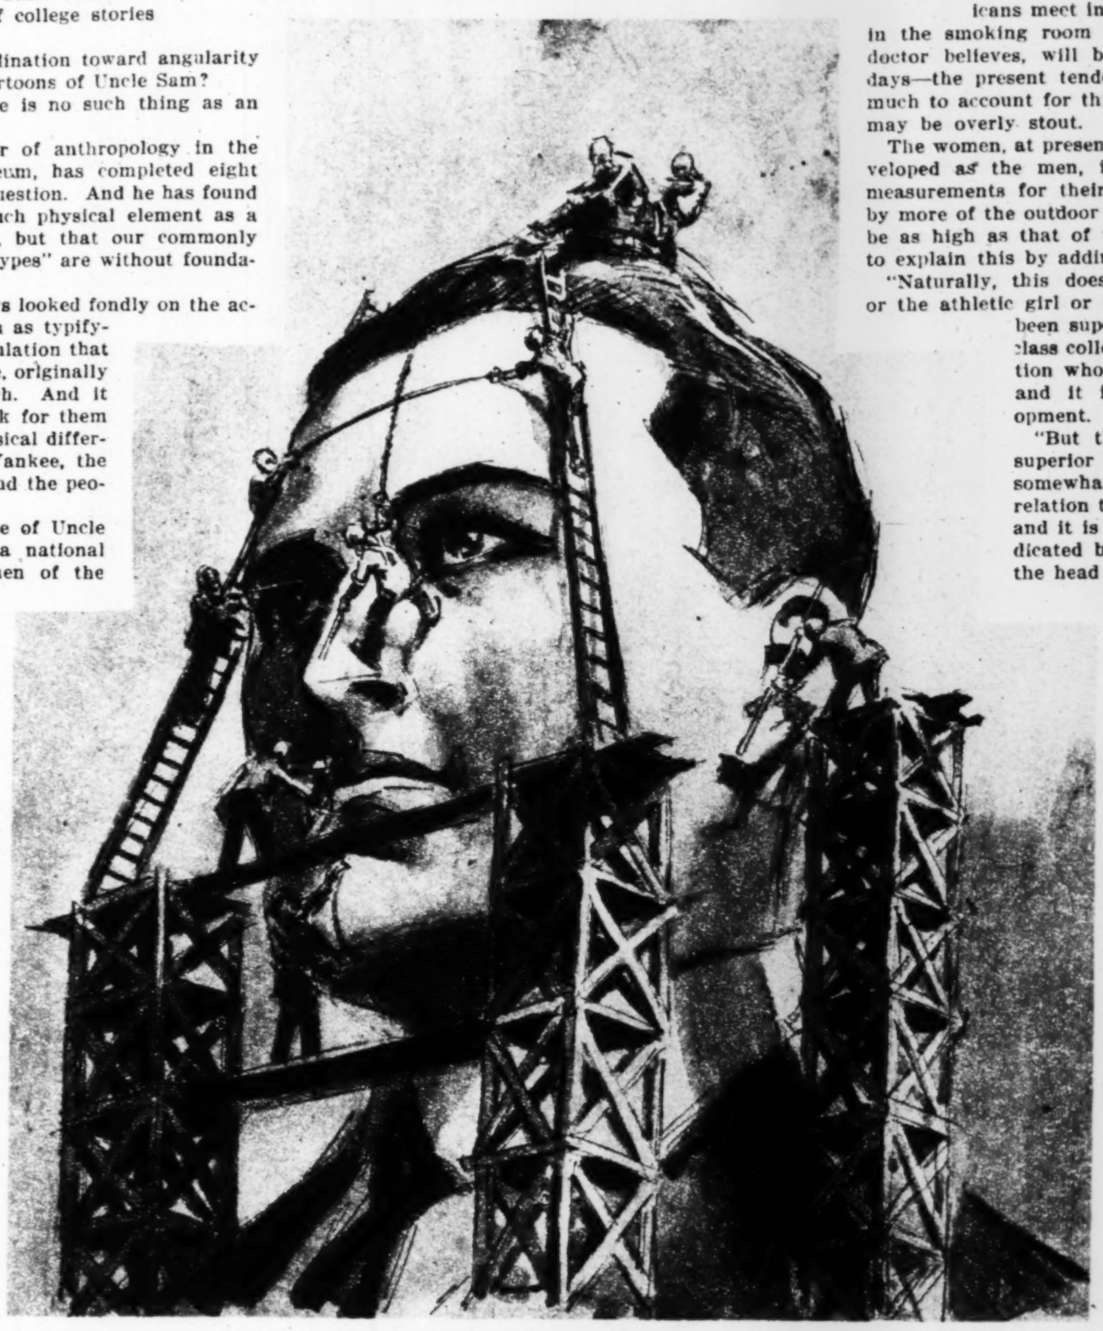
Or should he show an inclination toward angularity and lantern jaws like the cartoons of Uncle Sam?

The answer is brief—there is no such thing as an “American type.”

Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, curator of anthropology in the United State National Museum, has completed eight years of study of that very question. And he has found that not only is there no such physical element as a distinctively American type, but that our commonly accepted ideas about local “types” are without foundation.

School children have always looked fondly on the accepted pictures of Uncle Sam as typifying a distinct part of our population that gloried in the term of Yankee, originally meant as a term of reproach. And it may come as a distinct shock for them to learn that there is no physical difference between the so-called Yankee, the genuine “down-Easterner,” and the people of the South or West.

Furthermore, the caricature of Uncle Sam does not even depict a national type. Portraits of Frenchmen of the time of the Third Napoleon, especially of those who led a military life and who were wiry in build, show many who could have posed as the original of Uncle Sam. Marshal Chanzy, whose statue stands in the museum at Sedan and whose effigy also lies above his tomb at Buzancy, could have posed as a model for this American conception. The style of shaving, which left the male face adorned with the goatee, or “imperial,” in the days of 1870, added to the resemblance of many Frenchmen to our national character.



Dr. Hrdlicka has found that the people of the Southern states are not darker nor are the New Englanders taller than the average of the population. Heredity is still in evidence in various parts of the country where English, Scotch or Dutch ancestry can be readily traced, even after three generations in this country on the side of both parents.

But a national type is forming, and Dr. Hrdlicka says while heredity is still in evidence it is no longer absolute. A definite American type is developing in physiognomy, stature, build, pigmentation and other directions, as he expresses it.

In other words we are creating an element of similar facial appearance, bodily structure and coloring of skin and hair. The strain shows a decided tendency toward darkening of the hair and away from blondness. Were it possible for this stock to intermarry among themselves for several more centuries, says Dr. Hrdlicka, as distinct a national type would be produced as now exists in any country of Europe.

And this type has at least one characteristic of the picture of Uncle Sam—it is tall and inclined to be “spare” in build during youth. But, alas! There is an equally decided tendency to be overweight later in life. Our usual pictures of Uncle Sam show him as an attenuated individual, despite the grayness of his goatee, which indicates that he is well on in years. A truthful presentment, according to Dr. Hrdlicka, should show him with evidences of embonpoint.

Dr. Hrdlicka spent his eight years studying Americans whose ancestors on both sides had at least three native-born generations behind them. In spite of the fact that many such families had lived steadily in one portion of the country—like the mountaineers of Tennessee—thus handing down physical characteristics that they derived from foreign ancestry of possibly 200 years back, he found that there was already something new developing in the people as a whole—something they had in common, something acquired in this country.

In parts of the country where there has been intermarriage with other families of the same American ancestry, the initial development of the American type is more apparent. And although he can only summarize his findings in a general way, Dr. Hrdlicka believes he can draw a picture that will approach the real American type when that is finally developed.

The characteristics of this type will commence with tall stature. If a few small groups are disregarded, the type will be the tallest of the white races, averaging 5 feet 8 inches for the men and 5 feet 4 inches for the women. This superiority in height is a distinctively American acquisition. The form of the head will differ somewhat, according to original ancestry. But the face will have lost the prominence of the cheek bones and that of the angles of the jaw, now so strongly marked by mixtures of bloods. In the typical face an oval should be approached, of a straight-sided pattern.

The nose will vary, although it will tendency to the aquiline in males and cavo-convex in females. This latter ty nose is the sort which the lady noveli lights to call retrousse, when she is de ing her heroine.

The hands, feet, mouth and ears wi be large, neither will they be unduly The expression will be alert and ani with a keynote of easy good humor su is seen so often when a body of icans meet in some public gathering or in the smoking room of a Pullman. The men, doctor believes, will be well built in their yo days—the present tendency towards athletics wi much to account for this. In later life, however, may be overly stout.

The women, at present, are relatively not as we veloped as the men, in proportion to the acc measurements for their sex. Unless this is ch by more of the outdoor life, the physical type may be as high as that of the male. The doctor ha to explain this by adding:

“Naturally, this does not apply to the farm or the athletic girl or to one whose developmen been supervised and assisted in a h class college; but there is a large pr tion who do not fall into these cl and it is these who show sub opment.

“But the American woman sh superior head. The size of her he somewhat above what it usually relation to the average head of the and it is also perceptibly above that dicated by her stature. As the siz the head means a corresponding siz brain, we have here a hi ly favorable condition.”

The temperature, p and respiration take these descendants of w may be called “Old Am cans” showed a ma similarity in results. mean temperature, take rest, sitting, with a th mometer under the tong was 98.6 on an average males and 98.8 for fem The mean pulse, under same conditions, was m 71, females 76 per min Respiration for males 17.1, for females 18.2 minute.

Dr. Hrdlicka made the first announcement of h study on Sept. 27, before the Second Internatio Congress of Eugenics at the American Museum Natural History in New York. And he made so concise remarks upon his findings:

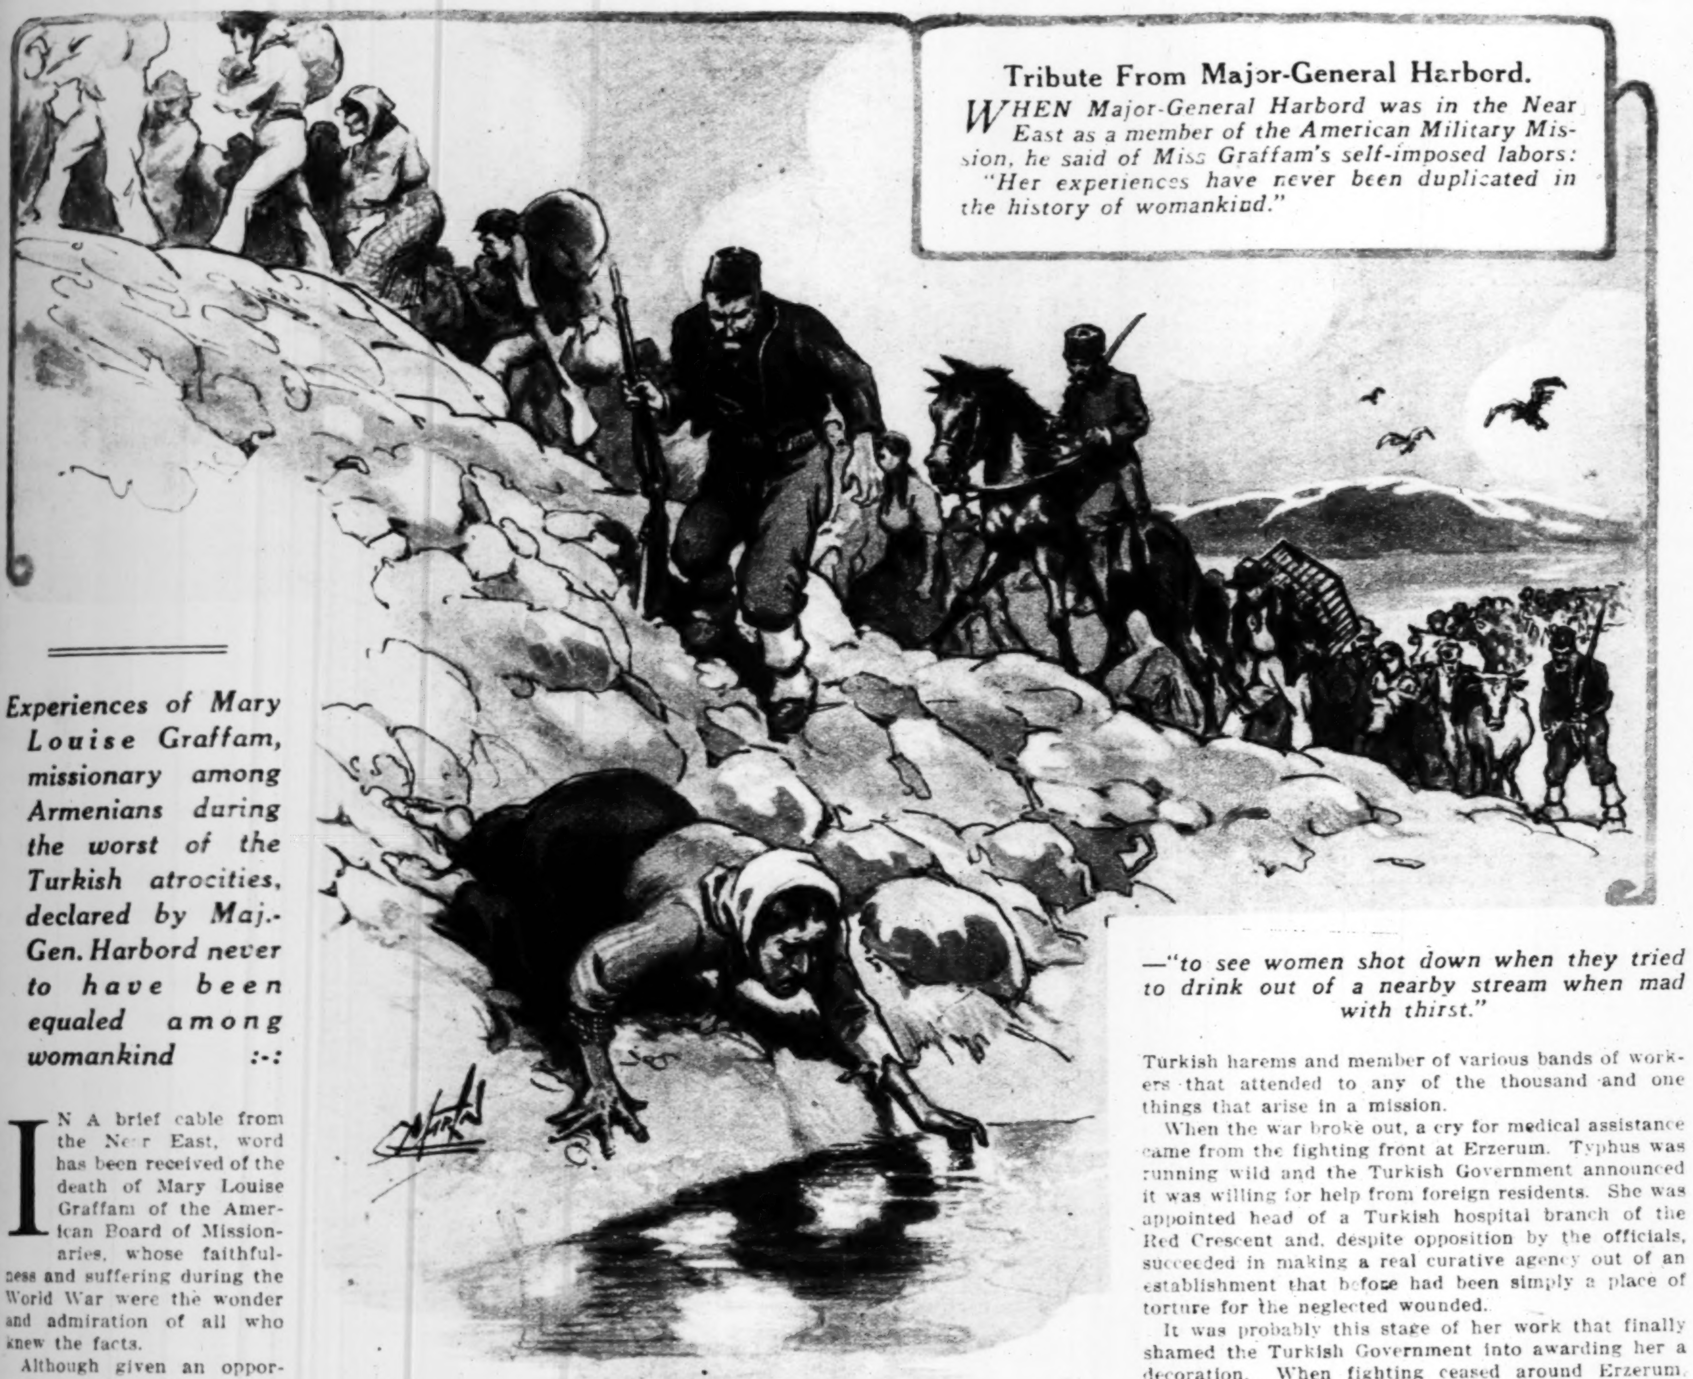
Death Ends Martyrdom of American Girl Known as the "Heroine of Sivas"



Tribute From Major-General Harbord.

WHEN Major-General Harbord was in the Near East as a member of the American Military Mission, he said of Miss Graffam's self-imposed labors: "Her experiences have never been duplicated in the history of womankind."

—"to see women shot down when they tried to drink out of a nearby stream when mad with thirst."

Experiences of Mary Louise Graffam, missionary among Armenians during the worst of the Turkish atrocities, declared by Maj.-Gen. Harbord never to have been equaled among womankind :-:

IN A brief cable from the Near East, word has been received of the death of Mary Louise Graffam of the American Board of Missionaries, whose faithfulness and suffering during the World War were the wonder and admiration of all who knew the facts.

Although given an opportunity to leave the country when the war broke out, Miss Graffam chose to remain with the Armenians she considered her special charges. When an entire colony was deported, she insisted upon being deported with them, although she knew she would have to suffer the robbery and hardships to which they were subject and might have to share slaughter, which all knew would be the fate of a large part.

Cut off from all supplies and from communication with the civilized world, but repeatedly told by the Turks to leave the country if she so desired, Miss Graffam chose to remain and share the lot of the Armenians. When they starved, she starved. When they were compelled to leave a region and were driven over the plains like cattle, she went with them. And when the war ended she refused to take the rest which her condition rendered absolutely necessary and remained to help, as far as possible, in the work of rehabilitation of shattered families, which she knew would progress slowly in inexperienced hands.

Major-General Harbord, head of the American mission to the Near East, after hearing of her experiences, exclaimed that they had never been duplicated by womankind. Even the reluctant admiration of the Turks was aroused and in 1917 she was finally decorated with the order of the Red Crescent by the Turkish Government as a reward for her self-devotion in the cause of "the sick and ill-fated." The wording is that of the Turkish Government itself and there is grim satire in it, inasmuch as all the sickness and death was caused by its own deliberate orders.

Miss Graffam is known as the heroine of Sivas, because she was long identified with mission work at that town. Her work, however, including her travels during deportations, took her all over that section of the Near East where fighting was going on and she was at Erzerum when the struggle was hottest.

When the Turks found she was determined to accompany the Armenians they had ordered deported, they permitted her to be robbed by the Kurdish natives, like any other member of the party. She was compelled to march with the Armenians, to live in the same semi-starved state as they did, to stand all the hardships, such as deprivation of water on the march, that was forced on the other victims. She was compelled to watch young girls being seized and carried off for Turkish harems and to see women shot down when they tried to drink out of a nearby stream when mad with thirst.

When this form of hardship failed to deter her, she was placed where she could see the contingent of Armenians that was marched out daily for execution. At Malatia she was confined in a house where the bodies of the massacred lay on every side and where dogs and vultures fought over the corpses of the slain around the windows. The scent of decay was so great that even some carbolic acid which she managed to obtain and with which she sprinkled the room thoroughly could not drive away the ever-present odor of death.

Miss Graffam was graduated from Oberlin College in 1894. Before the war, when connected with the mission board, she was sent to Sivas, where she became principal of a school of 200 native girls, an important feature of what was known as the mission compound. Here, besides being an instructor in classes, she was director of Y. W. C. A. work, itinerant missionary, one of the women's board that visited Turkish harems and member of various bands of workers that attended to any of the thousand and one things that arise in a mission.

MARY LOUISE GRAFFAM

When the war broke out, a cry for medical assistance came from the fighting front at Erzerum. Typhus was running wild and the Turkish Government announced it was willing for help from foreign residents. She was appointed head of a Turkish hospital branch of the Red Crescent and, despite opposition by the officials, succeeded in making a real curative agency out of an establishment that before had been simply a place of torture for the neglected wounded.

It was probably this stage of her work that finally shamed the Turkish Government into awarding her a decoration. When fighting ceased around Erzerum, she was allowed to return to Sivas.

And soon after she returned, a deportation decree was issued. Leading Armenian men were seized and the women and children were rounded up in their homes and told to get ready for deportation. When she went to the Turkish official in charge, the Vali, she earnestly requested that at least some of the younger children and the sick be left behind.

"Why leave any behind?" asked the Turk, reproachfully. "Surely you do not wish to separate families?"

This hypocritical type of reply was received whenever she attempted intercession. It was here that she took her resolve and announced that, if the Armenians were going to be deported, she would be deported with them. The Vali seemed nonplussed by this remark, but made no comment. So Miss Graffam made what preparation she could for the march.

The first day's journey brought the band of wearied exiles, heavily guarded by troops, to the summit of a mountain, where they rolled in their blankets and dropped exhausted to sleep. That night they received no injury. At dusk the next evening they camped near a Kurdish village and the guards permitted these to swarm through the camp, stealing whatever they could lay their hands on. At first only small articles were taken. But as successive villages were reached the depredations became more thorough and blankets, rugs, donkeys and cows were all seized, until the miserable marchers had nothing but the clothes they wore. Even an attractive garment would be torn from the victims, who were unable to resist.

The next day the slaughters began. Fifty men were singled out from the party, marched ahead of the rest and were never seen again. The speed of the march was increased and the women and children who could not keep up and who dropped from the ranks were shot. Crazed with thirst by the march, some tried to break from the ranks to get to a nearby river. These were promptly shot, the guards evidently being under instructions to seize any excuse to kill the prisoners.

Through all these horrors, Miss Graffam spent her time going from one sufferer to another, doing anything she could to alleviate distress with what small means she had at hand. Once she nearly met death at the hands of a party of Kurds, who were following along the cliffs as the Armenians passed through a defile, hurling rocks down upon them. Her pleadings

- Sarah Bernhardt, at Seventy-Six Writes Her First Love Story

Oldest of active stage stars, who has appeared in innumerable dramas and romantic plays, presents from her years of experience what she considers an ideal love story should be—And here you have the novel in condensed form -o- -o- -o-

AS SHE nears the age of 76 (or it may be 77, for some uncertainty exists about the date of her birth), Sarah Bernhardt has published a novel. Yes, it is "the divine Sarah," wonderful actress, successful sculptor, painter, playwright and manager, who thus enters a new field.

Was there ever a more indomitable artist, in France or any other country?

Her stage career, emblazoned with some of the most dazzling triumphs which ever fell to the lot of an actress, has covered more than 60 years, but she toils on with the same enthusiasm. Frequently, she has stated that she wants to keep on with her playing until the end.

"Quand Meme," says the motto which she chose long ago—"Whatever may happen." Bernhardt's admirers recalled this motto, at the time of the amputation of her right leg, six years ago, for the injury to her knee which necessitated it was not such as would have interfered with the ease of private life. But she preferred taking the risk to giving up her profession and further accomplishment.

Now she has written a novel, published a few weeks ago in Paris. "Petite Idole" is the name of the book. It tells the story of a young actress, and the critics say it is well worth reading. Without being noisily hailed as a "great" novel, it is a work of more than passing merit, not entirely dependent for a friendly reception upon the glamour of the author's name. While one may feel a certain amount of disappointment that "Petite Idole" cannot be read as a thinly disguised account of events in Bernhardt's own life, yet it is largely a novel of the stage and some of the most interesting chapters, such as the scene where the young heroine takes her examination at the Conservatory before being enrolled there as a student of acting, are undoubtedly drawn from life.

But even Parisians acknowledge that the story as a whole is pure fiction, which possibly makes the writing of it a more noteworthy achievement in an artistic sense than the production of a veneered autobiography would have been. Bernhardt's "Memoirs" were published in 1907.

The critics describe the treatment of "Petite Idole" as being partly sentimental, partly realistic, and the differentiation of characters as successful. The plot, telling how the heroine drifts into a marriage engagement and afterwards becomes aware that she loves another man, has a tragic outcome. The atmosphere of the book is highly moral.

Quite apart from its inherent merits or blemishes as a novel, "Petite Idole" must possess a special interest for playgoers as the product of "the greatest of actresses." There will be a natural curiosity to see what kind of a story she produces, this marvelous veteran of the drama, who has played more than 200 parts in her time, and spent much of her life in the magic worlds created by such masters as Racine, Hugo, Sardou and Rostand.

How many novels have been published when the authors were 70 years old? The list of such names would be rather brief. And whether Bernhardt was born on Oct. 23, 1845, as is generally believed, or on Oct. 23, 1844, as has sometimes been stated, the fact remains that she is closer to 80 than to 70, and still hard at work, still adding to her achievements.

The question about the exact year of her birth is due to the fact that the record made at the time was destroyed in the flames of the Commune at Paris. However, in such a long and brilliant career as that of Bernhardt, one year more or less does not matter very much.

Bernhardt has played in St. Louis on numerous occasions, for this city was included in her various American tours. Her last appearance here was in April, 1918, when she presented a war sketch at the Orpheum, and later in the week gave the famous death scene from "Camille." The voice, not as golden as it had been in her prime, was still wonderful for a woman in her seventies, and the same old fire blazed in her heart. Handicapped as she was by the wooden limb, dramatic reviewers and public alike enthused over her performance.

During that same week, Bernhardt addressed a large crowd at Twelfth and Olive streets, during the exercises in observance of Liberty Day. Standing on the steps of her limousine, she made an impassioned little speech, voicing devotion to the cause of the allies, and her certainty of victory. At the close she saluted the big statue of "America Defending Civilization," and with dramatic gesture cried out: "Victoire! Vive la liberte!"

Dates are vivified by a comparison with big events in history. Thus, assuming that Bernhardt was born in 1845, she was 4 years old when the great rush of "the '49ers" to California, by way of Cape Horn, Panama and overland, began. Andrew Jackson, seventh President of the United States, died in 1845, the accepted year of her birth, and William F. Cody ("Buffalo Bill") was born that same year.

When, after appearing in minor roles, Bernhardt made her formal debut at the Comedie Francaise on Aug. 11, 1862, the Civil War was in full swing in America. West Virginia had just been admitted to the Union and the Federal Government had just issued orders for the draft of 300,000 more men, for nine months' service, besides the 300,000 volunteers previously called for. In the Northern States there was keen expectation of the speedy capture of Richmond by Gen. George B. McClellan, but the Confederates did not abandon their capital until April 2, 1865.

In France, King Louis Philippe had abdicated in favor of his grandson, the Compte de Paris, in February, 1848, but a provisional Government was formed which became the Second Republic. Before either of these events, Sarah Bernhardt was born. In December of 1848, when Bernhardt was 3 years old, Louis Napoleon, nephew of Napoleon I, was elected President, assumed dictatorial powers by his famous coup d'etat of December, 1851, and was proclaimed Emperor of the French a year later.

Sarah Bernhardt in her dressing room last year, after presenting Racine's "Athalie," when she was congratulated by the President of France, who added that "she was, indeed, the everlasting glory of their country."

To most people who read this article, the events mentioned above are in the remote past, but Bernhardt has survived them all and not only still clings to life but to her career as well, even assuming the extra task of writing the novel which has just been published. It will be interesting to see what sort of a novel it is which bears the name of Sarah Bernhardt on the title page.

The "little idol" of the story is Esperance Darbois, a beautiful, delicate girl, the daughter of prosperous people. At the age of 16 she astounds and horrifies the family circle and their friends by announcing that she wishes to enter the Conservatory as a student of acting. The father is a distinguished professor of philosophy at the Sorbonne, and he shares the dismay of the others at such an idea.

A family council, including godfather, uncle and cousin, is held to discuss the proposal and all are firmly opposed to it. Under the tension of the discussion, Esperance faints, but is revived when her indulgent father whispers in her ear that her wish shall be gratified.

So she goes to the Conservatory for an examination, accompanied by her mother. Regnier of the Comedie Francaise and Sardou are among the judges. The latter is so impressed with the girl's talent that he calls upon her father and asks permission for her to take the leading role in a play which he is to produce soon, the principal character in which is that of a 15-year-old girl.

The father assents, and thus Esperance's introduction to the theater is accomplished. For six months, accompanied by a duenna, she attends classes and rehearsals at the Conservatory, in preparation for the debut. During this time she makes numerous friends among the other pupils, all of whom are not "correct."

The debut is a great success, and Sardou is so delighted with the reception of his play and of the new actress that he calls at the Darbois home, only to find Esperance weeping at her father's knee over his sorrow at her appearance in public.

Sending the girl out of the room, Sardou remonstrates with the father as follows:

"This is all that your philosophy does for you; you torture the child that you love. * * * The career that she has chosen is full of dangers, fruitful in despair, giving a free field to the scandalmongers. Your task, my dear friend, is to protect your daughter and above all to keep for her a fireside of tenderness, love and indulgence!"

With her father's consent, Esperance keeps on with her studies at the Conservatory, until an unexpected opening for her occurs in the illness of a distinguished actress just before a performance of "Hernani," which the Comedie is undertaking in Brussels. Esperance goes to Brussels with her chaperon and a cousin, and scores another triumph in the new role.

In addition, her performance there adds to the infatuation of a Belgian Count, Albert Styvens, who has seen and admired her at Paris. He is a man of noble character but unattractive appearance, and hitherto has cared nothing for women, but now resolves to wed Esperance or enter a monastery. Albert's widowed mother, because of her devotion to her son, looks favorably on the suit, but hopes that her prospective daughter-in-law may be persuaded to retire from the stage.

Albert now secures a foothold in the Darbois family by becoming a private pupil of Prof. Darbois. He soon wins the liking of Esperance's parents, but inspires a singular terror in the heart of the neurasthenic girl, by reason of his unusual height, his somber mien and his long arms and hands. Even his presence seems to fill her with dread and foreboding.

Although Albert is well aware that Esperance does not care for him, he remains a devoted lover. The girl's family and friends believe it would be an excellent marriage for her, also expressing the hope that it would cause her to leave the stage. But Esperance's dislike for the Count remains, although she is a dutiful girl and wishes to please her parents.

When summer comes, the Darbois family depart for a vacation on their farm in Brittany, accompanied by several young friends. They hope that a sojourn there may benefit the health of Esperance, for it seems that the emotional strain and excitement of the theater have weakened her heart.

This portion of the novel pictures delightfully a land which Bernhardt knows well, for she herself spends her summers in Brittany. She describes in detail the simplicity and happiness of life there in summer among both the peasants and fishermen, and the visitors. The reader becomes well acquainted with the pleasant group who spend their holiday in riding horseback, taking drives and sitting on the beach in tranquil conversation.

Presently Albert writes to Prof. Darbois, asking leave to lay before him a difficult problem in philosophy. The professor, as Albert had foreseen, invites his pupil to pay them a visit. Esperance is not overly pleased with the news that he is coming, but Albert exerts himself to be agreeable and even the prejudiced girl has to admit that he is a pleasant addition to the company.

Soon afterwards Albert saves the life of Esperance in a runaway, at the risk of his own life, and is, in fact, so severely injured that his mother has to be sent for. On his recovery, there seems to be no escape for Esperance from rewarding him with a promise of marriage. Besides her own gratitude, she is further impelled to the step by the wishes of her parents and friends. So she gives her word, although aware that the presence of another man—the Duc de Morlay la Branche—causes her delicious trepidations.

Then she discovers that her stage career has prevented her father from letting his name be presented for the Academy, an honor which he has long desired, so she writes to her prospective mother-in-law that she will relinquish the career and return to a sheltered life as the wife of Albert, the diplomat.

Presently a charity fete is arranged for at a neighboring chateau, with Mademoiselle Darbois as the principal attraction. The Duc de Morlay is a guest at the chateau, also Esperance, her cousin, her fiance and friends. The Duke and Esperance discover their mutual love, the Duke avows it to the Count and there is a duel, in which Albert receives a mortal wound. As he dies the Count clasps his mother and his fiancee in his long arms and bids the girl never to remove

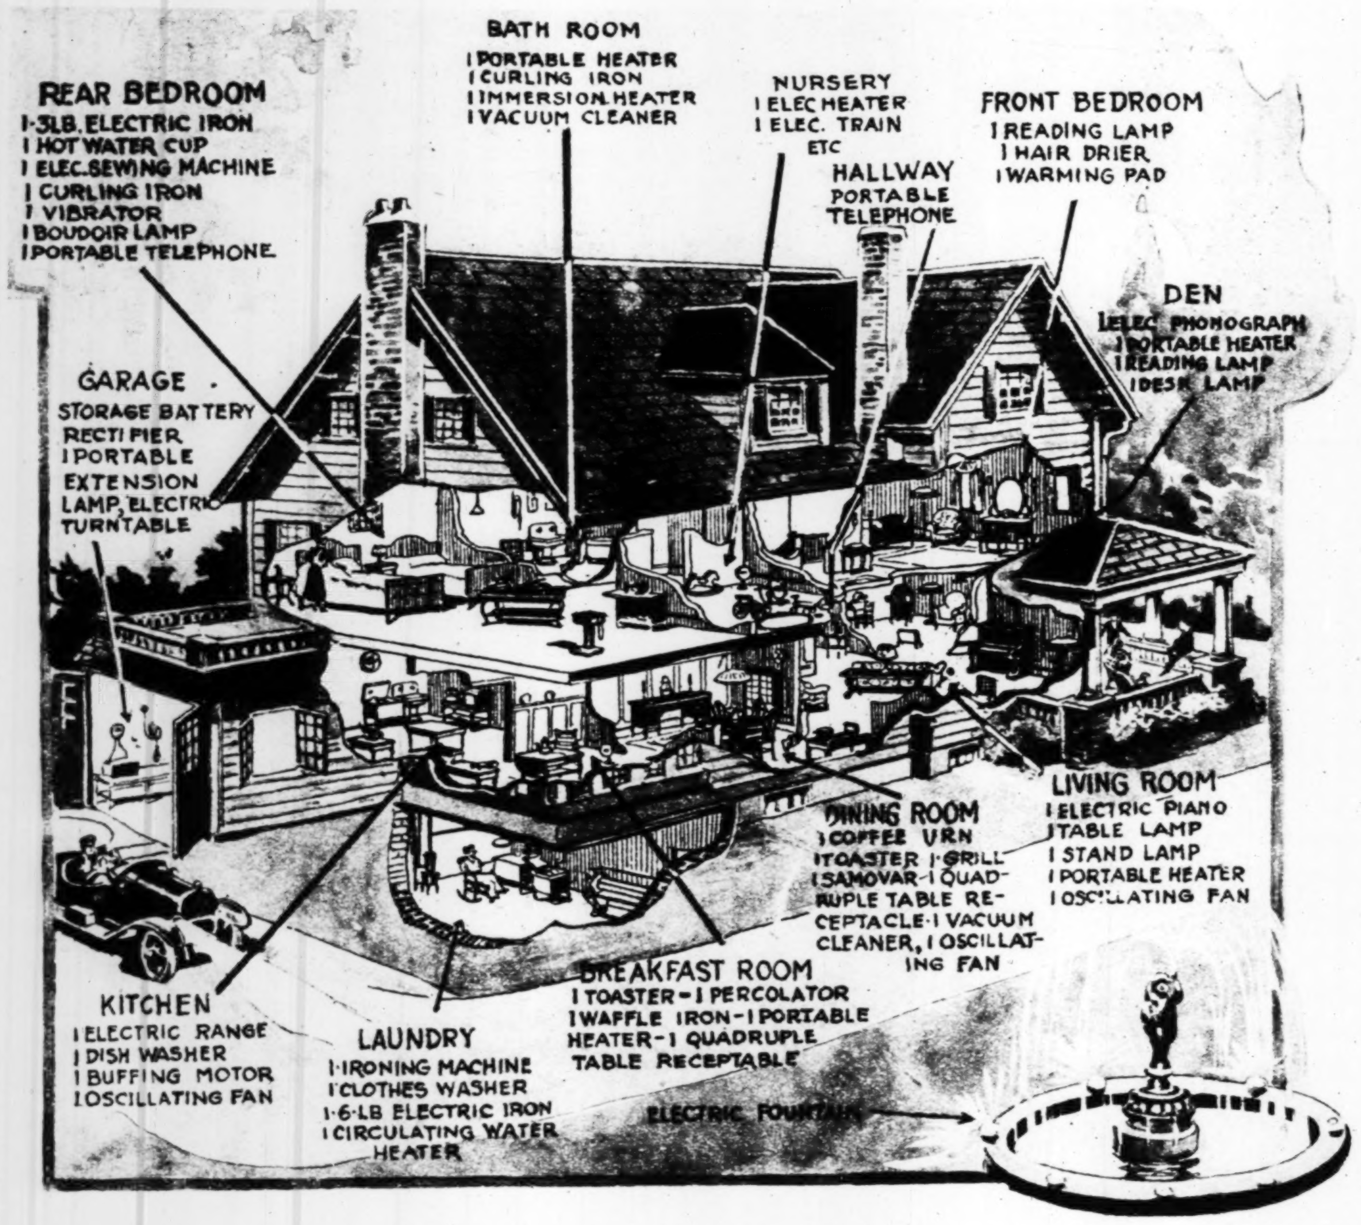
"Electrical Age," Fondly Predicted Forty Years Ago, Is an Actuality of the Present

Average householder has accepted successive inventions so gradually that a completely electrified period has crept upon us almost unawares and the forecasts of 1881 can now be fulfilled by any person in a modern apartment :: ::



WAY back in 1881, when arc lights were first tried out on a Fourth street corner in St. Louis, so that their possible utility as a future lighting medium might be guessed and there was much talk about the coming "electrical age."

Comparatively little was known about the practical use of electricity in those days. The arc light was a spluttering affair that created much work for the Fire Department when it was first used to illuminate stores. Telephones were regarded as a good advertisement for a drug store—about the only place they were seen—particularly because there were so few connections possible that customers never tried to use them. They were simply something to talk about, like the bath tub in a tenement flat.

The incandescent light, with its filament of bamboo carbon, due to appear a short time later, was chiefly remarkable for the fidelity with which it reproduced the pulsations of the dynamo in its flickering. Electric driven motive power was predicted and an electric car, driven by storage batteries, was tried out on the Lindell system—along Washington avenue—in the middle '80s. It operated on the same schedule as the horse cars, so no records were broken.

But the mere fact that so little was known about electricity made the conjecture all the wilder. This mysterious force was going to revolutionize everything in industry. It was going to be the coming transportation power, in some vague fashion, without the intervention of steam or water to develop it.

There was nothing new in this seeing of visions. Every notable invention has been greeted in the same fashion.

In the meantime the electric age has crept upon us and it might astonish the average householder if he cast about and noticed to what extent he depends upon electricity. He may scoff at the trolley, but where would his auto be without the battery?

There are many uses to which electricity can be put in the modern household where it is still ignored—partly through long habit in the use of other means, partly because the manufacturers have not got around to making the necessary appliances on a scale to supply everybody. For instance, the tiny immersion heater which will warm a tumbler of water or a cup of coffee is in fairly general use, but an immersion heater for use in the bath tub in hot weather is but rarely seen. Similarly, gas heaters are generally used, but an electric coil heater around the boiler is seldom heard of in a private residence. Similarly, the housewife who uses a sewing machine has for so long been accustomed to use the foot pedal that it was a real struggle to get the sewing machine motor into many homes.

In the August number of Science and Invention, the monthly magazine devoted to matters of scientific and general interest, the subject is handled under the title of "The Electrical Home of Today." An article shows just what things may reasonably be expected to be found in a modern home where electricity is appreciated for its tremendous labor-saving properties.

In this summary, only articles are mentioned that can be obtained readily and at a reasonable price. With one or two exceptions, they are articles that are in use in a large per cent of modern apartments that are fitted out in up-to-date fashion.

On entering the hallway of such a home, for instance, the light is furnished by shaded globes, probably with the indirect method of reflection which casts the light to the ceiling, and a portable telephone. Although the heat could also be furnished by electricity if required, steam or hot water still has the call in most apartments and houses.

Passing from the hall into the living room, an electric table lamp, a stand lamp, an oscillating fan, a portable heater and an electric piano may be among the furnishings. Possession of the last named musical article, of course, may depend on the good nature of the neighbors.

In the breakfast room adjoining is a toaster, a coffee percolator, a waffle iron, a portable heater and a table receptacle in which dishes or water may be kept warm. The dining room is similarly equipped with the addition of a coffee urn, a samovar and an oscillating fan. In both rooms there are special attachments for the vacuum cleaner, so that crumbs may be removed at once.

In the man's den may be found the usual portable heater, the reading lamp and the desk lamp. These portable heaters have reached the stage where they are depended upon entirely for warmth in some climates, but in most of the larger cities they are regarded as an adjunct to the main heating plant of steam or hot water. For the early days of fall or spring, however, the uses of the portable electric heater are manifold. They are especially evident on days when the sun is scorching in the middle of the day, but when the shades of night bring dampness and chill. The turn of a switch is a much pleasanter operation even than the simplified method of the gas log, and the portable electric heater has come into its own with a rush in the last few years.

In the den may also be found an electric phonograph, which is of particular value when porch dances are given, as it can be made to keep on playing instead of running down. Like the electric piano, however, this form of music depends largely on the sufferance of the neighbors, as some of the raucous jazz tunes of the present day can readily lose whatever charm they may be thought to possess under very slight repetition.

In the two bedrooms a variety of electric toilet articles can be so distributed as not to unduly crowd one apartment. The front bedroom, for instance, may contain a reading lamp, a hair drier and a warming pad. This last may either be of metal and designed for heating the bed before occupancy or it may be of asbestos and so constructed as to fulfill the mission of the old hot-water bottle. It is a singularly cheering implement to have around on nights when the mercury suddenly drops to zero and below when the heat inside has died down.

The rear bedroom may contain an electric iron, a hot-water cup, an electric sewing machine, a curling iron, a vibrator, a boudoir lamp and a portable telephone.

It is doubtful, however, if any more practical use can be found for electricity than in kitchen and laundry appliances. An electric range and a dishwasher save untold labor in the kitchen and it is possible to install an oscillating fan for the benefit of the cook when they are used. The fan will create no such disturbance with its cooling breeze as it would in a kitchen where the old coal range was used.

A buffing motor is another appliance now obtainable everywhere. This is a small motor with miniature wheels of soft leather or even of velvet for polishing the silver. It can also be equipped with a small emery or soapstone wheel for sharpening the kitchen cutlery and table carvers, but a more practical machine is a small electric grindstone for this particular purpose. The buffer works on exactly the same principle as the machine used by the brass and metal buffers' fraternity.

In the laundry an ironing machine, a clothes washer, a set of electric irons and a circulating water heater may be installed. This latter form of heater will undoubtedly supplant the cumbersome old boiler that derives its heat from gas flame or coal range. The ironing machine may now be obtained on the principle of the steam pressers that can be seen in a tailor shop, but without the laborious process of going over large surfaces by hand. For hotels and large households, a rotary ironing machine for handling sheets, towels and table linen is well worth while.

One phase of invention that commenced early but has developed gradually is the electric toy. Almost as soon as the possibilities of electricity were discovered, the toy maker put his wares on the market. One does not have to hark back so very far to find when the first electric flashlight was put on the market—in 1900 they were advertised as curiosities and their practical use seemed to be appreciated only by a few miners. Through the fatality of circumstances and the irony of fate that governs our affairs, the batteries of the period were exhausted so quickly that few miners could afford to keep themselves supplied with electric flashlights, although now they are cheap and reliable.

The nursery in a modern home, accordingly, may well be expected to contain an array of toys of all sorts, equipped with electric power. The shop windows will give a better idea of these than mere description. In an age where everyone who drives a car should know something about his batteries, this early training in the nursery is of the greatest value. One of the most practical toys that can be furnished a child of a scientific turn of mind is one of the miniature electric railways, with its many yards of tin track and its network of tiny switches. Miniature motor cars and

Merry Battle of Wits Over Problem

England's surplus of 2,000,000 young women, and their independence in disregarding old customs, has pulpit, laity and professional class all wrought up over their future—Here are some of the things said in her favor and against her -o- -o- -o- -o-

AN AFTERSWELL of the World War which has been particularly violent in the British Isles is the upheaval in the economic status of women there. To a lesser extent, their social relations with the world have changed also. All classes of society (and a society where the fair sex outnumbers the other by about 2,000,000 persons) are confronted by this phenomenon—the New Woman.

The New Woman has firmly turned her back on many of the ideals which obtained in the Victorian period. She flouts both tradition and Mrs. Grundy to a degree which has called down upon her the wrath of conservatively minded persons in all stations of life, including many women, styled "old-fashioned" by the objects of all this fuss.

But the New Woman does not lack for defenders, who point out that she is a logical development of progress generally, and especially of the war and of a group where the war casualties have rendered marriage impossible for a vast number of women, who must earn their own living, whether they want to or not. Some of the comments are downright ill-natured, as that of the gentleman who inquires acidly in respect of the ridiculed Victorian ladies if we have "forgotten that they were really educated"?

In the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine of last Sunday there were published several interesting contributions to this heated discussion now raging in England, the writers including Lady Astor, Member of Parliament; Father Bernard Vaughan, S. J., well-known social worker in London, and several authors. Other opinions, from a slightly different angle, are reproduced below.

By LENA ASHWELL

SOME years ago a distinguished woman, an aristocrat of the old regime, determined that she would not meet a pushing lady who was forging her successful way into society. She extricated herself from the embarrassment of an introduction when the lady descended upon her by hastily leaving the house, saying to the hostess that "she would not meet the scum." Returning home, she repented of her discourtesy and wrote a letter of apology, explaining that she "regretted using the word 'scum,' she should have said 'cream;' she meant the stuff that floats to the top."

The difficulty in life is that the scum is apt to imagine, as it floats so securely on the top, that it is in reality cream, and thick cream at that. Much criticism has been hurled at the modern woman, the ever-recurring "new woman;" and the many bitter things which have been written seem to me to be applicable to this stuff, cream or scum, which floats on the top.

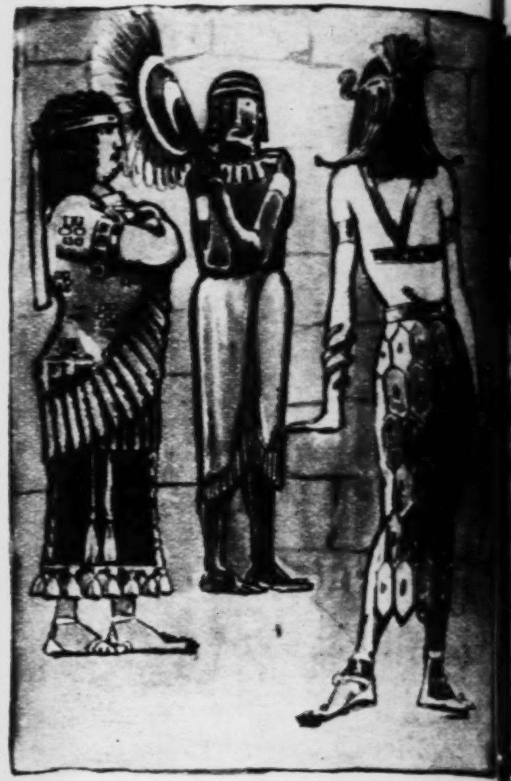
There undoubtedly exist selfish, greedy, overdressed, useless women. It is obvious that although some may appear in indecent costumes, sometimes these women are only too well and expensively covered.

After a great storm in any bay or any lake, however crystal clear and pure the water, one finds on the edge refuse which has been thrown out from the deep. It may be the first thing to attract one's attention, but the clearness of the deep lake remains. Modern clothes, which appear to concern deeply deans, Judges and some distinguished women, are, after all, but clothes, an indication of character at most. It is but a superficial matter.

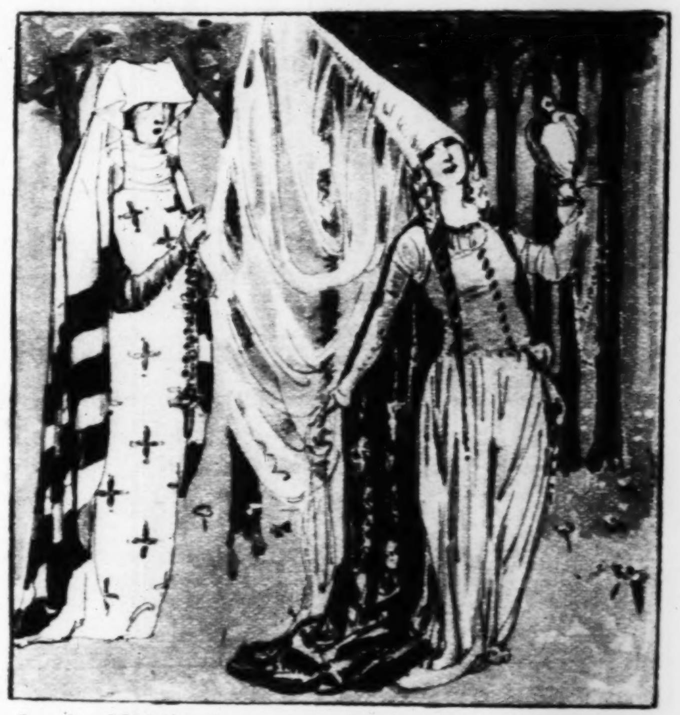
In the good old days women were upholstered, not dressed. Their figures were pushed upward and downward, with little regard to the internal organs. Undergarments were of incredible bulk, being neither cool nor warm, only solid. Legs of furniture had reappeared without their curly coverings of the Victorian era, but the human leg was entirely concealed, and dresses swept the streets. The traffic was all horse traffic, so the streets were none too clean.

In those days of the perfect woman, hats were perched on top of the head and long hatpins attached them to the hair, but the gentlest wind could not resist a tussle with the useless thing; necks were covered with high collars tightly tied; women wore wool from the bandaged neck to the carefully concealed ankle, and caught cold quite as frequently and had influenza just as much as now. Even so, there were people who cried out against the reckless indecency of women, which was alleged to be heading them straight for the abyss, like the Gadarene swine.

The upholstering has gone with the corset. Dresses are loose, hats fit the head, hatpins have almost disappeared, underclothing is light and warm and easily washed at home, legs are much in evidence; but the human form is as free as in the days of Greece. The new woman is new, and between her and the older generation there is a chasm which only love can bridge



About 5000 B. C. it was recorded: "Our girls are getting out of hand."



In the Middle Ages, too, the fashions of the young shocked their grandmothers.

The papers may be filled with the protests of the wise, but youth does not care a pin. She has found freedom. She does not care in the least what men think of her; that high (?) standard has gone. "He for God only; she for God in him," Milton's view of women, is deader than the dodo.

She has found another world, and all the adverse criticism of an age that is dead will not deflect her. She is trying to shake off fear; and thousands and millions of women have been beaten by fear. She has no reverence for anything she feels is insincere or unreal. She often almost dislikes her relatives and home because of restrictions which appear ridiculous, for above and beyond everything she is determined to be free. Were all the gods of the home worthy of reverence and blind obedience?

The relations between the sexes have had a very wholesome readjustment. There is much more friendship and understanding, much less of that detestable suggestion that if young people of the opposite sex speak, talk or eat together, they must be furtively in love. "The women are unsexed," is the cry hurled at them, and is not that a splendidly wholesome thing? The centuries have been obsessed with sex.

The modern woman looks squarely at life. She knows that, as the proportion of the sexes is as three to one, it is unlikely that she will marry. She must look elsewhere for her life interest. She looks calmly at men, and she does not mean to marry beneath her. She needs a mental and moral, as well as a social equal. She knows that the valuations which governed society are fundamentally unsound. The survival of the fittest is not yet true. The world is not yet ready for the finest, truest and best to survive inevitably. The isolated fighting unit, building and living with his family in an impregnable vault of his own creating, seems a very small fellow after the great demand to serve, give up one's self, one's career, one's life because one's country was in need.

The storm has been devastating. We are always feeling its results. Lately in our sports several of the men who would have played for England have fought their fight and gone from us; the women have not died, but they have had all their roots torn up. Straight from school they plunged into work according to their capacities and opportunities. Besides their hereditary jobs of cooking, mending and scrubbing; in the fields, the munition factories, driving cars, felling trees, conducting trams, in skilled and unskilled occupations, many of which had been considered impossible for women, they gave their strength to England.

And these children who matured in war time, whose youth was war, who feel subconsciously all that they have lost, are met with the cry of those who neither felt nor fought. "Let us forget the war. We do not want to hear about the war. Let us go back to pre-war conditions, pre-war standards." It is quite right that the standard for women should be high, because the position of women is vital to civilization. Where women have no position, civilization is stagnant.

The civilization that Germany produced is a sure indication of the result of treating women as inferior to men. Rumors from Russia tell the same tale.

Towards the end of the coal strike a business man who controlled large works prophesied much woe and poverty from the universal depression of the economic life of the country. His depression was extreme. He compared our situation with the superior one of other countries, and their capacity for work and freedom to work to the full limit of their energy. He wound up his very interesting and very depressing remarks with the significant statement that he had hoped that the influence of women would have prevented the catastrophe of strikes and that women would have

Women are suspicious of politics; they ve no confidence in the destructive side f the political system. MAN, TOO, IS NOT LIKE HIS GRANDFATHER

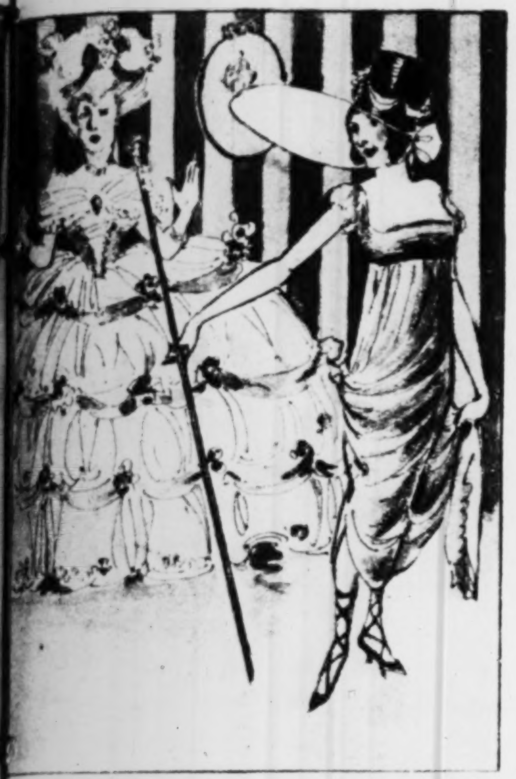
By Sarah A. Tooley

WHEN George Eliot, a very "new woman" to her own generation, made "Mrs. Poyser" say, in extenuation of feminine shortcomings, that the Almighty had made women to match the men, she struck a fundamental truth which is applicable today. The new woman is but the counterpart of the new man.

The young man back from the war, full of spirit and adventure and of questionings and dissatisfaction, is as great a contrast to the early Victorian young man, with his mutton-chop whiskers, genteel waist and mawkish sentimentality, as is the modern go-ahead, capable young woman to the fainting, simpering damsel of 60 years ago.



The year 1800 saw dowagers scandalized at the clothes their daughters called fashionable.

By FRANK PEARCE

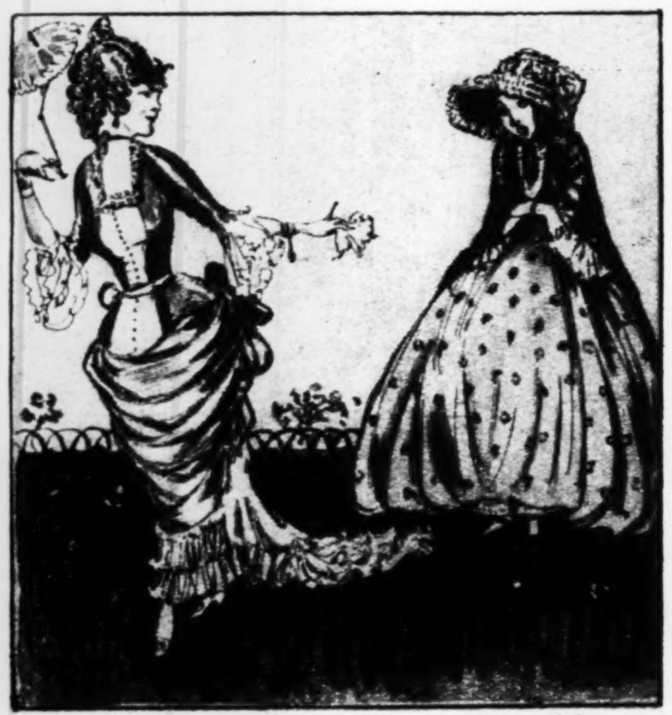
IN THE discussion you have initiated I presume a man's opinion may find expression. The ladies of the Victorian age are held up to ridicule because they affected crinolines and smelling bottles and coal-scuttle bonnets, but have we forgotten that they were really educated, wrote a beautiful Italian hand and read French and Italian and knew something of history, politics, botany and water-color drawing?

The new women I have met are appallingly ignorant of everything but lawn tennis, the fox-trot and racing. In Tattersall's rings there used to be three women at the most; now there are hundreds. There are even lady bookmakers. They plume themselves on new-found ways of getting a living, and succeed, no doubt, as typists, but that men need fear their competition as lawyers, doctors or other professionals I do not for a moment believe.

By MARGARET H. JEROME

WITH 12 or more years' office experience behind me, and speaking as I find, I can only say that woman has to win the steeplechase of her career, such as it may prove to be, not only as an equal with man in the same race, but with a few extra hurdles thrown in her way in the shape of prejudice. * * * Poor old Eve, brave old Eve, driven into the battle of existence by new economic and social conditions, has won a few skirmishes, to be sure, and against heavy odds, but there is many a battle to be fought yet and decisive victory is a long way off.

I have still to meet the employer who will pay sweet "Curly-Locks" extra for licking stamps just because she has sweet curly locks, and I have yet to meet the private secretary worthy of the appellation who would stoop to accept "furs and jewels" if she were offered them. Oh, no, the business world is not a third-rate chorus, as depicted in lurid literature. Equal chances, equal pay for equal work, is all that business women are asking; they do not want degrading "favors."



Following the Civil War, about 1870, the stylish young lady caused consternation indeed.

By OWEN NARES

THERE is nothing new under the sun. Least of all is there a new woman. A short time ago a fragment of stone was unearthed, inscribed with characters of a cuneiform type, which, on being carefully and exhaustively studied by expert archeologists, were pronounced to be of an earlier date even than those known of remote Babylonian and Assyrian origin. At last, on decipherment, the gist of the inscription was found to be to the effect that "our girls are getting out of hand."

This piece of prehistoric evidence points to the fact that the feminist movement was already in progress in what we might deem the morning of the world. Doubtless, like our own late suffragettes, the girls referred to got what they wanted. Then, as now, of course, there were the limited and reactionary ready to condemn and oppose all advances or expansion. The hour of their own little zenith was the only epoch worthy of approval.

The so-called new woman of today seems to me only the natural product of circumstances and opportunity. Women have been always quick on the uptake, and this characteristic enabled them to do difficult, dangerous and unaccustomed work with wonderful efficiency during the late war. Any longer to deny such a race of women a voice in public affairs became ridiculous, and the vote so long fought for, often, unfortunately, with the most undignified weapons, was granted to them.

War, which is the crowning disgrace of a nominally civilized world, stirs up all that is elemental and abnormal in humans; the barriers are down, and woman, the sensitive and intuitive, is the first to respond to new conditions.

In saying this I am not speaking of the best and highest type of womanhood. She, as always, acts with judgment and restraint; the possession of the rare and inestimable gift of good taste enables her to avoid all exaggeration, and to retain what is of tried worth in the old world and to annex what is of help in the new. But all women are, unluckily, not similarly gifted, and we are called upon today to endure many appalling manifestations of unbridled feminine liberty. * * *

Though to my thinking there is no new woman, she has changed her manners and customs vastly during the last decade; dress is only the outward and visible sign; no doubt the girls referred to in the cuneiform inscription which I have quoted transgressed against old accepted canons in this respect as well as in others.

War, I believe (among its other purifying results), has always had the effect of unclothing woman. Man throws aside all the drapings and disguises of ordinary peaceful times and so does woman, the one psychically, the other physically naked and unashamed. It was thus after the Napoleonic wars; woman's dress at the court of Josephine was frank to an extraordinary degree, only equaled by that of our own day.

Color, too, becomes crude and violent, affected presumably by blood madness and the terrible orgy of primitive passions; the gentle, subtle shades of gradation fitted for days of harmony and quiet meditation give way to hideous combinations of screaming orange, arsenic green and red lead, writhing in giant stripes or bursting out in unnatural, bloated flowers. Beauty lies bleeding in the dust, trampled on alike by the feet of conqueror and conquered. Art worthy of the name covers his eyes in speechless grief.

But under all and every new trapping we find still the same woman, true to the old types.

"EVE PROBABLY USED A POWDER PUFF"

By Louise Heilgers

BUT all these things are not done for the first time in the green wood of this generation; they were done in the dry of centuries past. Take cosmetics. Cosmetics were probably invented in Eden. Most likely Eve used a dandelion puff for a powder puff, and I am certain that, having been clever enough to discover the snake, she was also quite clever enough to discover that geranium petals make the best rouge in the world.

Henna was used by the first Egyptian belles, who farther bobbed their hair and wore the first short skirts. We find St. Jerome in the fifth century complaining bitterly of the exposed garments worn by the fifth century modern girl.

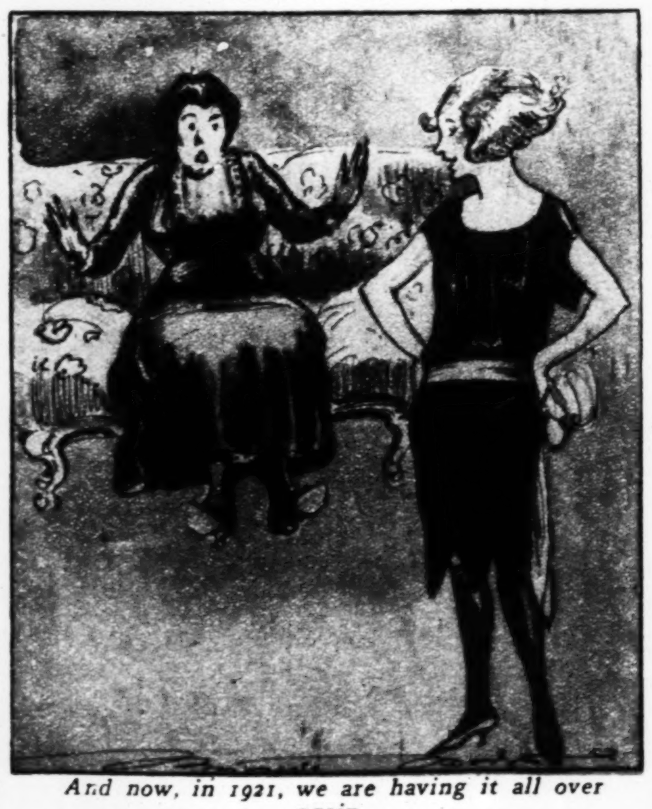
No, there is no new woman. There is only the same old Eve to talk about and dress up and grumble over and dethrone and reinstate and worship. One thing is certain. Whether Eve rocks the universe or merely a cradle, she still rules man. And that ought to satisfy the very latest edition of her.



And now, in 1921, we are having it all over again.

A $75,000,000 ROMANCE THAT LASTED JUST A YEAR . . . . .

IS IT possible for a woman to place a "career" above a successful marriage? Some of the modern cynics say no. Whenever a woman had appeared to renounce wealth, social position and a life of ease in favor of some strenuous and self-supporting art or profession, there has been another reason concealed somewhere, they say.

Here is a most interesting case that renews the question and the discussion. It is the case of a very beautiful woman who made what many women would consider a most "successful" marriage. Her husband was a young bachelor of cultured instincts and good family, personally likeable, noted for his generosity, and possessing a fortune of $75,000,000. For years he had been considered "the best catch" in America. And now, at the end of a year, she proposes to sue him for divorce!

Ganna Walska, the Polish prima donna, is, beyond question, one of the most beautiful women before the public. Also, she is unquestionably one of the most temperamental. Her tall, lithe figure is surmounted by a crown of glorious golden hair, which sets off her large violet eyes. Yet she has also a glorious temper, and the violet eyes sometimes dart fire.

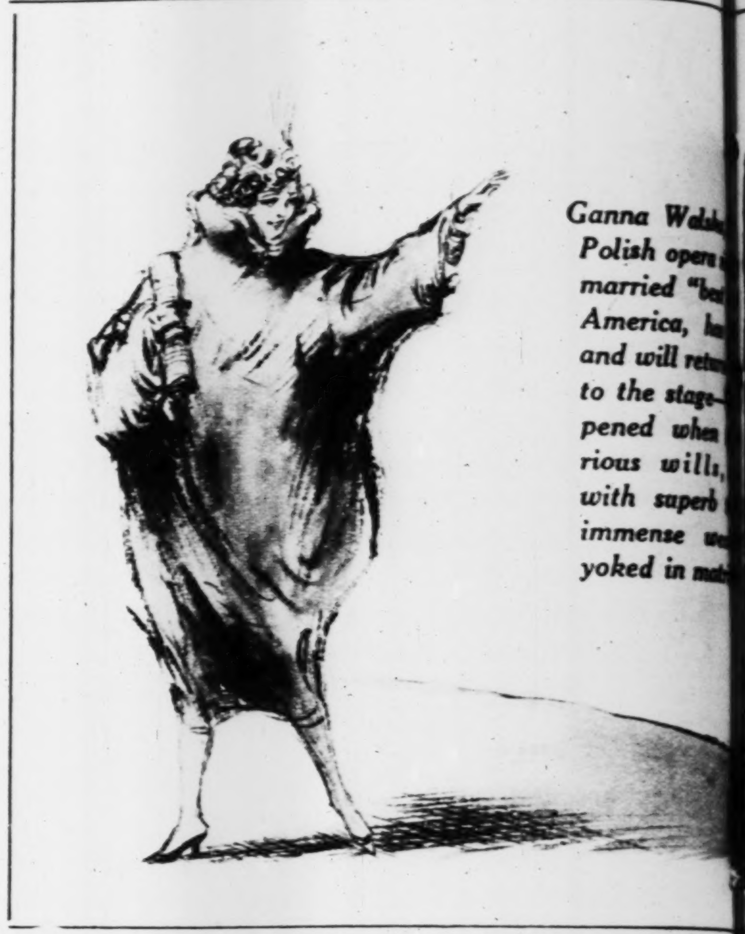
The man she married is Alex Smith Cochran, who, until last year, was the wealthiest young bachelor in this country, and, perhaps, in the world. He was a sportsman of international repute, and spent almost as much time in Europe as in New York, his home. For years Newport had spoken of him as "the most eligible bachelor;" and, obviously, he was ideally situated to give a woman the maximum possible amount of things that women are popularly supposed to crave.

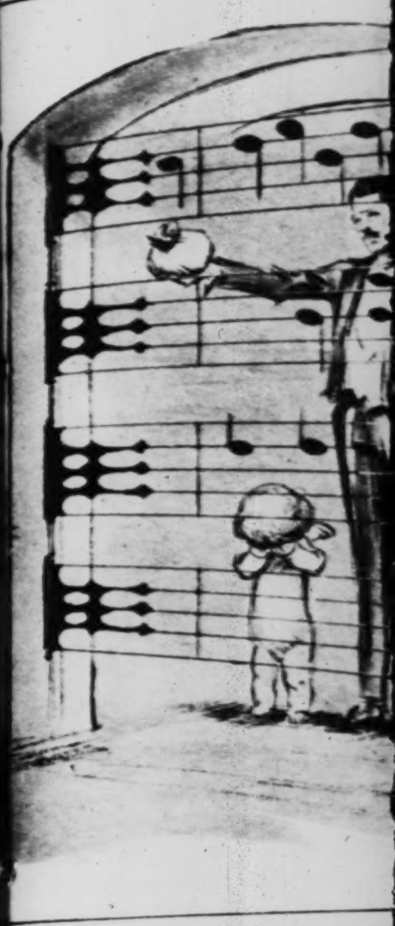
Ganna Walska had been fortune's pet before. She was a favorite in Petrograd in the old gay Czarist days, when Russia's dark masses toiled and agonized in order that the aristocracy might wallow in extravagant splendor. But the war came on, and her titled husband, Capt. Baron d'Eingorn, was one of the early victims.

London, Paris and Vienna, too, had turned away from the light pleasures which furnished bread and popularity to a prima donna, so Ganna Walska came to America. She made her debut in "Mlle. Nitouche," at the Century Theater, in New York. Shortly afterward she became engaged to Lowell M. Palmer Jr., but the betrothal endured only a few months.

"One cannot be an artist and marry," said Ganna Walska, in announcing that the engagement was broken.

This highflown aphorism, however, did not influence her for long. She was married soon afterward to Dr. Joseph Fraenkel, a fashionable New York physician. He died in 1920, and, almost immediately, it was observed that the wealthy Cochran was paying attentions to the charming widow.





Mrs. Alexander Smith Cochran photographed shortly before her marriage.

When the light opera season concluded, she went to Paris. So did Cochran. Three months after Dr. Fraenkel's death, Cochran and the singer were married quietly in Paris, the precise date being Sept. 15, 1920. News of the wedding was said to have been a considerable shock to hopeful mothers of American debutantes.

Cochran at this time was 34 years old. The best known of his various enterprises, perhaps, was his building of the yacht Vanitie to defend the America cup against Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock in 1914. As is well known, the Vanitie won.

It was another of Cochran's yachts, the Westward, that defeated the Kaiser's yacht, Meteor, for the Jubilee prize at the regatta at Kiel, in 1910.

As an instance of his lavish expenditures, Eastern yachtsmen still tell of the pleasure craft Cochran built a few years ago, at a cost of $250,000, and scrapped it a few days later when the trials proved unsatisfactory.

Announcement had been made, a short time previously, of the discovery of a metal—monel—that would not rust in water. As corrosion of a yacht's steel hull is the owner's principal cause for worry, Cochran immediately ordered a magnificent cruiser, schooner-rigged, large and stanch enough for a voyage around the world. A noted naval architect was engaged for the work, and eventually, to the admiration of Cochran's fellow members of the New York Yacht Club, the gallant boat was launched.

The mainsails were hoisted by specially designed engines, the cruiser was fitted with all modern accessories, and was, in every way, as perfect as money could make it.

It had been off the ways but a few days when examination showed that the sea water was having a chemical action on the hull. Cochran, angry and disappointed, ordered it out of the water, and in a few days it was being broken up.

Before the United States entered the war he offered his fine steam yacht, Warrior, to the British Government. The offer was accepted, the yacht was armed for scouting purposes, and Cochran was commissioned known views. His friends wondered, however, whether he would not chafe under the spectacle, and how he would support the comment of his fellow club members on the quality of his wife's performance.

At any rate, on the day preceding the evening of the first scheduled performance, hurried announcement was made that the opening would be postponed indefinitely. The general director of the company cryptically remarked: "Mme. Walska, I understand, has gone to New York."

Various explanations of the affair were made later. A friend of Walska's charged that Mary Garden's jealousy was responsible for the upset. The latter was anxious to sing in the role herself, it was said, and made it so unpleasant for the younger singer that the latter could not endure to continue.

Details of the controversy between the two prima donnas, granted that there was such a disagreement, never became known. The public heard an echo, however, which indicated at least that something interesting had gone on behind the scenes. Giro Marinuzzi, conductor and composer, resigned as artistic director of the company, declaring that he was tired of being the innocent bystander in the quarrels between temperamental stars.

antime, Cochran and his wife had gone to Europe, it was said that he listened, with a calm twinkle the eye, to stories of the temperamental tempest was said to have resulted in his wife's resigna- from the role of Zaza. He established a fine residence at 14 Rue Lubec, Paris, and settled down to a ntional enjoyment of life with his beautiful

With the approach, however, of the present the- al season, there were rumors of discord and unrest in the Cochran household. A few weeks ago the singer returned from the summer resort at Dieppe, drove home and locked the door. Her husband, who had been staying at a hotel, hurried to his home, upon hearing of his wife's unexpected return. The janitor greeted him through a hole in the barred door, and imparted the information that madame had given orders to admit no one—no one. The owner of the premises thereupon returned to his hotel, and shortly afterward went on a cruise in the North Sea. Perhaps he attributed the incident of the barred door to artistic temperament.

It became known, however, that while Walska was at Dieppe, another visitor in that city was a Chicago man, who had been a liberal patron of the opera company while Walska was a member of it. And, in that connection, it was reported that she was now contemplating a return to the company. Simultaneously, her attorney, Dudley Field Malone, was called to Paris for a conference with the singer. Malone and the Chicagoan returned to New York on the same boat.

When Cochran, cruising about in his yacht, learned by wireless that a divorce suit was being contemplated by his wife, he made for port with all speed. Arriving, he took passage for France on a fast airplane. He dropped off, very angry, and sought his attorneys. It was said that he gave instructions that a divorce should be opposed with every available legal means. At about the same time the Chicago man's wife, who had been several years in Switzerland, started home.

Here is where the cynics have their inning. They scoff at the idea that any woman willingly gives up a life of ease to become self-supporting, unless she has something better in prospect.

Intelligent women, says the brilliant essayist and critic, H. L. Mencken, are never sentimental. "The mark of their so-called intuition is simply a sharp and accurate perception of reality, an habitual immunity to emotional enchantment, a relentless capacity for distinguishing clearly between the appearance and the substance."

Yet, if Walska proposes relinquishing her position as the wife of an amiable man—with $75,000,000—merely to resume the exhausting routine of a stage singer, and that because of her sentimental devotion to art, then she is guilty, in Mr. Mencken's opinion, or, rather, in the opinion of intelligent women as he describes them, of succumbing to the most maudlin sort of emotional enchantment, and of failing signally to distinguish between the appearance and the substance.

Which proves, the cynic retorts, not that Mencken is wrong, but that Walska is doing no such mawkish thing as she is credited with. If she is giving up one life, declares the skeptic, it is because a more inviting one is offered; if she renounces certain prerogatives and pleasures, then be sure that she sees others more alluring within her grasp.

Up to this time she has displayed a marked ability to take care of herself, and to maintain the good state of her fortunes. Moreover, she has brought to her uses a very pronounced capacity for fascinating men. Three irreproachable marriages—two of them, at least, actual matrimonial triumphs—is not a bad record for a woman who does not appear to be more than 30.

Another portrait of Ganna Walska who married the wealthy Alexander Smith Cochran a year ago and now is separated from her husband. She has golden hair and violet eyes.

Cochran derived his immense fortune from his inheritance of the Smith Carpet Mills in Yonkers, the largest manufactory of rugs and carpets in the world. When he fell heir to it, in 1903, its value was estimated at $50,000,000. Those who have become painfully familiar with the soaring price of such products in the last few years may calculate how the fortune has increased.

His gifts to charity have been on a plane with his other expenditures. He has given sums ranging from $10,000 to $100,000 to various institutions, and once presented his 360 employes with $1000 each.

The principals in the matrimonial tragedy are now marking time. It is said that Mrs. Cochran wants her husband to file the suit, so that she can institute counter proceedings, while he, on the other hand, not only intends to do nothing of the sort, but proposes to present every legal obstacle to the granting of a divorce. Whether the action, when it does come, will take place in America or France, is another element not yet decided.

The first legal move of any sort taken by either side occurred a few days ago, when Cochran replevined $25,000 worth of furniture from his wife's home at 101 East Ninety-fourth street, New York. The replevined articles included a Chinese vase valued at $1000, an antique bed, an antique table worth $2000, various pieces of Chippendale furniture and a number of water colors and vase lamps, all of which he alleged were being "wrongfully withheld" from him by his wife.

When two Deputy Sheriffs arrived at the house to serve their papers they found it untenanted, save for the presence of a private detective, acting as a watchman. The latter at first refused to admit the peace officers. He called up Malone, however, and the lawyer instructed him not to interfere with the execution of the writ. The deputies then loaded the furniture on a van, and took it to a storage house.

Pending the determination of the replevin suit, Cochran's attorneys were required to furnish a bond of $50,000 to insure Mrs. Cochran against loss in case she should eventually be adjudged the rightful owner of the furniture.

Sea Bathing at Fashionable Ostend Is—Well, Something Unusual, Anyway

By KARL K. KITCHEN

"I don't like to go in swimming with a lot of horses," complains visitor to Belgian resort—He used bathing machine, hauled down to water's edge and back by Brabant steed—"Costumes" seen there compensate for less enjoyable features of outing at the European watering place which is most like Atlantic City

THERE is probably no beach in the world where the bathing looks so attractive and is so disappointing as at Ostend. With its wide, sandy beach, scores of brilliantly painted bathing machines drawn by huge Brabant stallions, and the fair sex in one-piece bathing suits—a dip in the ocean would seem to be about the last word in sea bathing. In fact, when I saw the plage, as the beach is called, from my room at the Royal Palace Hotel, I could hardly wait until I had breakfasted to become intimate with the waves on its smiling sands.

But it only took one dip in the ocean at Ostend to shatter my fondest illusions. Not that the ocean was not all right. It was wet and salty—if not exactly clear and invigorating. But bathing from a "cabine," as the bathing machines are called, is not what it is cracked up to be.

It is one thing to watch a dozen chorus girls in a musical comedy step out of bathing machines on the stage and another to make an entrance—and an exit—from an ocean bath by the same device. I know, for I'm familiar with both. But in the future I prefer my bathing machine on the stage. Give me a little 2x4 compartment in a bathing establishment nailed to the ground and I won't mind whatever the wild waves are saying.

Just let me tell you what happened to me. I don't want to warn you against experimenting with a bathing machine. I'm merely telling you, so in the future, if you visit Ostend or any of the channel resorts that are suffering with beach pests, let your conscience be your guide.

I picked out the likeliest looking bathing establishment on the plage, in front of the Hotel Splendid.

"Une cabine, sil vous plais," I said, in my best table d'hote French, which I rarely speak out loud.

"Three, five, seven or twenty francs?" asked the voice behind the cashier's wicket.

"Seven," I replied, because I happened to have two 5-franc notes in my hand.

A ticket and three francs were shoved out at me and a moment later, when I had collected a towel and checked my bankroll of Belgian money, I set off for one of the rows of bathing machines which were drawn up on the beach midway between the terrace and the waves.

At the first row of machines I came to, the control official shook his head. It seems they were 3-franc cabines—the cheapest on the beach. Except for a different marking on the outside they were exactly like all the others—miniature wooden houses on four wheels, with a stepladder to enter their single compartment.

However, I was soon directed to the 7-franc cabines—everyone at Ostend speaks English—and after a control official in uniform had taken up my ticket and a white-capped maid had inspected the cabine to see that it was in order, I was permitted to enter.

It was not a bad place to undress in—at first glance. There were several pegs to hang one's clothing, a mirror and a bench. I hung up my coat and about to remove my—ahem!—trousers when the cabine was given a violent jerk. A second later, on the floor of the cabine, with a huge rip in my flannel trousers, I was conscious that I was moving.

Struggling to my feet, I opened the glazed window and looked out to see what was happening. A busy, barefooted Belgian was walking by the side of the cabine, guiding a big Brabant stallion that was pulling it down to the water's edge.

I shut the window and after regarding my ripped pantaloons with mixed feelings I proceeded to undress and climb into my "costume," as a bathing suit is miscalled in this part of the world.

Fortunately, I was seated when the cabine was swung around so that the steps faced the sea. If I hadn't been securely braced I would have found myself on the floor with perhaps a broken leg or misplaced spine. As it was, I only knocked my head hard enough to make me a little dizzy for the rest of the morning.

As I was about to continue with my disrobing act I heard a sharp knock on the window. Opening it to find out what was the trouble, I saw a huge outstretched palm. Of course, I knew what that meant and I dropped a 25-centime piece in it and a few minutes later I was ready for the sea.

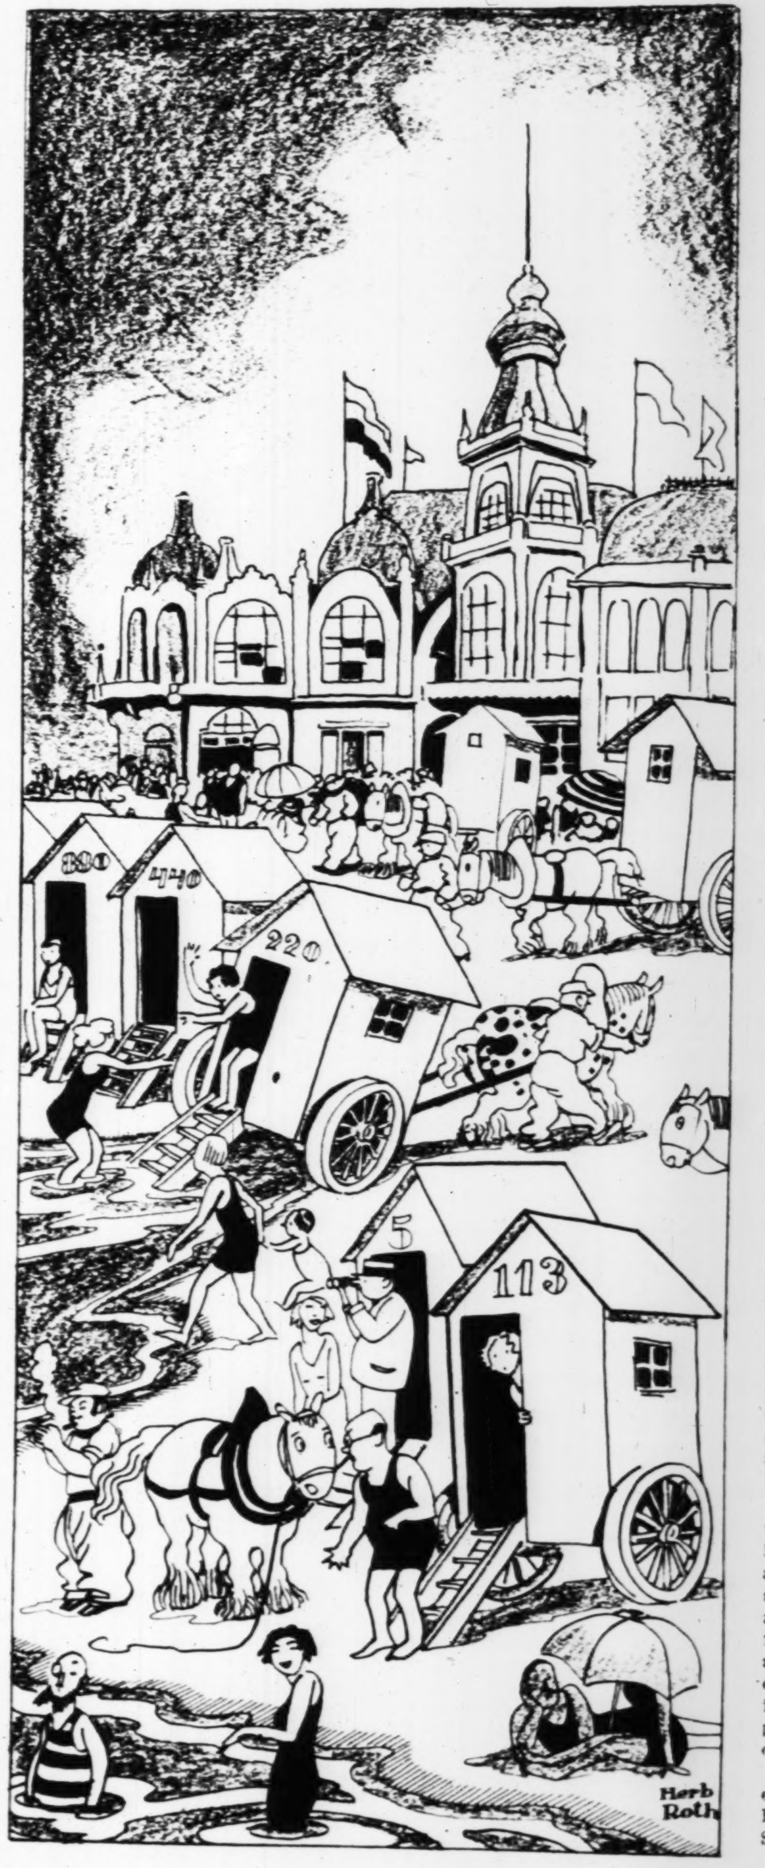
Twenty-five centimes is the tariff—as I found out later—to have your cabine drawn down to the sea. And it is also collected on the return trip. Of course, it isn't much—a matter of 2 cents—but if one has checked his money and hasn't any change it is a bit awkward, for these bathing machine chauffeurs are an insistent lot.

I was able to step down from my cabine into about six inches of water, which would have been all right if another Brabant stallion hadn't almost stepped on me. I'm fond of the ocean, but I don't like swimming with a lot of horses—even if they are fine, virile animals. And I like clear, blue water tumbling in from the open sea, not yellow waves such as you find at Ostend. This plage has the reputation of being the finest in Europe, but it doesn't compare with Long Beach, even with the bathing machines thrown out.

To be sure, there was some compensation in some of the one-piece bathing suits I could not help seeing, but bathing at Ostend, as everywhere else in Europe, is still in its infancy. Most of the bathers seemed too busy dodging horses or trying to find their own cabines to do much swimming. Wading and digging in the beach seemed to be the principal part of the bathing here—aside from the excitement of the ride in the cabines.

Fortunately, I remembered the number of my cabine and, after a swim that left me much dirtier than when I entered the ocean, I re-embarked. A bathing machine chauffeur saw me and before I had my suit off a big stallion was hauling me back high up on the beach. There was the same sharp knock on the window when we arrived—the same 25-centime tip, and when I was dressed there was a white-capped maid with her hand out, although she had done nothing except see me climb in.

But I was glad to escape from the cabine cell with only a few bruises and a ruined pair of breeches.



Now it may be that there are some people who like to take their bathing a la carte, so to speak. But I don't. I'll admit that the 20-franc cabines de luxe have certain advantages under favorable circumstances, but I'll take my bathing straight, in the good, old-fashioned American way, thank you very much.

However, after I had returned to my hotel, taken a fresh-water bath and changed my clothes I did feel refreshed, and a luncheon at a front-row table at the Hotel de la Plage made me forget many of the untoward events of my first morning at Ostend.

True happiness comes from the inside, and while the best restaurants at Ostend are nothing to rave about, a pint of Chateau Yquem, coffee and a long Havana re-established one's cheerful outlook on life.

Ostend, you may like to know, is more like Atlantic City than any seaside resort in Europe. Its terrace, which is lined with dozens of handsome hotels, is very much like the boardwalk at Atlantic City, the advantage being in favor of the Belgian resort. For, while it is on a much smaller scale, it is much gayer and infinitely smarter.

None of the cheap shops and restaurants that mar Atlantic City's promenade are to be found on Ostend's tile walk. First-class hotels, with their dining rooms opening on the terrace, and dozens of well-appointed cafes, with rows of little tables, line the sea front, except where the huge Kursaal dominates the scene.

In its fresh paint, this part of Ostend looks very spic and span. Since the Germans departed in November, 1918, after four years' occupation, everything has been done over and only a few traces of their stay remain. One of their batteries in front of the Royal Palace Hotel, which just reopened this summer, is still a grim reminder of what happened, but Ostend as a whole has not only resumed its pre-war appearance, but improved upon it.

Because roulette is now forbidden by a recently passed law, some of the hotel proprietors complain that the crowd this summer is not as sporty as it was in ante-bellum days. But the important thing is that there is a crowd—not only a large number of Belgians from Brussels and other cities, but a large number of English and French people. London is only six hours away, and on weekends the hotels are filled with "trippers." Visas, even passports, are no longer required for English holiday seekers—which, of course, stimulates travel.

The races at the Hippodrome Wellington, as the seaside track at Ostend is called, occupy the attention of most of the resort's visitors in the afternoon. I spent a costly afternoon there trying to pick winners with the assistance of an American jockey who was bucking the jockey ring. The horses all seemed to be chariot racers and we couldn't cash any of our pari-mutuel tickets after any of the six races. However, it was a lovely afternoon, and the view of the ocean from the Jockey Club's pavilion was all that could be desired.

From the race track I followed the crowd to the dansant at the Kursaal. For 2 francs 50 (a matter of 20 cents) you are not only admitted to the great Kursaal, where a big symphony orchestra plays morning, afternoon and evening, but you can dance to a jazz band from 5 till 7. At the Royal Palace Hotel, as at all the other big hotels, the afternoon the dansants are important functions, for Ostend is foxtrotting and jazzing in the most approved—or, if you wish, disapproved—American fashion.

After dinner one has the widest variety of entertainments. Grand opera at the Theater Royal, an imitation Parisian revue at the Scala, variety shows, dance establishments

"CHESTER" is the most famous chef in the world. Of course, if Sir William Orpen hadn't painted his portrait it would have been different. But Sir William's portrait is the picture of the year at the Royal Academy, and "Chester" is the most sought after man in England—when it comes to the art of dining. For he is the world's super-chef.

Eugene Grossreither, to give him his real name, is a native of Alsace. It was in his 'prentice days in Paris that the nickname "Chester" was given him, owing, it is said, to his intense dislike of English cheese. Since there is no cheese of that name, it is to be presumed that it was Cheshire—a difficult word for a Frenchman—that was really meant.

When Sir William Orpen "discovered" Chester, at the Hotel Chatham in Paris, the talents of the handsome chef were appreciated only by a little coterie of Parisian gourmets. Today, with his portrait presented to the nation by the artist, and hanging for all the world to see in the Royal Academy, Chester has achieved more fame than has ever before fallen to the lot of any chef. Perhaps it is hardly to be wondered at that Chester has not been allowed to remain at the grillroom where Sir Willian Orpen first met him.

The portrait had not long been on view when a London hotel manager visited the academy, and came away half an hour later with the fixed intention of securing Chester's services for his own hotel. He went straight across to Paris, and when sheer determination had triumphed over argument and expostulation, brought Chester back with him.

Today Chester is the chef to the Royal Palace Hotel, Kensington, London. He was, it must be confessed, more than a little homesick during the first few weeks, for he possesses to the full the Frenchman's passionate love of his own country, but interest in his work—or his art, as one might justly say—has overcome regrets. He has full scope for his talents in his new position, for the whole cuisine of the hotel is under his direction.

It is he who evolves new dishes for the delectation of the hotel's patrons, and who arranges the menus that other skilled chefs, working under his direction, put into effect. Even when the cooking has been done, and the meal prepared in every detail to his satisfaction, Chester does not consider that his responsibility is at an end. He will ascend to the restaurant and take up some point of vantage whence he can view the whole progress of the meal.

He watched over me the evening I dined at the Royal Palace Hotel, and he must have been satisfied, for when I asked him to give me the recipes for the dishes he had prepared in my honor he directed the following, which you may try in your kitchen.

He told me they were his favorite recipes and I have inside information that he is telling the truth:

Grouse en Casserole

Line the bottom of a china casserole with slices of carrot, turnip, one or two button onions and a small bundle of herbs, sprinkle with salt, add a knob of butter, put on the casserole lid and cook in a fast oven for about 15 minutes. Now take the grouse, well cleaned and trussed and powdered lightly with salt, put it into the casserole and cook quickly until the bird is done, when it should be taken from the casserole and kept quite hot whilst the pieces of vegetables and herbs are taken away and a tablespoonful of red wine added to the gravy which remains.

Stir this together well and cook sharply for three minutes in a small copper saucepan, replace the grouse in the casserole, pour the gravy over it and serve.

Chartreuse de Perdruex.

Cook a very young cabbage with a little bacon and when quite tender line a mold with it, filling up the center with pieces of nice young partridge. Place in a hot oven and serve when ready, with a nice brown sauce.

The mold should, of course, be well greased with butter and the dish will be made more attractive if fine strips or discs of cooked carrot, turnip or truffles are placed symmetrically on the bottom of the mold before putting in the cabbage. The sides of the mold can be built up with cabbage as the pieces of partridge are added.

Croutons for Game Cooked en Casserole.

Discs of bread cut about the size of a silver dollar and fried a light brown may be placed at the bottom of the casserole before returning grouse or partridge and finishing off with the gravey, which will make them a delicious finish to any game cooked in the manner above described.

Salad Making.

Take the youngest of the green lettuce leaves and pick them apart and break them by hand into convenient morsels, and dry each leaf thoroughly; not until then should the dressing of the salad begin.

First add salt and pepper in quantities to suit the palate, then sufficient of the very best oil to enable you to get a light covering on each piece of leaf by stirring round with spoon and fork. Now add a little vinegar, into which may be stirred a little mustard. The whole should be thoroughly turned.

If the leaves of the lettuce have been thoroughly dried before covering with oil, the oil will adhere easily, and no more is needed than will cover each leaf. The same applies to vinegar.

The flavoring of salads can be diversified by utilizing French mustard (of which there are many different flavors) occasionally instead of English, or by using mint sauce instead of plain vinegar, in which case leave out the mustard and squeeze a lemon on to the oiled leaves.

Cold Salmon.

When serving cold salmon, cook the largest piece of fish you can use for the number of persons to be served. When the fish is cold, carefully remove the skin, which will come off easily if the salmon is thoroughly cooked. Scrape the fish where the skin has been removed so that the flesh looks clear and of good color.

Now decorate the salmon with strips of tarragon leaf, tastily shaped, thin slices of carrots, etc., and cover the whole with a clear jelly made from good gelatine leaf. Do not let the covering be heavy.

Esperance faints and then undergoes a long illness at the chateau, during which the Duke makes a journey to Italy, so that gossip may justify the cause of the duel. The mother of the dead Count remains devoted to Esperance, which also tends to discourage surmise. The girl recovers her health, but slowly, and has forgotten much which happened.

Then Esperance is invited to become a member of the Comedie Francaise. In the first act she is to depict a young girl in a convent, and hence the string of pearls should be removed. But Esperance has given her word to the dead man that she will always wear them, and is much disturbed by the dilemma.

As the performance proceeds, Esperance charms the brilliant audience with her youth, beauty and exquisite voice. But there is one blemish to her acting: the annoying gesture with which, repeatedly, she clutches at her throat. Gradually the whole audience becomes absorbed in this strange procedure, and whispered surmises fly about.

Suddenly the actress grows deathly pale, her eyes become fixed, a stifling sob escapes her.

"No, no," she murmurs, brokenly, "I cannot remove it." Her hands seem to repel an imaginary person, she shudders as if in horror. "Oh, those arms, those arms!" she cries. "No, no, I will not! . . . Help! . . . Those arms strangle me! . . . Oh, it is cold, cold"——

As Esperance collapses in a faint, the curtain is rung down and amazement grips the audience. A moment later the director appears to apologize for the interruption and to inform them that Mademoiselle Darbois is too ill to proceed with the play.

The audience clamors for further information and a journalist who has gone behind the scenes returns, stands up in his seat and calls out: "Silence! Silence! Esperance Darbois is dead!"

Thus ends the tragic story of "Petite Idole," by Sarah Bernhardt. The heroine encounters the end which Bernhardt frequently has told her friends that she would prefer for herself—to die while engaged in the acting which has been her joy for so many, many years.

"Electrical Age" Predicted Years Ago an Actuality

autos can also be furnished for the use of the child. Of course, the electric heater is as valuable in the nursery as in any room in the house, as it instantly meets sudden changes of temperature with its genial glow.

The bathroom now can be equipped with its immersion heater, which obviates dependence on a boiler in the cool weather of spring or summer. A heater and a curling iron fit well in this room. A vacuum cleaner, of course, can be attached in any of the rooms mentioned.

The uses of electricity in the garage are too numerous to be detailed. But an equipment for replenishing storage batteries, a rectifier and a series of swinging lamps that can be placed where needed are among ordinary pieces of equipment. Some of the larger garages find that a turn table operated by a motor below is of great value.

Many outdoor uses can be found for electricity, and on lawns or fields of reasonable size, where a wire does not have to be carried too far, electric lawn mowers or cultivators can be operated as readily as those driven by the gasoline motor.

But one invention is of especial interest to any suburban community or to persons who wish to have a fountain on their lawn but have a limited water supply—this is a pumping device attached to a small electric motor that will operate a fountain to any height desired. Instead of the waste which results when city water is used direct, this motor can pump the same water over and over again from an underground tank, the water flowing back into the tank after it has been discharged into the air above and has fallen back into the receiving basin.

If we wish to discard a few of the time-honored household appliances, like the coal range, the boiler connected therewith and the old-fashioned furnace, it would seem that the electrical age is already here and its benefits within our grasp—although it might be well to have some of the old-fashioned articles in reserve in case the electrical workers' union should call a general strike.

Miss Lulu Bett

BY ZONA GALE

Number Two—In Which Miss Lulu Dusts a Photograph

LULU was dusting the parlor. The parlor was rarely used, but every morning it was dusted. By Lulu. She dusted the black walnut center table which was of Ina's choosing, and looked like Ina, shining, complacent, abundantly curved. The leather rocker, too, looked like Ina: brown, plumply upholstered, tipping back a bit. Really, the davenport looked like Ina, for its chintz pattern seemed to bear a design of lifted eyebrows and arch, reproachful eyes.

Lulu dusted the upright piano, and that was like Dwight—in a perpetual attitude of rearing back, with paws out, playful, but capable, too, of roaring a ready bass.

And the black fireplace—there was Mrs. Bett to the life. Colorless, fireless, and with a dust of ashes.

In the midst of all was Lulu herself reflected in the narrow pier glass, bodiless-looking in her blue gingham gown, but somehow alive. Natural.

This pier glass Lulu approached with expectation, not because of herself but because of the photograph on its low marble shelf. A large photograph on a little shelf easel. A photograph of a man with evident eyes, evident lips, evident cheeks—and each of the six were rounded and convex. You could construct the rest of him. Down there under the glass you could imagine him extending, rounded and convex, with plump hands and curly thumbs and snug clothes. It was Ninian Deacon, Dwight's brother.

Every day since his coming had been announced, Lulu, dusting the parlor, had seen the photograph looking at her with its eyes somehow new. Or were her own eyes new? She dusted this photograph with a difference, lifted, dusted, set it back, less as a process than as an experience. As she dusted the mirror and saw his trim semblance over against her own bodiless reflection, she hurried away. But the eyes of the picture followed her, and she liked it.

She dusted the south window sill and saw Bobby Larkin come around the house and go to the woodshed for the lawn mower. She heard the smooth blur of the cutter. Not six times had Bobby traversed the lawn when Lulu saw Di emerge from the house. Di had been caring for her canary and she carried her bird-bath and went to the well, and Lulu divined that Di had deliberately disregarded the kitchen taps. Lulu dusted the south window and watched, and in her watching was no quality of spying or criticism. Nor did she watch wistfully. Rather she looked out on something in which she had never shared, could not by any chance imagine herself sharing.

The south window was open. Airs of May bore the soft talking.

"Oh, Bobby, will you pump while I hold this?" And again: "Now wait till I rinse." And again: "You needn't be so glum"—the village salutation signifying kindly attention.

Bobby now first spoke: "Who's glum?" he countered, gloomily.

The iron of those days when she had laughed at him was deep within him, and this she now divined and said absently:

"I used to think you were pretty nice. But I don't like you any more."

"Yes, you used to!" Bobby repeated, derisively. "Is that why you made fun of me all the time?"

At this Di colored and tapped her foot on the well curb. He seemed to have her now, and enjoyed his triumph. But Di looked up at him slyly and looked down. "I had to," she admitted. "They were all teasing me about you."

"They were?" This was a new thought to him. Teasing her about him, were they? He straightened. "Huh!" he said, in magnificent evasion.

"I had to make them stop, so I teased you. I—I never wanted to." Again the upward look.

"Well!" Bobby stared at her. "I never thought it was anything like that."

"Of course you didn't." She tossed back her bright hair, met his eyes full. "And you never came where I could tell you. I wanted to tell you."

She ran into the house.

Lulu lowered her eyes. It was as if she had witnessed the exercise of some secret gift, had seen a cocoon open or an egg hatch. She was thinking:

"How easy she done it. Got him right over. But how did she do that?"

Dusting the Dwightlike piano, Lulu looked over-shoulder, with a manner of speculation, at the photograph of Ninian.

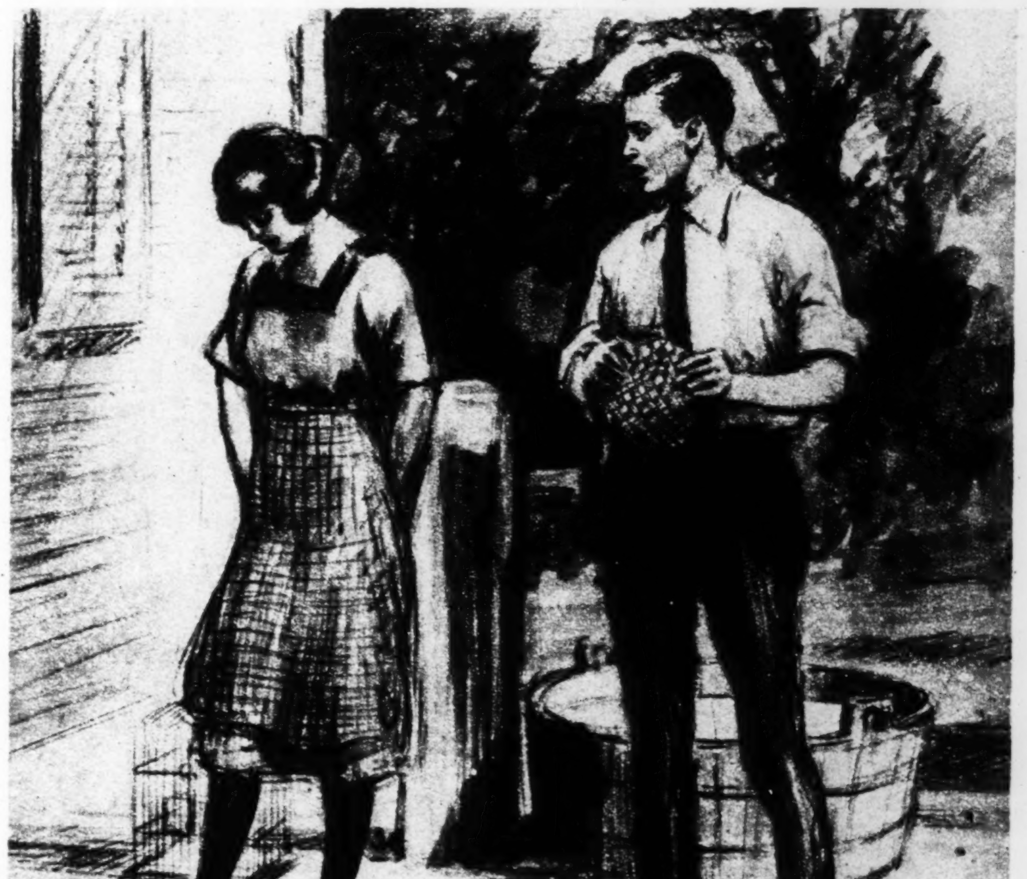
Bobby mowed and pondered. The magnificent conceit of the male in his understanding of the female character was sufficiently developed to cause him to welcome the improvisation which he had just heard. Perhaps that was the way it had been. Of course that was the way it had been. What a fool he had been not to understand. He cast his eyes repeatedly toward the house. He managed to make the job last over so that he could return in the afternoon. He was not conscious of planning this, but it was in some manner contrived for him by forces of his own with which he seemed to be co-operating without his conscious will. Continually he glanced toward the house.

These glances Lulu saw. She was a woman of 34 and Di and Bobby were 18, but Lulu felt for them no adult indulgence. She felt that sweetness of attention which we bestow upon May robins. She felt no more.

She cut a fresh cake, filled a plate, called to Di, saying: "Take some out to that Bobby Larkin, why don't you?"

It was Lulu's way of participating. It was her vicarious thrill.

After supper Dwight and Ina took their books and departed to the Chautauqua Circle. To these meetings Lulu never went. The reason seemed to be that she never went anywhere.



"I had to," she admitted, "they were all teasing me about you."

When they were gone Lulu felt an instant liberation. She turned aimlessly to the garden and dug round things with her finger. And she thought about the brightness of that Chautauqua scene to which Ina and Dwight had gone. Lulu thought about such gatherings in somewhat the way that a futurist receives the subjects of his art—forms not vague, but heightened to intolerable definiteness, acute color and always motion—motion as an integral part of the desirable. But a factor of all was that Lulu herself was the participant, not the onlooker. The perfection of her dream was not impaired by any longing. She had her dream as a saint her sense of heaven.

"Lulie!" her mother called. "You come out of that damp."

She obeyed, as she had obeyed that voice all her life. But she took one last look down the dim street. She had not known it, but superimposed on her Chautauqua thought had been her faint hope that it would be tonight, while she was in the garden alone, that Ninian Deacon would arrive. And she had on her wool chally, her coral beads, her cameo pin.

She went into the lighted dining room. Monona was in bed. Di was not there. Mrs. Bett was in Dwight Herbert's leather chair and she lolled at her ease. It was strange to see this woman, usually so erect and tense, now actually lolling, as if lolling were the positive, the vital, and her ordinary rigidity a negation of her. In some corresponding orgy of leisure and liberation, Lulu sat down with no needle.

"Inie ought to make over her delaine," Mrs. Bett comfortably began. They talked of this, devised a mode, recalled other delaines. "Dear, dear," said Mrs. Bett, "I had on a delaine when I met your father." She described it. Both women talked freely, with animation. They were individuals and alive. To the two pallid beings accessory to the Deacons' presence, Mrs. Bett and her daughter Lulu now bore no relationship. They emerged, had opinions, contradicted, their eyes were bright.

Toward 9 o'clock Mrs. Bett announced that she thought she should have lunch. This was debauchery. She brought in bread and butter and a dish of cold canned peas. She was committing all the excesses that she knew—offering opinions, laughing, eating. It was to be seen that this woman had an immense store of vitality, perpetually submerged.

When she had eaten she grew sleepy—rather cross at the last and inclined to hold up her sister's excellencies to Lulu; and, at Lulu's defense, lifted an ancient weapon.

"What's the use of finding fault with Inie? Where'd you been if she hadn't married?"

Lulu said nothing.

"What say?" Mrs. Bett demanded, shrilly. She was enjoying it.

Lulu said no more. After a long time:

"You always was jealous of Inie," said Mrs. Bett, and went to her bed.

As soon as her mother's door had closed, Lulu took the lamp from its bracket, stretching up her long body and her long arms until her skirt lifted to show her really slim and pretty feet. Lulu's feet gave news of some other Lulu, but slightly incarnate. Perhaps, so far, incarnate only in her feet and her long hair.

She took the lamp to the parlor and stood before the photograph of Ninian Deacon, and looked her fill. She did not admire the photograph, but she wanted to look at it. The house was still, there was no possibility of interruption. The occasion became a sensation, which she made no effort to quench. She held a rendezvous with she knew not what.

In the early hours of the next afternoon, with the sun shining across the threshold, Lulu was paring something at the kitchen table. Mrs. Bett was asleep. ("I don't blame you a bit, mother," Lulu had said, as her mother named the intention.) Ina was asleep. (But Ina always took off the curse by calling it her "si-esta," long "i.") Monona was playing with a neighbor's child—you heard their shrill yet lovely laughter as they obeyed the adult law that motion is pleasure. Di was not there.

A man came round the house and stood tying a puppy to the porch post. A long shadow fell through the west doorway, the puppy whined.

"Oh," said this man. "I didn't mean to arrive at the back door, but since I'm here"——

He lifted a suit case to the porch, entered, and filled the kitchen.

"It's Ina, isn't it?" he said.

"I'm her sister," said Lulu, and understood that he was here at last.

"Well, I'm Bert's brother, so I can come in, can't I?"

He did so, turned round like a dog before his chair and sat down heavily, forcing his fingers through heavy, upspringing brown hair.

"Oh, yes," said Lulu. "I'll call Ina. She's asleep."

"Don't call her, then," said Ninian. "Let's you and I get acquainted."

He said it absently, hardly looking at her.

"I'll get the pup a drink if you can spare me a basin," he added.

Lulu brought the basin, and while he went to the dog she ran tiptoeing to the dining room china closet and brought a cut-glass tumbler, as heavy, as ungainly as a stone crock. This she filled with milk.

"I thought maybe"—— said she, and offered it.

"Thank you," said Ninian, and drained it. "Making pies, as I live," he observed, and brought his chair nearer to the table. "I didn't know Ina had a sister," he went on. "I remember now Bert said he had two of her relatives"——

Lulu flushed and glanced at him pitifully.

"He has," she said. "It's my mother and me. But we do quite a good deal of the work."

"I'll bet you do," said Ninian, and did not perceive that anything had been violated. "What's your name?" he bethought.

She was in an immense and obscure excitement. Her manner was serene, her hands as they went on with the peeling did not tremble; her replies were given with sufficient quiet. But she told him her name as one tells something of another and more remote creature. She felt as one may feel in catastrophe—no sharp understanding but merely the sense that the thing cannot possibly be happening.

"You folks expect me?" he went on.

"Oh, yes," she cried, almost with vehemence. "Why, we've looked for you every day."

"'See," he said. "How long have they been married?"

Lulu flushed as she answered: "Fifteen years."

"And a year before that the first one died—and two they were married," he computed. "I never met that one. Then it's close to 20 years since Bert and I have seen each other."

"How awful," Lulu said, and flushed again.

"Why?"

"To be that long away from your folks."

Suddenly she found herself facing this honestly, as if the immensity of her present experience were clarifying her understanding: Would it be so awful to be away from Bert and Monona and Di—yes, from Ina—for 20 years?

"You think that?" he laughed. "A man don't know what he's like till he's roamed around on his own." He liked the sound of it. "Roamed around on his own," he repeated, and laughed again. "Course, a woman don't know that."

"Why don't she?" asked Lulu. She balanced a pie on her hand and carved the crust. She was stupefied to hear her own question. "Why don't she?"

"Maybe she does. Do you?"

"Yes," said Lulu.

"Good enough!" He applauded noiselessly, with fat hands. His diamond rings sparkled, his even white teeth flashed. "I've had 20 years of galloping about," he informed her, unable, after all, to transfer his interest from himself to her.

"Where?" she asked, although she knew.

"South America. Central America. Mexico. Panama." He searched his memory. "Colombo," he superadded.

"My!" said Lulu. She had probably never in her life had the least desire to see any of these places. She did not want to see them now. But she wanted passionately to meet her companion's mind.

"It's the life," he informed her.

"Must be," Lulu breathed. "I"—— she tried, and gave it up.

"Where you been mostly?" he asked at last.

By this unprecedented interest in her doings she was thrown into a passion of excitement.

"Here," she said. "I've always been here. Fifteen years with Ina. Before that we lived in the country."

He listened sympathetically now, his head well on one side. He watched her veined hands pinch at the pies. "Poor old girl," he was thinking.

"Is it Miss Lulu Bett?" he abruptly inquired. "Or Mrs.?"

Lulu flushed in anguish.

"Miss," she said, low, as one who confesses the extremity of failure. Then from unplumbed depths another Lulu abruptly spoke up. "From choice," she said.

He shouted with laughter.

"You bet! Oh, you bet!" he cried. "Never doubted it." He made his palms taut and drummed on the table. "Say!" he said.

Lulu glowed, quickened, smiled. Her face was another face.

"Which kind of a Mr. are you?" she heard herself ask, and his shoutings redoubled. Well! Who would have thought it of her?

"Never give myself away," he assured her. "Say, by George, I never thought of that before! There's no telling whether a man's married or not, by his name!"

"It don't matter," said Lulu.

"Why not?"

"Not so many people want to know."

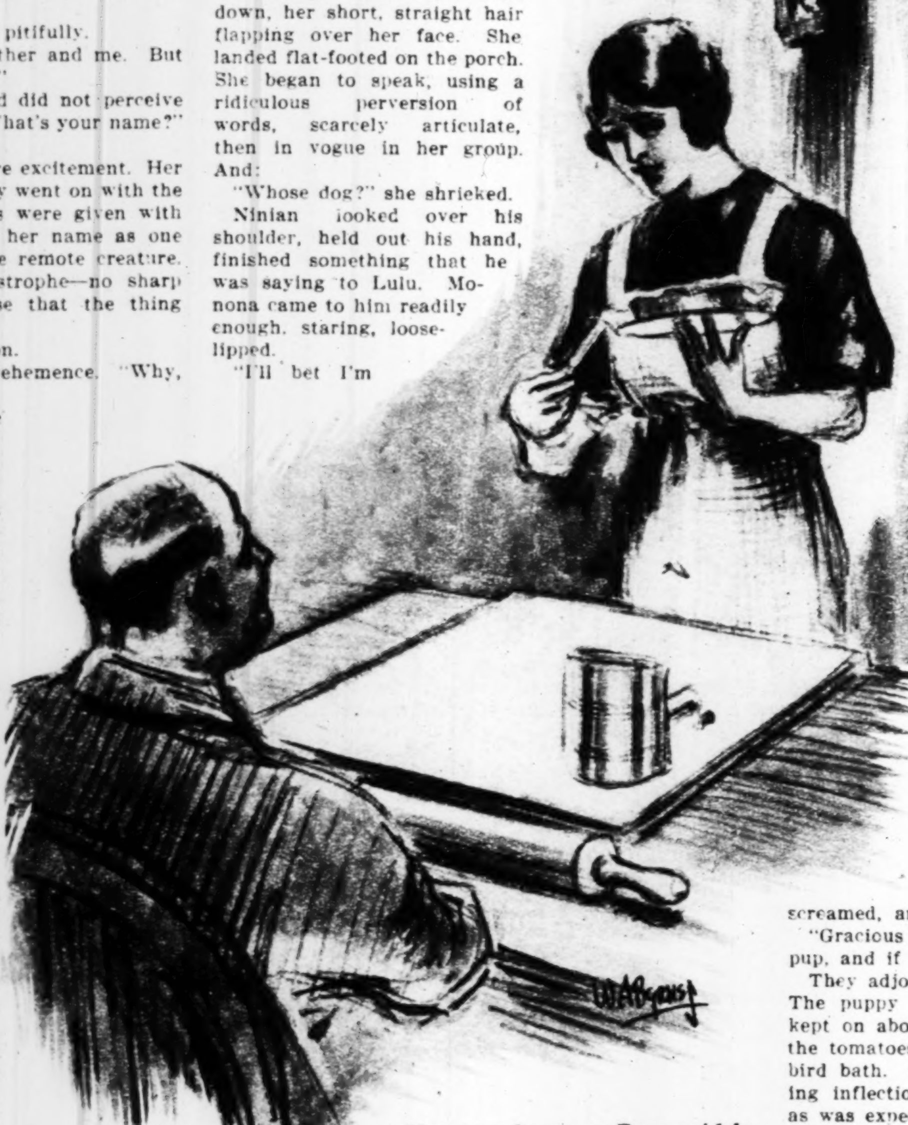
Again he laughed. This laughter was intoxicating to Lulu. No one ever laughed at what she said save Herbert, who laughed at her. "Go it, old girl!" Ninian was thinking, but this did not appear.

The child Monona now arrived, banging the front gate and hurling herself round the house on the board walk, catching the toe of one foot in the heel of the other and blundering forward, head down, her short, straight hair flapping over her face. She landed flat-footed on the porch. She began to speak, using a ridiculous perversion of words, scarcely articulate, then in vogue in her group. And:

"Whose dog?" she shrieked.

Ninian looked over his shoulder, held out his hand, finished something that he was saying to Lulu. Monona came to him readily enough, staring, loose-lipped.

"I'll bet I'm your uncle," said Ninian. Relationship being her highest known form of romance, Monona was thrilled by this intelligence.



"I remember now Bert said he had two of her relatives."

"Give us a kiss," said Ninian, finding in the plural some vague mitigation for some vague offense.

Monona looking silly, complied. And her uncle said my stars, such a great, big, tall girl—they would have to put a board on her head.

"What's that?" inquired Monona. She had spied his great diamond ring.

"This," said her uncle, "was brought to me by Santa Claus, who keeps a jewelry shop in heaven."

The precision and speed of his improvisation revealed him. He had 20 other diamonds like this one. He kept them for those Sundays when the sun comes up in the west. Of course—often! Some day he was going to melt a diamond and eat it. Then you sparkle all over in the dark, ever after. Another diamond he was going to plant. They say—He did it all gravely, absorbedly. About it he was as conscienceless as a savage. This was no fancy spun to pleasure a child. This was like lying, for its own sake.

He went on talking with Lulu, and now again he was the tease, the braggart, the unbridled, unmodified male.

Monona stood in the circle of his arm. The little being was attentive, softened, subdued. Some pretty, faint light visited her. In her listening look she showed herself a charming child.

"It strikes me," said Ninian to Lulu, "that you're going to do something mighty interesting before you die."

It was clear conversational impulse, born of the need to keep something going, but Lulu was all faith.

She closed the oven door on her pies and stood brushing flour away from her fingers. He was looking away from her, and she looked at him. He was completely like his picture. She felt as if she were looking at his picture and she was abashed and turned away.

"Well, I hope so," she said, which had certainly never been true, for her old formless dreams were no intention—nothing but a mush of discontent. "I hope I can do something that's nice before I quit," she said.

Nor was this hope now independently true, but only this surprising longing to appear interesting in his eyes. To dance before him: "What would the folks think of me, going on so?" she suddenly said. Her mild sense of disloyalty was delicious. So was his understanding glance.

"You're the stuff," he remarked, absently.

She laughed happily.

The door opened. Ina appeared.

"Well!" said Ina. It was her remotest tone. She took this man to be a peddler, beheld her child in his clasp, made a quick forward step, chin lifted. She had time for a very javelin of a look at Lulu.

"Hello!" said Ninian. He had the one formula. "I believe I'm your husband's brother. Ain't this Ina?"

It had not crossed the mind of Lulu to present him.

Beautiful it was to see Ina relax, soften, warm, transform, humanize. It gave one hope for the whole species.

"Ninian!" she cried. She lent a faint impression of the double "e" to the initial vowel. She slurred the rest, until the "y" squinted in. Not Neenyun, but nearly Neenyun.

He kissed her.

"Since Dwight isn't here!" she cried, and shook her finger at him. Ina's conception of hostess-ship was definite: A volley of questions—was his train on time? He had found the house all right? Of course! Anyone could direct him, she should hope. And he hadn't seen Dwight? She must telephone him. But then she arrested herself with a sharp, curved fling of her starched skirts. No! They would surprise him at tea—she stood taut, lips compressed. Oh, the Plows were coming to tea. How unfortunate, she thought. How fortunate, she said.

The child Monona made her knees and elbows stiff and danced up and down. She must, she must, participate.

"Aunt Lulu made three pies!" she screamed, and shook her straight hair.

"Gracious sakes," said Ninian. "I brought her a pup, and if I didn't forget to give it to her."

They adjourned to the porch—Ninian, Ina, Monona. The puppy was presented, and yawned. The party kept on about "the place." Ina delightedly exhibited the tomatoes, the two apples trees, the new shed, the bird bath. Ninian said the unspellable "m—m," rising inflection, and the "I see," prolonging the verb as was expected of him. Ina said that they meant to build a summer house, only, dear me, when you have a family—but there, he didn't know anything about that. Ina was using her eyes, she was arch, she was coquettish, she was flirtatious, and she believed herself to be merely matronly, sisterly, womanly. * * *

And Lulu, peeping through the blind.

When "tea" had been experienced that evening, it was found that a light rain was falling and the Deacons and their guests, the Plows, were constrained to remain in the parlor. The Plows were gentle, faintly lustrous folk, sketched into life rather lightly, as if they were, say, looking in from some other level.

"The only thing" said Dwight, "that reconciles me to rain is that I'm let off croquet." He rolled his "r's," a favorite device of his to induce humor. He called it "croquette." He had never been more irrepressible. The advent of his brother was partly accountable, the need to show himself a fine family man and host in a properous little home—simple and pathetic desire.

"Tell you what we'll do!" said Dwight. "Nin and I'll reminisce a little."

"Do!" cried Mr. Plow. This gentle fellow was always excited by life, so faintly excited by him, and enjoyed its presentation in any real form.

Ninian had unerringly selected a dwarf rocker, and he was overflowing it and rocking.

"Take this chair, do!" Ina begged. "A big chair for a big man." She spoke as if he were about the age of Monona.

Ninian refused, insisted on his refusal. A few years more, and human relationships would have spread sanity even to Ina's estate, and she would have told him why he should exchange chairs. As it was she forebore and kept glancing anxiously at the overburdened little beast beneath him.

The child Monona entered the room. She had been driven down by Di and Jenny Plow, who had vanished upstairs and, through the ventilator, might be heard in a lift and fall of giggling. Monona had also been driven from the kitchen, where Lulu was, for some reason, hurrying through the dishes. Monona now ran population is so common that no hope can be entertained for rapid progress in the direction of a national type. But there is a tendency toward a certain strain that will become manifest in time."

"Real American" Type of Man Forming

Dr. Hrdlicka did not take up the effect of the better living that this country has provided for its inhabitants as being a factor in the development of a type, especially as regards physical build and nervous energy. The diversified and abundant diet of the average American has undoubtedly been a great factor in this development. That has been shown repeatedly by scientists, who have often taken the Celtic race as an example of what difference diet can make. In Ireland, for example, the residents of the more genial climate towards the south, where the diet has also been more profuse and liberal, have shown a tendency to large size and great muscular development. Yet on the same island, regions of the extreme north have produced a race as typically Celtic as the others, but much inferior in stature.

Brillat-Savarin, who made a fine art of gastronomy and who wrote a remarkable treatise on the subject of the table after passing through the French revolution, calls attention to this same matter of diet as recognized more than 125 years ago. He said it was generally accepted by the French fishermen that a diet consisting largely of fish affected the stature of the population and also had a tendency to make families run largely to girls in offspring.

In Ireland, the regions where several generations of starvation were experienced and where potatoes formed the chief article of diet, it is not to be wondered at that the effects were manifest on the population. So definite, however, has been the result of the generous diet obtainable in the United States, that even children of foreign parents who were of stunted growth far exceed their progenitors in stature over here. Any person passing through the foreign quarters of large cities can notice how frequently the children born on this side of the water overtop their parents and how much superior is their physical development.

Dr. Bird T. Baldwin, director of the Child Welfare Research Station of the University of Iowa, has found that conditions in this country are so favorable for the development of children that he can prophesy proximately how much a boy and girl will grow. the Congress of Eugenics, he said that a mother measure the height of her 7-year-old child, incre by a third and know within an inch or so the that the child will be at 17. Girls, he said, are to attain the same proportionate height at a sl earlier age than the boys.

Rudyard Kipling, on his trip to this country early '90s, drew his own deductions about the that this population would work out. He spoke admiration of the race that would be evolved fro mixture of the blood of the adventurous fro countries who had flocked to the United State predicted a composite individual, of great nervo ergy, who would wave long, slender hands to a ate his remarks. His picture was a fanciful one, ever, not backed up by the cold figures and stat of Dr. Hrdlicka.

It is too early yet to predict what the America will be. But we are in an age where its nativity least, has been recognized.

cabarets, classical concerts at the Kursaal and bucking the tiger. For while roulette is forbidden by law, the proprietors of the Kursaal open the tables to certain visitors who look as if they had money. And at the Royal Palace Hotel, which also boasts of a theater where a troupe of Russian singers and dancers annoy the paying public, there is a "private" roulette table for certain guests.

According to the printed regulations of the Kursaal, a visitor at Ostend is not admitted to the gambling rooms until he has been there three days. But if you look like an American and are wearing a fried shirt the officials can't write out your admission card fast enough.

Having bucked the jockey ring unsuccessfully in the afternoon and had a hard seat at the Scala, where I witnessed the premiere of "Ostend—Rien ne va Plus" (the worst burlesque show I ever saw in my life), I had no illusions about flirting with the goddess of fortune. I watched a crowd of British sports part with a small ball of francs and, much to the disgust of the Kursaal attendants, took my departure.

At 1:30 the Boulevard Van Iseghem—the main thoroughfare of the town, a block or two from the ocean—was ablaze with lights. Its restaurants, confectionery shops, cabarets and other places of entertainments were running full blast. For, just as at Atlantic City, there are places for those visitors who do not want to pay boardwalk prices.

The plaintive notes of a Hawaiian melody attracted me to the Taverne Holder, a really jolly restaurant, which proved to be the premiere bar de nuit of the town. And as I found a crowd of compatriots at a well-located table on the dance floor, it was only natural that I let nature take its course.

There's nothing the matter with Ostend as a seaside resort except its bathing facilities. My only advice to prospective visitors is to take their morning dip in their bathtubs. And this advice might be improved upon by adding that as far as mere bathing is concerned one might as well remain at home. If I were a Be I might get the Ostend habit—but a American I don't believe in indulg habits that handicap.

to Mrs. Bett, stood beside her and stared about resentfully. Mrs. Bett was in best black and ruches, and she seized upon Monona and patted her, as her own form of social expression; and Monona wriggled like a puppy, as hers.

"Quiet, pettie," said Ina, eyebrows up. She caught her lower lip in her teeth.

"Well, sir," said Dwight, "you wouldn't think it to look at us, but mother had her hands pretty full, bringing us up."

Into Dwight's face came another look. It was always so, when he spoke of this foster-mother who had taken these two boys and seen them through the graded schools. This woman Dwight adored, and when he spoke of her he became his inner self.

"We must run upstate and see her while you're here, Nin," he said.

To this Ninian gave casual assent, lacking his brother's really tender ardor.

"Little," Dwight pursued, "little did she think I'd settle down into a nice, quiet, married dentist and magistrate in my town. And Nin into—say, Nin, what are you, anyway?"

They laughed.

"That's the question," said Ninian

They laughed.

"Maybe," Ina ventured, "maybe Ninian will tell us something about his travels. He is quite a traveler, you know," she said to the Plows. "A regular Gulliver."

They laughed respectfully.

"How we should love it, Mr. Deacon," Mrs. Plow said. "You know we've never seen very much."

Goaded on, Ninian launched upon his foreign countries as he had seen them: population, exports, imports, soil, irrigation, business. For the populations Ninian had no respect. Crops could not touch ours. Soil mighty poor pickings. And the business—say! Those fellows don't know—and, say, the hotels! Don't say foreign hotel to Ninian.

He regarded all the alien earth as barbarian, and he stoned it. He was equipped for absolutely no intensive observation. His contacts were negligible. Mrs. Plow was more excited by the Deacons' party than Ninian had been wrought upon by all his voyaging.

"Tell you," said Dwight. "When we ran away that time and went to the State Fair, little did we think"—— He told about running away to the State Fair. "I thought," he wound up, irrelevantly, "Ina and I might get over to the other side this year, but I guess not. I guess not."

The words give no conception of their effect, spoken thus. For there in Warbleton these words are not commonplace. In Warbleton, Europe is never so casually spoken. "Take a trip abroad" is the phrase, or "Go to Europe" at the very least. And both with empressement. Dwight had somewhat noted and deliberately picked up that "other side" effect, and his Ina knew this, and was proud. Her covert glance about pensively covered her soft triumph.

Mrs. Bett, her arm still circling the child Monona, now made her first observation.

"Pity not to have went while the going was good," she said, and said no more.

Nobody knew quite what she meant, and everybody hoped for the best, but Ina frowned. Mamma did these things occasionally when there was company, and she dared. She never sauced Dwight in private. And it wasn't fair, it wasn't fair——

> ZONA GALE'S story of "Miss Lulu Bett," the faithful but unappreciated household drudge, has a stark realism tempered only by the ironical way in which the story is written. This vitality of the characters and the natural succession of incidents in an interesting plot also dominated the play of the same name, which followed and was based upon the novel now appearing in the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine. The dramatization won the $1000 Pulitzer Prize of Columbia University as the best American play of the year, and has a very successful run in New York to its credit. The novel is being printed in the Sunday Magazine, in serial form. You will enjoy the unfolding of this unusual tale.

The dishes were washed. Lulu had washed them at breakneck speed—she could not, or would not, have told why. But no sooner were they finished and set away than Lulu had been attacked by an unconquerable inhibition. And instead of going to the parlor, she sat down by the kitchen window. She was in her challie gown, with her cameo pin and her string of coral.

Laughter from the parlor mingled with the laughter of Di and Jenny upstairs. Lulu was now rather shy of Di. A night or two before, coming home with "extra" cream, she had gone round to the side door and had come full upon Di and Bobby seated on the steps. And Di was saying:

"Well, if I marry you, you've simply got to be a great man. I could never marry just anybody. I'd smother."

Lulu had heard, stricken. She passed them by, responding only faintly to their greeting. Di was far less taken back than Lulu.

Later Di had said to Lulu: "I s'pose you heard what we were saying."

Lulu, much shaken, had withdrawn from the whole matter by a flat "no." "Because," she said to herself, "I couldn't have heard right."

But since then she had looked at Di as if Di were someone else. Had not Lulu taught her to make buttonholes and to hem—oh, no! Lulu could not have heard properly.

"Everybody's got somebody to be nice to them," she thought now, sitting by the kitchen window, adult yet Cinderella.

She thought that someone would come for her. Her mother or even Ina. Perhaps they would send Monona. She waited at first hopefully, then resentfully. The gray rain wrapped the air.

"Nobody cares what becomes of me after they're fed," she thought, and derived an obscure satisfaction from her phrasing, and thought it again.

Ninian Deacon came into the kitchen.

Her first impression was that he had come to see whether the dog had been fed.

"I fed him," she said, and wished that she had been busy when Ninian entered.

"Who, me?" he asked. "You did that, all right. Say, why in time don't you come in the other room?"

"Oh, I don't know."

"Well, neither do I. I've kept thinking: 'Why don't she come along?' Then I remembered the dishes." He glanced about. "I come to help wipe dishes."

"Oh!" she laughed so delicately, so delightfully, one wondered where she got it. "They're washed"—— She caught herself at "long ago."

"Well, then, what are you doing here?"

"Resting."

"Rest in there." He bowed, crooked his arm. "Senora," he said—his Spanish matched his other assimilations of travel—"Senora. Allow me."

Lulu rose. On his arm she entered the parlor. Dwight was narrating and did not observe that entrance. To the Plows it was sufficiently normal. But Ina looked up and said:

"Well!"—in two notes, descending, curving.

Lulu did not look at her. Lulu sat in a low rocker. Her starched white skirt, throwing her challie in ugly lines, revealed a peeping rim of white embroidery. Her lace front wrinkled when she sat, and perpetually she adjusted it. She curled her feet sidewise beneath her chair, her long wrists and veined hands lay along her lap in no relation to her. She was tense. She rocked.

When Dwight had finished his narration there was a pause, broken at last by Mrs. Bett:

"You tell that better than you used to when you started in telling it," she observed. "You got in some things I guess you used to clean forget about. Monona, get off my rocker."

Monona made a little whimpering sound, in pretense to tears. Ina said: "Darling—quiet!"—chin a little lifted, lower lip revealing lower teeth for the word's completion; and she held it.

The Plows were asking something about Mexico. Dwight was wondering if it would let up raining at all. Di and Jenny came whispering into the room. But all these distractions Ninian Deacon swept aside.

"Miss Lulu," he said, "I wanted you to hear about my trip up the Amazon, because I knew how interested you are in travels."

He talked, according to his lights, about the Amazon. But the person who most enjoyed the recital could not afterwards have told two words that he said. Lulu kept the position which she had taken at first, and she dare not change. She saw the blood in the veins of her hands and wanted to hide them. She wondered if she might fold her arms, or have one hand to support her chin, gave it all up and sat motionless, save for the rocking.

Then she forgot everything. For the first time in years someone was talking and looking not only at Ina and Dwight and their guests, but at her.

Death Ends Martyrdom of American Girl

with the Kurds to stop the wanton practice so enraged them that she was near death.

At Malatia, it was evidently decided that she must not see the end of that particular tragedy. She was placed in a cart with an old Armenian woman and, despite her protests, she was taken to the town itself and confined to a residence there. The Turks apparently did not object to her seeing the murder of persons with whom she was not acquainted, and here it was that she daily saw the processions of the condemned pass her door. Finally, executions were held immediately around the place and the bodies were left there while the dogs and birds devoured them.

When the Turks found that this treatment did not break her iron determination, they decided to remove her to Sivas. She was sent back in a cart with a native driver, who deserted her when in the midst of a Kurdish village. Realizing that some plot was on foot, she seized the reins herself, whipped up the exhausted horses and drove alone to Sivas, just as the Kurds had commenced to gather threateningly around the vehicle.

On arriving at Sivas, she was told that the children of the Swiss orphanage were to be deported. She pleaded with the Vali, who finally agreed to let them remain, this concession probably being made for the sake of effect on the Powers, if news of the other massacres reached them. The Armenian men who had been rounded up in the neighborhood were in a prison camp and Miss Graffam knew only too well what that meant. She tried to lend them such assistance as she could and to give them what little supplies she could collect. But each day a detachment of 50 or 60 was taken from the camp. They would never return, but there would be a tell-tale heap of clothes in a cart that would return from the firing grounds.

It was at this time that one of her charges, who had been a teacher, told of the struggle that was going on in his mind. The Turks had offered him freedom and a position in a Turkish school if he would become a Mohammedan. He remained true to the Christian religion, however, and was taken out to death with the rest.

Finally, one morning when she visited the prison she found it empty. All occupants had vanished, and she knew what their fate had been. By this time she herself had been worn to a skeleton and her nerves were in such a state that she feared to be left alone.

In spite of the murders that had taken place, refugees from other regions commenced to stream in. A belated decree had arrived, granting certain exemptions to Protestants and Catholics and the American orphanage became a refuge for Armenian girls who had escaped the Turkish harems. Miss Graffam had managed to get hold of a small sum of money and she purchased the freedom of some of them from the Turks for a small sum.

The decree prohibited the active slaughter of the Christians, but it did not prevent a slower method of destruction. Armenians were huddled together in compounds and kept without food, on the pretext there was a shortage of supplies. Some of the men, who had been robbed of their clothing by soldiers, were literally almost naked. Their suffering from cold was acute. Miss Graffam enlisted the aid of all the girls in her monastery and made clothes for them out of whatever material she could secure.

The whole series of tragedies was repeated in a different form, however. The Turks enrolled Armenians as soldiers, then sent the regiments to death. At one time, when there was a shortage of men on the front, two entire Armenian regiments are said to have met death without ever being sent to the lines at all. Their deaths were recorded as having occurred in battle.

By this time the work that Miss Graffam was doing was so widely known that they were afraid to make away with her, as they would no doubt have liked to have done. Moreover, the influence of the United States was being felt in the war and this had put a wholesome fear into the Turks.

She was allowed to take over an old building and to set some 200 women and girls at the task of making clothes and sweaters for the destitute. When the presence of Armenian workers in the factory was challenged, she would reply: "They are working for the Government." She was also permitted to take control of a farm on a hill above the town where there was an abundant supply of water. Here she started crops for the starving.

The change of attitude towards her was manifested by the attitude of the German agents of the farm in this deal. The property was part of that belonging to the Kaiser, and the Germans, as soon as they found what turn the war was taking, were only too willing to lease it to her on promise of payment when communication was established with the allies. The Germans probably thought that all German property would be seized anyhow after the end of the war that they could see was coming, and they doubtless figured they were making a particularly shrewd move in leasing the land in advance. These same men had not interfered in any way with the doings of the Turks in the early stages of the war.

As a tribute to her work, soon after the Red Crescent had been awarded to her by the Turkish Government, interned prisoners of war sent a letter to the International Red Cross. The letter stated:

"The noble and unfailing devotion of Miss Graffam to the cause of the destitute and to the prisoners of war was without distinction of race or religion. Prodigious were her benefactions to the sick French, English and Russians, clothing some, giving pecuniary aid to others; no unfortunate one knocked at her door in vain."

When Miss Graffam decided to allow herself to be deported with the Armenians, she faced every fate that was in store for them. She was absolutely in the power of an enemy that wished to get rid of her and was only deterred by a vague fear of what the United States might do—not a strong hindrance at that time, considering the ignorance in which Turkish officials are kept concerning the outside world. Her supplies were taken from her, she was robbed even of necessary clothing by the Kurds. Yet in spite of these drawbacks she made her influence felt in whatever area she was stationed. She showed that the spirit of the old Christian martyr still exists. She was truly faithful unto death.

How Many Pounds Would YOU Like to Lose Next Week?

Three pounds, five pounds, seven pounds, ten pounds! How many? One woman lost thirteen the first week through this remarkable new discovery. Thousands lose from three to seven pounds weekly, without inconvenience.

AN amazing new discovery takes off flesh almost "while you wait," without medicine, starving or strenuous exercise, and without discomfort. Most people begin to lose weight right away. Many see results in 48 hours. Thousands who have used it have reached their ideal weight through this simple new secret.

Yet they have not starved themselves. They have not punished themselves with strenuous exercises or bitter self-denials. They ate food they liked and did pretty much as they pleased, following only the one simple little natural law that has recently been discovered. And their superfluous weight disappeared, melted away—by a rapid, natural, safe process.

"I am glad I tried your way of reducing weight," writes one delighted woman from Montana. "I lost fifty pounds and feel so much better." Still another writes, "I have taken off twenty pounds of my surplus flesh. I find that I am able to reduce just as fast or slow as I desire." And one man who reports that he has always been 25 pounds overweight writes an enthusiastic letter in which he says, "I have reduced my weight 25 pounds without discomfort."

This secret of weight control is not a fad or a theory. It is not an expensive "treatment" or a series of self-sacrifices and painful denials. It's just a simple little natural law that anyone can follow with ease.

You, Too, Can Quickly Reduce to Normal

You can begin right away, the moment you make up your mind, to lose as much weight as you wish. You can so regulate this remarkable new law that has been discovered, that you can reach your ideal weight in a definite time. You can take off as much or as little fat as you please and whenever you please. When you reach your normal, perfect weight you can retain it without gaining or losing another pound.

Some people report that they have reduced at the rate of ten pounds a week. Others take off a pound of fat a day. Some apply this new method so that they reach their ideal weight in a month's time—taking it more gradually. For instance, one man who lives in Hickory, N. C., writes: "I arranged to lose three pounds per week, and by the middle of May I weighed just what I wanted to—175 pounds." Only a short while before he had weighed 205 pounds.

The Secret Explained

It was Eugene Christian, the famous food specialist, who made the discovery of the one safe, certain and easily followed method of regaining normal, healthful weight. He discovered that certain foods, when eaten together, take off weight instead of adding to it! In explaining this discovery Christian has said:

"Fat in the human body is like mercury in a thermometer—it can be raised or lowered, that is, diminished or increased, by combining your foods at meals according to certain simple, natural laws. There is nothing complicated, nothing hard or difficult to understand. It is simply a matter of following directions and learning how to combine foods so that fat is consumed instead of deposited in the body."

Eat Off Flesh by New Method

And now people are actually eating off weight! Men who were formerly so stout that they puffed when they walked quickly, men who had to deny themselves many outdoor pleasures because of their burdensome flesh, report that their return to normal weight and youthful energy was far more rapid than they thought possible. Stout women who always felt tired and listless, who had to deny themselves the colorful, fluffy clothes they would like to wear, marvel that this one simple little rule should enable them to attain their ideal weight so quickly. And not only have they eaten their weight down to normal, but they enjoy their meals more than ever before, they feel refreshed, brightened, strengthened.

A delighted woman writes: "I now weigh 137 pounds—just what I should weigh. I feel so splendid, and everyone says how 'just right' I am."

Remember, you don't have to starve yourself, or follow a rigid starving diet, or put yourself to discomfort through this new method of flesh reduction. You eat off the fat you want to lose, eat it off as quickly or as slowly as you wish.

Before I began losing weight I could not take much exercise, but now I can walk four or five miles a day. I feel better than I have for months."

"Without the treacherous help of cathartics"

A simple food which gradually replaces laxatives

"HE who can control chronic constipation without the treacherous help of cathartics makes a 'booster' of his patient."

This quotation from a doctor's essay on constipation carries a message of great significance to thousands of men and women.

It is now recognized that cathartics never remove the causes of constipation. Indeed, one physician states that the indiscriminate use of cathartics is probably one of the most frequent causes of constipation.

For many years there has been pressing need for some simple food that would help restore normal conditions. And now scientists have discovered it in the familiar little cake of Fleischmann's Yeast.

First came the startling discovery that Fleischmann's Yeast in itself is a wonderful food, rich in the mysterious water-soluble vitamine. Then it was found that Fleischmann's Yeast builds up the body tissues, keeps the body more resistant to disease.

In addition, because of its freshness (you get it fresh daily) Fleischmann's Yeast helps the intestines in their elimination of waste matter. It is by its very nature better suited to the stomach and intestines than the ordinary laxatives, and being a food it cannot form a habit.

Eat 2 to 3 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast a day. Have it on the table at home and on your desk at the office. Eat it plain, spread on bread, or dissolved in milk or fruit juices. You will like its fresh, distinctive flavor and the clean wholesome taste it leaves in your mouth. It is assimilated just like any other food. Only one precaution: if troubled with gas, dissolve yeast first in very hot water. This does not affect its efficacy. Place a standing order with your grocer for Fleischmann's Yeast, fresh daily.

Send 4c in stamps for booklet, "The New Importance of Yeast in Diet." Address THE FLEISCHMANN COMPANY, 701 Washington St., New York, N. Y.

A food with laxative qualities

Fleischmann's Yeast is a corrective food, not a laxative. From 2 to 3 cakes a day added regularly to the diet will not only restore normal functions of the intestines, but will also assure a proper elimination each day. In many cases the amount taken can be reduced as the condition improves. A noted specialist, in his latest book, says of compressed yeast: "It should be much more frequently given in illness in which there is intestinal disturbance, especially if it is associated with constipation."

Beware of new and untested yeast preparations. The name Fleischmann is your protection and guarantee of uniform purity and strength.

Blackheads indicate your cleansing method is wrong

BLACKHEADS indicate that the method you are using is not the right method of cleansing for your type of skin.

A skin specialist would tell you that blackheads are caused by excessive oil collecting dirt in the pores of your skin.

To do away with the cause of blackheads and free your skin from this disfiguring trouble, use the following simple treatment:

APPLY hot cloths to the face until the skin is reddened.

Then with a rough washcloth work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap and rub it into the pores thoroughly, always with an upward and outward motion.

Rinse with clear, hot water, then with cold—the colder the better.

If possible, rub your face for thirty seconds with a piece of ice. Dry carefully.

To remove blackheads already formed, substitute a flesh brush for the washcloth in this treatment. Then protect the fingers with a handkerchief and press out the blackheads.

GET a cake of Woodbury's today, at any drug store or toilet goods counter, and begin this treatment tonight. You will be astonished to see how quickly your skin will improve in clearness.

A 25-cent cake of Woodbury's will last for a month or six weeks. The Andrew Jergens Co., Cincinnati, New York and Perth, Ontario.
